DAIRIES WIN DAY, PERHAPS LONGER, DELAY IN TRIAL

Attorney for Five of 16 Fighting for Continuance, Creates Problem for Courts.

CHANGE OF VENUE ADDS TO SNARL

Assignment of Judges Enters Into Involved Situation; Not Decided Who Will Hear Cases.

Assistant City Counselor Martin Barrow, assigned to prosecute 16 St. Louis milk distributors charged with violation of the city milk ordinance, and Karl P. Spencer, attorney for five of the defendant companies whose cases were set for trial yesterday, spent most of the day in legal fencing over Spencer's motion for a continuance, first in one police court and then in the other.

Spencer at last obtained a continuance, unsatisfactory to him, however, since it was only to tomorrow, but he had created so involved a situation that when court adjourned no one knew who would hear the cases tomorrow.

The cases, set for hearing in Police Court No. 1, where James F. Nangle was sitting as provisional judge, were against the Golden Eagle Dairy, 2337 Gravois avenue; Pioneer Dairy, 2829 Oregon avenue; Valley Springs Dairy, 1331 Arsenal street; Clover Leaf Dairy, 2663 Iowa avenue, and the South Side Consumers' Dairy, 2921 Salena street. Each was charged with adulterating milk with water.

Spencer asked for a continuance, saying that he had not had time to prepare his cases and that his expert witness, Erskine C. Wright, a chemist operating Dairy Laboratories at 2615 Olive street, could not be in court before noon. Police courts usually have adjourned by that hour, particularly on Saturday. Nangle supported Barrow in his contention that Spencer had had two weeks or more to prepare for trial and that it was his responsibility to produce his witnesses.

Turns to Change of Venue.

Overruling Spencer's motion for a continuance, Nangle said he would be ready to hear the case at noon. As noon arrived, Spencer filed an application for a change of venue, alleging Nangle was biased and prejudiced against his clients. Granting of such a motion is mandatory and the cases were sent to Police Court No. 2.

By noon, Police Court No. 2, which handles fewer cases than No. 1, might be expected to have adjourned. Provisional Judge Edward Ruddy, however, had only recessed and announced that he was ready to hear the cases immediately. Spencer said his witness could not be there before late in the afternoon and Judge Ruddy said he would wait.

Spencer then offered the argument that it would require at least two or three days for him to present his defense since he intended to offer about 15 witnesses. He pointed out that yesterday was the last day Ruddy would sit in Police Court No. 2, since Nangle, sitting yesterday in Police Court No. 1, had been appointed permanent judge in No. 2, effective Monday. On agreement by Barrow, the cases were continued to tomorrow.

When the cases are called tomorrow, however, they will again be before Nangle, who had been disqualified by the change of venue application alleging bias and prejudice. Provisional Judge Ruddy has been assigned to sit in Police Court No. 1 tomorrow but the cases will be in No. 2.

There was a difference of opinion as to whether Mayor Dickmann would have to make or approve the appointment of a special judge to hear the cases. Since he is out of St. Louis and will remain away for two weeks or more, it appears possible that Spencer may, in effect, have gained a longer continuance.

Disposition of Other Cases.

The Pevely Dairy Co., charged in two informations with watering milk and in a third with possession of milk not containing the minimum butterfat content, obtained a continuance to Oct. 2 in Provisional Judge Nangle's court Friday. The company was represented by James A. Waechter, chairman of the Board of Election Commissioners, recently retained by the company. He said the company's regular attorney was ill.

Only one of the 33 charges against the 16 milk distributors, made recently by the City Health Department, has been heard. The Valley Farm Dairy, 3147 Iowa avenue, pleaded guilty of adulterating milk with water Aug. 19 and was fined $5. The maximum fine for violation of the milk control ordinance is $500.

Told He Had Cast Ballot But Voted Just the Same

F C. O. Shawweymouth Recounts Experience in Precinct 1 of Ward 5—Wife, Who Was Ill, Also Recorded as Voting.

The device of voting the name of a legally qualified voter instead of that of a phantom was demonstrated in the first precinct of the Fifth Ward on primary election day Aug. 4, when Fred C. O. Shawweymouth appeared at the polls and was told by precinct election officials that he was recorded as already having cast a ballot.

Shawweymouth, however, insisted on getting and finally received a ballot. Inquiring whether his wife, Mrs. Cora Shawweymouth, was properly registered, he was informed that she, too had voted, although Shawweymouth knew that she had not been to the polling place that day, and, in fact, was kept to her room by illness.

"I told those officials plenty," said Shawweymouth, relating the incident yesterday to a Post-Dispatch reporter. "I was serving that day as a deputy election commissioner in the Nineteenth precinct of the Fourteenth Ward, and took time out about 2:30 in the afternoon to come downtown and vote.

Picks Up Own Ballot.

"When I got inside the polling place and told them my name, one of the officials said: 'You've already voted.' I told him not to argue with me, but to give me a ballot. They didn't hand me one right away, so I picked one up off the table, marked it, and then had it numbered and put it in the ballot box.

"Then, I thought I would find out whether my wife was registered so that I could bring her in to vote later in the day if she felt like making the trip. One of the officials told me that she had voted, too, although I knew she hadn't been away from home all day. She has been ill for the last three years and hasn't gone out much.

"After that, I left and went back to the Fourteenth Ward and served the rest of the day as deputy commissioner there. I don't know who the officials in the Fifth Ward were, and don't care, but I know that they weren't going to stop me from voting when I had a right to vote. In fact, when I dropped my ballot in the box one of them said the ballot was being cast under protest, but I told them to forget about that."

At Kinney's Address.

Shawweymouth, erect and vigorous in speech and action although he is nearly 76 years old, is a private investigator and process server. He resides at the St. Francis Hotel, 604 Chestnut street, voting address of State Senator Mike Kinney, Democratic boss of the ward, and many of Kinney's political henchmen.

Many of the most flagrant registration frauds exposed by the Post-Dispatch occurred in this precinct, including a vacant building at 7 Market street from which 56 persons were registered. As has been told, William Warren Burke, Jimmy Miller's candidate for the senatorial nomination against Kinney, failed to receive a single vote in this precinct, although Kinney was recorded as receiving 601.

NEARLY 1000 MOTORISTS ARRESTED IN 6-DAY PERIOD

In 14 Hours Yesterday, 20 Drivers Were Booked for Speeding, 34 for Other Offenses.

Twenty motorists who exceeded the city's 30-mile-per-hour speed limit were arrested by police between 4 a. m. and 6 p. m. yesterday as the drive against traffic law violators on the city streets continued. During the same time 34 other drivers were arrested for other offenses.

This makes a total of 224 speeders and 735 violators of other traffic ordinances arrested since the drive began last Monday.

The 22 inspectors of the Streets and Sewers Department will distribute 10,000 stickers with the numeral "30" printed on them at eight intersections where there are automatic traffic signals starting at 7:30 a. m. tomorrow. The stickers, which can be pasted on the windshield or rear windows of automobiles, are to keep the city's speed limit constantly in the mind of motorists, Director of Streets and Sewers Frank J. McDevitt said.

The stickers will be given out at the following intersections: Grand boulevard at Natural Bridge, Easton, Delmar, Lindell, Market and Gravois, and at Jefferson avenue and Russell boulevard and Kingshighway boulevard and Manchester avenue.

DERN FUNERAL TRAIN STARTS FOR UTAH

Mrs. Roosevelt at Services in Washington—Burial to Take Place Tuesday.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29.—A special train bore the body of Secretary of War George H. Dern to Utah tonight after funeral services attended by high officials of many lands. The train left here at 6:30 p. m. today and is scheduled to arrive in Salt Lake City at 8 a. m. Tuesday.

Mrs. Dern and the secretary's sons and daughters were accompanied on the train by Oliver Grimes, his executive secretary; Attorney-General Cummings, Secretary Roper, Acting Secretary of War Woodring; Admiral William H. Standley, acting Secretary of the Navy; Edward McGrady, acting Secretary of Labor; Gen. Malin Craig, Chief of the Army, and military aids.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt made an unannounced journey from New York to attend the services. She was escorted to the church by Harry H. Woodring, Acting Secretary of War. Members of the cabinet, army officers and foreign diplomats attended the services in Mount Pleasant Congregational Church, where Dern worshipped. The Rev. Russell J. Clinchy, pastor of the church, in his eulogy of Dern, said: "His stature, his outlook upon life, and his contribution to the welfare of mankind made up that type of manhood which is America at her best."

Just before noon an escort from the Sixteenth Brigade transferred the flag-draped casket to the church from the chapel of Walter Reed Hospital, where the Secretary died Thursday.

As the casket was carried from the church following the services, a choir of 50 voices sang "Day Is Dying in the West."

Outside the church a company of infantry and the army band stood at attention, and four army scout cars led the procession from the church to the Union Station. At Union Station the casket was received by a brigade commanded by Brigadier General Charles D. Roberts and composed of infantry, engineers, field artillery and cavalry. A salute of 19 guns was fired. An honor guard, consisting of an officer and 14 men from the sixteenth brigade, accompanied the casket on the train.

The honorary pallbearers Secretary of State Hull, Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, Attorney-General Cummings, Secretary of the Interior Ickes, Secretary of Commerce Roper, Woodring, Gen. Craig, Admiral Standley, McGrady, William Howes, Acting Postmaster-General, and W. R. Gregg, acting Secretary of Agriculture.

President Roosevelt and other officials now touring the Western drouth area will join the group at Salt Lake City for the funeral in the Mormon tabernacle there Tuesday afternoon and military and Masonic burial services at Mount Olivet Cemetery.

PADEREWSKI TAXED ON WILSON STATUE HE GAVE TO POLAND

$61,000 Gift "Estimable Gesture," Treasury Says, but Law Doesn't Except It.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29. — The Treasury has held that Ignace Jan Paderewski's donation of a statue of former President Woodrow Wilson to Poland in 1931 was "an estimable gesture" but that he cannot deduct the cost in paying his income tax. Under the ruling, Paderewski may have to pay an additional income tax of $4101 on the $61,000 he deducted as the cost of the statue.

The matter came to light today with dismissal by the Board of Tax Appeals of an appeal by the pianist, a former Polish premier, because the appeal was not filed by Paderewski or "a proper agent." It was filed by his secretary, Dr. Joseph W. Owlowski of Chicago.

Paderewski personally paid Gutzon Borglum, sculptor, for producing the statue which was presented to the City of Posen, Poland, in 1931. The pianist then deducted the $61,000 expense from his income tax report but the Treasury Department disallowed it in the following language:

"There appears to be no basis under the 1928 revenue act upon which this gift, costing $61,000, may be allowed. It is conceded that it was a most estimable gesture on the part of Mr. Paderewski in his continual efforts to establish a basis for continued friendly relations between his native country and the United States. * * * But there is no provision in law by which it can be allowed, however strong the urge may be to permit this generous act to pass for tax purposes."

HUNGER STRIKE OF MINERS IN POLAND IS SETTLED

Owners Agree to Terms and Men, Who Had Shut Themselves in Pit, Come Out.

By the Associated Press.

MALA DOMBROWSKA, Polish Silesia, Aug. 29.—The hunger strike of Polish miners who remained in a mine for six days, ended tonight when the owners agreed to terms. The miners immediately came to the surface.

They were promised back pay would be granted in part and a satisfactory solution would be found for other disputed claims.

Although there had been rumors food was being smuggled down the shaft, the men who came to the surface were haggard and unkempt and showed evidence of suffering from thirst and hunger.

SOVIET UNION BUILDING 5000 AIRPLANES A YEAR

200,000 Persons Working in Three Shifts, Frenchman Learns on Tour.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Aug. 29.—The Soviet Union is manufacturing 5000 airplanes a year, Louis Breguet, French builder, said today on his return from Russia with the French technical mission.

He said "factories in the Soviet Union are producing 20 times more airplanes, motors, and accessories than France."

He said the factories were equipped principally with English and German machinery and employed about 200,000 working in three shifts.

RUDOLPH SPRECKELS SUED FOR $648,000 IN U. S. TAXES

Sugar Magnate Alleged to Owe Last Installment of 1928 Levy; Two Other Claims.

By the Associated Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Aug. 29.—Assistant United States Attorney Esther Phillips filed a complaint in Federal Court today asking for a tax judgment of $648,485, plus interest, against Rudolph Spreckels, San Francisco financier and sugar magnate.

The money is owing, the Government charged, on 1927-28 income taxes. The complaint stated Spreckels acknowledged a tax liability of $2,007,484 on his income in 1928, paid three quarterly installments but failed to pay the fourth of $501,871.

Later the Government assessed an additional $111,982 against the 1928 income, and alleged he also owed $30,514 on his 1927 income.

By the Associated Press.

OSLO, Norway, Aug. 29. — Thor Solberg, American-Norwegian airman who flew from New York to Norway last year, was seriously injured today when his plane crashed at Voss, near Bergen.

Solberg's legs were broken and he suffered head injuries. Seven passengers in the plane were hurt, one seriously. Solberg, in 1935, flew by easy stages to Bergen. He was accompanied by Paul Oscanyan, radio operator.

NORWAY DOESN'T KNOW WHAT TO DO WITH TROTZKY

No Country Has Shown Any Desire to Admit Him and He Had No Return Visa on Leaving France.

SOVIET DEMANDING HE BE EXPELLED

Bolshevik Exile Under Constant Surveillance, Allowed to Speak to No One but His Wife.

By the Associated Press.

OSLO, Norway, Aug. 29.—Norway studied with grave concern tonight what to do with Leon Trotzky, the exiled Bolshevik "man without a country."

The Soviet Government demanding Trotzky's expulsion said that his continued residence in Norway might endanger friendly relations between the two countries. The request spurred Premier Johan Nygaardsvold to urgent consideration of the problem.

The note from Moscow, demanding the ousting from Norway of the one-time Soviet Commissar of War upset an earlier plan to send him to the "Norwegian Siberia." The historic fortress Nuskholnes on a tiny island off Trodheis, in the North Atlantic, had been mentioned as a suitable place for his internment.

Now, however, officials are perplexed where to send the international "terrorist" who is being held incommunicado and under heavy guard at the home of a friend near Hoenefoss.

No Country Wants Him.

So far no country has shown the slightest desire to harbor the exile and authorities here said they were convinced none was likely to invite him.

"If Trotzky can obtain a permit from another country enabling him to leave Norway we will heartily and gladly get rid of him," said a ministry of justice spokesman.

The Government's difficulties become more confused when officials discovered they lacked apparent authority to order Trotzky out of the country. They learned he had no return visa when he arrived from France last summer and feared, therefore, he would have to remain in Norway unless another haven were offered.

The Justice Ministry declined to elaborate on the problem before it is discussed at a Cabinet meeting Monday. Legal circles, however, doubted the Soviet Government was entitled to demand Trotzky's expulsion because he had been deprived of Russian citizenship.

Trotzky Closely Guarded.

Trotzky himself appeared furious at the treatment accorded him. He shut himself up with his wife in two isolated rooms while sentries paced outside his door.

Police guards kept him under constant surveillance. With the exception of Mrs. Trotzky, he was allowed to speak to no one, was permitted no visitors and was refused permission to make or receive telephone calls.

Various, unconfirmed reports circulated concerning the steps which preceded Trotzky's virtual imprisonment.

What Papers Report.

The Farmer Party's leading newspaper, Nationen, said Trotzky refused to agree to regulations governing his stay and the Cabinet took it as a pretext to intern him and offset censure for harboring him at all.

Another version said the exile's life was endangered by his refusal to abide by the Government's terms and authorities lodged him behind a police guard for his own safety.

Sharp words, the newspaper Aftenposten said, passed between Trotzky and the Minister of Justice before his internment was decreed.

"I am either a prisoner or a free man. If the latter is the case I can sign no new agreements," it quoted him as saying.

Trotzky's two secretaries, expelled from Norway, arrived in Stockholm tonight according to dispatches. They left immediately for Malmo, southern Swedish port. The two, Erwin Wolf and Jan Van Heinort, said they would go to Copenhagen, Denmark, and continue on into the Continent. They were reported to be French citizens.

Arrests and Oustings in Russia Follow Plot Inquiry.

ST. LOUISAN KILLED IN ONTARIO ACCIDENT

Mrs. Helen Williams Fatally Hurt When Auto Is Hit by Railway Car.

By the Associated Press.

SIMCOE, Ont., Aug. 29. — Mrs. Helen Williams of St. Louis died in General Hospital here today of injuries suffered when an automobile in which she was riding was struck by a Lake Erie & Northern radial car near here.

Her daughter, Miss Lydia Williams, who was driving, suffered minor injuries and was also taken to the hospital.

Mrs. Williams, who resided at 6941 Washington avenue, University City, was the widow of Elmer T. Williams, former treasurer of the Graham Paper Co., who died in 1933.

She and her daughter had been in the East visiting friends and were returning through Canada to their summer home at Washington Island, Wis. Besides the daughter, a son, Verne Williams of Kalamazoo, Mich., also survives.

GERMAN IN FRANCE CHARGED WITH FRAUDS OF $6,600,000

Suspect Fled Before Police Raided Residence in Bordeaux, Newspaper Says.

By the Associated Press.

BORDEAUX, France, Aug. 29.—The newspaper La France said today police raided the residence of a German financier charged with frauds of more than 150,000,000 francs (about $6,600,000).

The newspaper said the German, an agent of an international ring which appropriates securities given by clients for "fictitious operations," fled before the raid.

Authorities declined to discuss the case.

FRUIT BATS PUT TO DEATH

Government Refuses to Deliver Them Alive to Zoo.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 29.—Eight East Indian fruit bats, imported for the Staten Island Zoo, were put to death here today by Government officials because of their menace to American crops.

The animals that look like foxes but have a three-foot wingspread, arrived yesterday on the motorship Galveston from Calcutta and Madras. They were chloroformed and their bodies sent to the zoo.

IRUN DEFENDERS HOLD OUT ON FIFTH DAY OF BATTLE

Open Artillery Fire on Spanish Rebels to Forestall Expected Renewal of Attack at Night.

By the Associated Press.

IRUN, Spain, Aug. 29. — Government artillery opened a new bombardment on rebel positions tonight as the battle for possession of this city reached a critical stage.

Loyalist artillery shelled the vanguard of the insurgents at the foot of Mount San Marcial to forestall an expected renewal of the attack from the hills.

With ammunition running low, Government defenders were warned by their commanders to make every bullet count should the rebel columns charge.

Government leaders said the heavy battering the city received Friday from rebel artillery and planes had caused much damage.

They did not announce the number of Government casualties in the fighting on the frontier during the week. Observers, however, placed the dead at thousands.

The Government military command in the city tonight strove to rally the morale of the exhausted populace and fighting forces, worn out by the five days of incessant bombardments.

A rebel airplane dropped three bombs near the Government line near Mount San Marcial without effect.

Calling Out of Reserves Increases Rebel Forces by 50,000.

By the Associated Press.

VALLADOLID, Spain, Aug. 29.—Rebel army ranks were increased tonight as reserves from dismissed military classes responded to a recall from the insurgent high command.

A total of 50,000 reinforcements was expected to be gained with the influx of reservists from the classes of 1934 and 1935, called by Gen. Francisco Franco and Gen. Emilio Mola. The rebels already claimed two-thirds of the regular army of 105,000 men under their command.

Even with this additional strength, however, the insurgent forces, according to Gen. Mola's own estimate, will be outnumbered by the Government, which he said has 250,000 men and women under arms. Women are serving as cooks and nurses behind the rebel lines, but none, he said, has shouldered a rifle.

Insurgent troops, as a general rule, are far better equipped than the Government forces, partly because most of them were recruited from the regular army and partly because the rebels control the national arms manufacturing plant.

Many Government soldiers, on the other hand, fight with shotguns and revolvers and are poorly clothed in contrast to the neat appearance of

MANY HURT IN BOMBING OF MADRID FROM AIR

Rebel Aviator Dives From Great Height, Then Releases Projectiles Which Fall in Streets of Spanish Capital.

WINDOWS BROKEN, HOUSES DAMAGED

Government Receives Credentials of First Soviet Ambassador and Announces Successes Over Fascists.

By the Associated Press.

MADRID, Aug. 29.—Many were wounded here today after a rebel airplane bombed the city proper for the first time. The number of casualties has not been estimated by Government officials who said physical damage to the city had been only slight.

The rebel airmen had made raids in the vicinity of Madrid three times previously but today's bombardment was the first in which they had actually exploded bombs on Madrid streets.

A rebel plane flew first over the city at a great height, then dived. It pulled up only a few hundred feet up and loosed its cargo of projectiles.

Strollers on Madrid's streets fled in confusion for underground shelter as the bombs exploded in the garden of the War Ministry.

Holes were ripped in the ground and hundreds of windows in the Bank of Spain, the postoffice and other buildings, including one in the Associated Press Bureau, were shattered.

Government planes immediately went into the air against the attacking plane, which fled to safety.

Citizens Fire on Own Planes.

Government planes circled the city in wide arcs tonight, on the lookout for aerial enemies.

Several excited citizens mistook the Government planes for rebels and fired at them with rifles until told of their mistake.

As comparative calm returned to the debris-strewn streets, the first Soviet Ambassador to Spain presented his credentials at the presidential palace. He was escorted there by presidential guards in red plumed helmets. Speeches were made stressing the desire for closer relations between the "liberal" governments of the two nations.

Government officials announced additional victories throughout the day. In the province of Cordoba, they said, 300 peasants armed with only six rifles and a few bombs had driven off a force of 400 rebels. Rebel forces near Montilla, it was announced, broke before an attack by Government planes. The rebels, the Government said, were carting off their dead in truckloads after this encounter.

Claims of Victories.

The Government claimed the capture of Vinacelte and Letux, towns near Belcite.

(This was presumed to be Belchite, near Zaragoza, in Northeastern Spain.)

The administration said 400 rebels were killed in the loyalist drive on these points.

Government fighters who surrounded Huesca, the official statement said, killed 35 rebels and captured 19 when a column of insurgents made a sortie from the city.

Near Almudevar, in the eastern sector, a body of rebels was dispersed by an aerial attack in which 30 armored trucks loaded with munitions and troops were reported destroyed, the Government declared.

Arrests in Madrid.

Police squads rounding up Fascists and their sympathizers in Madrid reported the discovery of a large quantity of arms and ammunition as well as revolutionary documents and maps at the home of Commander Miguel Cabanellas Gomez, a cousin of Gen. Miguel Cabanellas, president of the rebel junta at Burgos. Commander Cabanellas Gomez had been held as a suspect since the beginning of the war.

Police asserted they found a long-sought radio station which they said had been broadcasting false reports of the civil war. Alberto and Fernando Castilla, brothers, were arrested as the operators of the station. Ignacio Arevalo, who police charged was a Fascist organizer, also was arrested.

ROOSEVELT TALKS ABOUT DROUTH TO DAKOTA CROWDS

Tells People at Pierre and Rapid City He Will Do All He Can to Meet Problem.

CAVALRY, INDIANS GREET PRESIDENT

Executive Going to Mount Rushmore Tomorrow; Would Spend Money to Save Money.

By the Associated Press.

RAPID CITY, S. D., Aug. 29.—President Roosevelt, on arriving here this evening for his last stop in the Dakotas during his personal drouth inspection trip, promised thousands of citizens of this city and surrounding country to "do everything so far as the Government is concerned" to co-operate in "trying to remedy" the drouth problem. He talked to the crowd on leaving his special train for an open automobile.

Mr. Roosevelt came to Rapid City for a quiet Sunday and remarked he was "looking forward to a delightful day tomorrow, driving up into the Black Hills." There, in the afternoon, he will view the gigantic Mount Rushmore National Memorial, where the figures of Washington, Jefferson, Lincoln and Theodorse Roosevelt are being carved high on a stony peak.

Mr. Roosevelt planned to attend church first at the Rapid City Episcopal Church, of which the Rev. Jerome Pipes is rector.

Cavalry and Indians.

A troop of cavalry from Fort Meade, its band playing and bugles sounding, stood at attention at the station as the President arrived. A line of automobiles took his official party through downtown streets between lines of applauding people.

Sioux Indians, in colorful dress, from the Duhamel Indian Pageant and the Pine Ridge (S. D.) reservation, awaited Mr. Roosevelt at a hotel, where he stopped for the night and filed by to shake his hand.

Over an Indian rug runner, the President entered the building where more people packed the lobby and gave him a noisy ovation.

He had remarked from the rear platform of his train that he was "glad to see such courage" among the residents of the two Dakotas affected by drouth.

"I've had a wonderful two days in the Dakotas," he said, "seeing at first hand some of the things I've read about."

Conference on Train.

After a look at Government work-relief projects and scorched farm land, Mr. Roosevelt today conferred aboard his special train at Pierre with Governors Berry of South Dakota and Miller of Wyoming, on Mid-West drouth conditions and relief.

The object of the conferences, the President said, was to insure continued Federal-State co-operation in the long-range approach to the drouth problem.

Senator Bulow (Dem.), South Dakota; O'Mahoney (Dem.), Wyoming, and Carey (Rep.), Wyoming, also sat in on the conferences along with Secretary Wallace, WPA Administrator Harry L. Hopkins, CCC Director Robert Fechner and other Federal and State officials.

Some of the conferees said afterward the President had agreed that 500 to 600 boys from drouth families might be enrolled in CCC camps in Wyoming if they were available. They added that neither Gov. Berry nor other State officials had asked for similar expansion of the CCC in South Dakota.

Reservoirs and CCC Aid.

O'Mahoney said: "We had a very satisfactory conference, discussing water conservation and related matter. It was generally agreed that the Resettlement Administration and the WPA should work together for the development of a series of reservoirs in Wyoming." He said the expansion of CCC enrollment might permit filling up a camp at Farson, Wyo.

Fechner said that youths might enlist in the CCC now only if they were receiving public welfare aid but that it was "anticipated the drouth will put many in that class." Boys will be permitted to enlist, he said, if the Resettlement Administration or WPA certifies they have been receiving relief. WPA Administrator Metz of Wyoming, Fechner said, doubted new enrollments because of drouth would reach the 500 or 600 mark.

Spending to Save Money.

Again, in a talk at Pierre to a cheering crowd around the rear platform of his train, Mr. Roosevelt repeated the necessity for co-operation in solving drouth troubles and for spending money to save money, if need be.

The President repeated that "on the long range program the principal thing is better land use." Then, stressing need for co-operation between local, county, State and Federal Governments, he added:

"Unless we do it, we may lose a very large investment, not only of money but human beings. If it costs $1,000,000 to save $10,000,000, I think it is worthwhile."

An hour's motor trip in the morning took Mr. Roosevelt and his official party past a national guard armory, a courthouse and a frame mansion being built for Gov. Berry with WPA assistance.

Then the motorcade swung out into the Missouri River bottom land. The cars turned down a dusty gravel road and crossed over to Farm Island, a 2000 - acre forested track owned by the City of Pierre. Once it stood in the middle of the Missouri. But a crew of CCC workers have thrown up a dike 31 feet high which shunted the main channel of the river aside and hooked the island to the shore.

At a CCC camp in the middle of the island, where the enrollees in prim lines received a friendly wave, the President chatted with Mayor J. E. Hipple of Pierre and Capt. F. B. Milson, in charge of the camp. He wanted to know all about the dike.

Fechner remarked Army engineers had said it could not be built.

"And they built it," the President said, looking toward the CCC boys. "It's a great job you're doing here," he told Milson.

The Three-Fold Problem.

Back once more on his train, at Piere the President was introduced to a platform crowd by Gov. Berry as "our friend and our President."

The President asserted again that the drouth problem was really three-fold:

1. Providing immediate relief to those who need it.
2. Helping thousands of families through the winter until "the Lord sends more rain in the spring."
3. Working out a long-time program designed not to depopulate the drouth regions but to permit an increase in their population and prosperity.

Mentioning the large number of children in the throng before him, the President remarked that planning ahead was necessary for their sake.

Smiling down at the boys and girls, he brought a cheer when he added: "I might call this a great Roosevelt state. I'm firmly convinced you are going through this thing with me and build for the furture."

CONGRESSMAN LUNDEEN TO RUN FOR SENATE

Put on Ballot by Minnesota Committee in Place of Late Gov. Olson.

By the Associated Press.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Aug. 29.—Congressman Ernest Lundeen of Minneapolis, was chosen tonight by the Farmer-Labor party State Central Committee as its candidate for the United States Senate to go on the November election ballot in place of the late Gov. Floyd B. Olson.

Lundeen already was the party's candidate for re-election to Congress from the Third Minnesota District, and the committee will select another candidate for Congress.

Prior to the action on Lundeen, the committee members agreed informally that the candidate selected should support President Roosevelt.

TWINS' NATIONAL CONVENTION

Pairs from All over the Country Gather at Fort Wayne.

By the Associated Press.

FORT WAYNE, Ind., Aug. 29.—There were "look-alikes" galore here tonight after several hundred persons came in for the fifth annual convention of the National Association of Twins. The purpose of the gathering is simply social.

Edward M. Clink of Silver Lake, who founded the association, has seen attendance at the conventions increase from 24 to several hundred. Association officials estimated thousands would attend the official opening of the convention tomorrow, for the twins had planned to bring their families. After a parade of the twins tomorrow prizes will be awarded to the most identical twins, to the twins coming from the greatest distance and to the most attractive twins between the ages of 15 and 20.

ed and thrown out of the party. His former assistant, E. Dreitzler, was one of those executed as an anti-Communist plotter.

Manager Amogebeli of the State Dramatic Theater resigned. He, with the playwright, Afinogenev, and the former editor, Gronsky, of the Government newspaper in Moscow, Izvestia, were recently accused of having known the schemes of R. Pickel, another of those executed, without reporting them.

Pickel was once the manager of the Kamerny Theater, one of the best known in Moscow, and its whole management now is in hot water because Pickel allegedly used it as a screen for Trotzkyite activities. The Writers' Union also is under Government suspicion because it did not throw Pickel out until after the trial began.

Arrests at Teachers' College.

Arrests have been made of some of the staff of the Pedagogical Institute at Leningrad and some employes of the Department of Education. The Teachers' College was said to have been a center of Trotzkyist activities.

It was denied, officially however, that Alexander Ozersky, commercial attache at London, had been recalled. Rumors here had said Ozersky was to be replaced, but this was denied, as well as reports linking him in anti-Government activities with Gregory Sokolnikov, former Ambassador to London, and Gen. V. Putna, military attache there.

The Soviet message did not ask for Trotzky's return to Russia, but made it plain that refusal to banish him would prejudice good relations between Moscow and Oslo.

Expects No Delay.

"The Soviet Government expects the Norwegian Government will not delay measures to deprive Trotzky of further refuge on Norwegian territory," said the terse note handed to the Norwegian Foreign Minister by the Russian representative in Norway.

Extension of Trotzky's asylum, the Russian Government contended, would violate an international treaty against harboring of terrorists. The confessions of 16 men, executed earlier this week, charged Trotzky was the arch-conspirator in their plot to assassinate Stalin, plunge Russia into a reign of terror and overthrow the Communist Government.

The trial, the note asserted, confirmed "that Trotzky, who is living in Norway, is the organizer and leader of terroristic activities designed to kill members of the Soviet Government." It charged the assassination of Sergei Kirov, a Soviet official, in 1934 was abetted by Trotzky who "gave detailed instructions to his followers in the U. S. S. R."

Cites King Alexander Killing.

"Notifying the Norwegian Government of these facts," the note continued, "the Soviet Government believes further granting of asylum to Trotzky, organizer of terroristic activities, would be to the detriment of existing friendly relations between Norway and the U. S. S. R. and in contravention of international principles.

"In this connection we refer to the killing of King Alexander of Yugoslavia and Louis Barthou (French Foreign Minister) which led to a discussion in the League of Nations Council in December, 1934, when it was decided friendly government should help each other to fight terrorism and it was considered desirable to conclude an international convention.

"The U. S. S. R. expects the Norwegian Government will not fail nor delay in taking measures to deprive Trotzky of further refuge."

the majority of the rebel troops.

The loyalists are better paid than the rebels, particularly in the Irun-San Sebastian area. Government soldiers receive 10 pesetas (nominally $1.36) a day, although frequently they are paid in notes which cannot be changed into cash immediately.

Various pay scales prevail on the rebel side. Troops from the regular army get one peseta a day, while Fascist and Carlist militia are paid three pesetas. The higher paid insurgents, however, get notes which they can exchange sometimes for merchandise, but which are not convertible into cash.

PARIS, Aug. 29.—The Marine Ministry announced today 20 units of the French navy, including four cruisers, a plane carrier and 13 destroyers were cruising Spanish waters. French warships, the Ministry said, have evacuated about 3200 refugees, including many Americans, and French merchantmen have removed approximately the same number from Spain.

NO ANNOUNCEMENT BY PARK ON ST. LOUIS ELECTION BOARD

Governor, Back from Washington, Receives Additional Information on Registration.

JEFFERSON CITY, Aug. 29.—Gov. Park, back at his office today, after a business trip to the national capital, told reporters there would be no announcement over the week-end on whether he would make changes in the personnel of the St. Louis Election Board.

Election Commissioner Joseph W. Hannauer, Democrat, said to a Post-Dispatch reporter that the Election Board sent to Gov. Park yesterday "additional information" requested by the Governor in connection with his investigation of the registration frauds exposed by the Post-Dispatch.

Hannauer declined to say what the additional information included. The Board has already sent the Governor data on how many of the 46,252 persons "not found" in the Board's recanvass of the June 18 registration registered in September, 1932, under supervision of the previous board, appointed by Gov. Caulfield, as well as information on how many of those registered in 1932 could be found in directories of that year or subsequent years.

ROOSEVELT AGAIN, SAYS GLASS

"Silly to Ask Me if I'm Going to Support President."

LYNCHBURG, Va., Aug. 29.—Senator Carter Glass, who was a guest tonight of the Young Democratic Clubs of the Sixth Virginia District, declared that in his opinion President Roosevelt would be returned to the White House for another four years.

Referring to the national ticket, Glass continued: "It seems silly to me to be asked every time I go to Washington whether I'm going to support the President of the United States. Why, it would be more logical, I think, if they'd ask whether the President is going to support me, for he is the one, if any, to be aggrieved because I differed with him."

PLEBISCITE POSSIBLE ON RESTORING KING

Spanish Rebel Generals at Burgos Confident of Their Speedy Victory.

By ROBERT B. PARKER JR.
(Copyright, 1936, by the Associated Press.)

WITH REBEL ARMY, Burgos, Spain, Aug. 29.—Gen. Emilio Mola and Gen. Miguel Cabanellas of the Fascist rebel high command today told this correspondent the war "wouldn't last very long" and then when it was over—with the rebels triumphant—Spain would be placed under a unified, central government.

"Do you intend to restore the monarchy?" Gen. Cabanellas was asked. "You may be sure the armies of the Spanish patriots which will have reconquered Spain will make the final decision," he replied. "We forsee a plebiscite."

"How long do you think the war will last?" "Not very long," Gen. Mola said. "It has only lasted as long as it has because a large part of the population in Government territory is ignorant of the real situation."

"What plans have you for the new Spanish State?" "Spain will be governed in a fashion which will make it impossible for power ever again to fall into the hands of dirty politicians, Freemasons, Jews and similar parasites on human society," replied Gen. Cabanellas.

"Do you believe the present military deadlock could result in splitting Spain into two parts?" "That would be absolutely impossible. The whole country will join our sacred enterprise as soon as we are a nation free from Marxist tyranny."

"When do you expect the fall of Madrid and San Sebastian?" "A soldier doesn't like to make prophecies," said Gen. Mola, "but I can predict the fall of San Sebastian almost immediately. The last part of the drive on Madrid will begin when the ring around the city is completed by the wedge of white (rebel) armies driven between Barcelona and Madrid and when the southern forces move into positions corresponding to those of the northern armies."

"How strong are the Madrid Government troops?" "You cannot call them troops. Our enemy is a strange company of ordinary criminals, anarchists, Communists, illiterates and women. They are assisted by third-class soldiers and some officers who are professional traitors. Under such circumstances it is difficult to make any estimate, but I believe we must expect 250,000 more or less armed rabble."

"You repeatedly attack the French Government. Do you think it is not observing strict neutrality?" "None can deny we take French prisoners every day," answered Cabanellas. "We know that planes, munitions and war materials are flowing over the frontier to our enemy."

"Do the insurgents have enough money to continue the war?" "The National (Rebel) Government controls two-thirds of Spain. Of 60 branches of the Bank of Spain, we hold 40. We count upon the generosity of all patriots and upon the credit which sure victory gives us in certain foreign countries."

"What kind of fighting do you believe most effective—artillery, infantry, or aviation?" "Aviation is more important than any other, despite the fact we didn't use it until now wilth full force," Gen. Meola replied.

Stakhanovites Ending First Year With Great Burst of Production

Russian Workers Forego Day of Rest to Add to Records in Factory, Mine and Field on Anniversary Tomorrow.

By the Associated Press.

MOSCOW, Aug. 29.—Soviet workmen tonight prepared to forego their day of rest to increase their output in celebration of the first anniversary of the Stakhanovite movement Aug. 31.

Already tuned to a high emotional pitch by newspaper campaigns, the workers tonight were informed of new production records established by followers of the movement. It was announced that a coal miner named Ochkovsky had mined 37 times the normal amount, earning 406 rubles; a worker laid 2030 bricks in one day; another lasted 4150 pairs of shoes in a day.

Brigades of fishermen at Kamchatka vowed to catch at least 1500 tons of fish on the day of celebration.

Meanwhile, L. Paperny, Comissar of Agriculture, announced that the grain harvest in the Ukraine had surpassed the 1935 yield.

Story of Movement.

The Stakhanovite movement dramatizes the nationwide campaign to increase production. It is to the second five-year plan what the famous slogan "Five years' work in four" was to the first.

Alexi Stakhanov, an unknown worker last year in the Central Irmino coal mine in the Don basin, is the hero of the movement which has today enlisted millions of workers.

On Aug. 31 last he turned in a particularly brilliant day's output of coal, far above the average for a day's work. The Soviet comissars, seeking a new inspiration to stimulate the lagging production campaign, found in Stakhanov the answer to their prayers.

Without delay he was taken up by the press and became a national idol. Stalin summoned him to the Kremlin and conferred on him the nation's highest honor, the Order of Lenin. Quick to take the cue, ambitious workers throughout other industries began to organize Stakhanovite movements, and to turn in record performances.

The Government as a reward established the Order of Stakhanovites, to which workers who had performed brilliantly were admitted. Material rewards, too, were provided.

Stakhanovites began to draw higher salaries. They had first choice on better living quarters. In some cases they were provided with automobiles and made lecturers to inspire other workers.

Bank accounts are allowed now and Stakhanovites are busy building up their accounts just as they build up new production records in their factories.

Extended to Farming.

The effect soon was apparent in national production. It spread to agriculture. Hundreds of milkmaids came to Moscow in February to receive decorations for increasing the average milk yield of cows. Other farmers were rewarded for record egg production, while pig, horse and cattle breeders were singled out for honors.

Today two Stakhanovites in the Ukraine are engaged in a contest to harvest a record number of acres of wheat in a single season with combines.

Factories have launched Stakhanovite weeks and drives, during which the entire plants are speeded up in an effort to break all previous records.

A Stakhanovite named Bussygin, working as an ironsmith of the Gorky automobile plant, set a world record recently by stamping 1352 crankshafts in one shift. The norm was 525.

Stakhanovite Pastushok, employed at the Kiev shoe factory, set another record when ne lasted 3120 pairs of men's boots in one shift, as against a norm of 960 pairs.

Stakhanovism, led by Stakhanov himself, has spread to the Soviet defense system. He recently declared Stakhanovites would contribute aviators, parachutists and marksmen to the defense of the Far Eastern frontiers in case of necessity, and, lending emphasis to his words, organized a defensive brigade at his coal mine. Thousands of other Stakhanovites quickly entered active volunteer training.

Chicagoans Seek to Produce Serum for Treatment of Rare Type of Blood Poisoning.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Aug. 29.—The father and mother of Phillip Levitt, 7 years old, received injections of streptococcus germs tonight in an effort to produce a serum that may save their son from a rare form of blood poisoning.

Inoculation of the parents, Mr. and Mrs. Morris Levitt, was reported by Dr. Morris Fishbein, editor of the Journal of the American Medical Association. Blood offered by 50 other persons proved unsuitable for the purpose, Dr. Fishbein said.

The lad's disease—the specific viridans type of streptococcus infection—is "almost always fatal,"—Dr. Fishbein declared. The only way to combat it is to take blood from a newly recovered victim of the germ, he explained, and such victims are rare because of the high mortality rate.

Offers of blood came from as far away as St. Paul, Minn., and Jefferson City, Mo.

CONFERENCE PROPOSED ON WAR RULES IN SPAIN

11 Nations Invited to Discuss Exchange of Prisoners and Other 'Humanizing' Plans.

By the Associated Press.

SAINT JEAN DE LUZ, France, Aug. 29.—Eleven nations were invited tonight by a group of foreign diplomats to discuss plans for "humanizing" the Spanish civil war. Invitations were sent by Daniel Garcia Mansilla, Argentine Ambassador to Spain and the dean of the Madrid diplomatic corps, after consultation with other diplomats and representatives of the Fascist rebels and Madrid Socialists.

Countries invited were Great Britain, France, Germany, Italy, Belgium, Norway, The Netherlands, Sweden, Czechoslovakia, Poland and Argentina. Three points will be discussed: Exchange of prisoners, organization of Red Cross and sanitary facilities on a large scale and preservation of historic monuments.

It was suggested a committee be formed of five or seven men of world prominence in science, law and education. Presidency of such a commission, it was understood, would be offered to Carlos Saavedra Lamas, Argentine Foreign Minister. On the tentative list of committee members were Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University in New York; Francisco de la Barra, President of Mexico in 1911, and Prof. Gilbert Murray of the League of Nations Committee on intellectual co-operation.

The international committee, it was explained, would be formed somewhat along the lines of the Red Cross during the World War.

At the conference leading up to the decision, four Basque Fascist rebels from Navarre and four Basque representatives of the Madrid Government met with Ambassadors from Germany, Italy, Uruguay and Argentina.

Claude G. Bowers, American Ambassador, and the British and French Ambassadors were not present because of their contention that meeting with the rebels would be tantamount to giving them recognition.

TIFF INJUNCTION SUIT TRANSFERRED TO FARMINGTON

Change of Venue to St. Francois County Granted at Request of Miners at Potosi.

DATE OF HEARING STILL TO BE SET

Warrants for Eight Union Men Issued in Connection With Stoning of Workers at Cadet.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

POTOSI, Mo., Aug. 29.—Circuit Judge Taylor Smith of Farmington, St. Francois County, will hear, at a date he will fix later, the injunction suit of the National Pigments & Chemical Co. against interference with its operations by the Washington County tiff miners' union, as a result of a mandatory change of venue granted here today by Circuit Judge E. M. Dearing.

Counsel for the union filed an affidavit alleging that Judge Dearing was prejudiced and that the plaintiff corporation exerted an undue influence over him. This made it necessary for the Court to grant the change of venue. He refused a request to disqualify himself voluntarily, made by the lawyers for the union, George E. Duemler, Socialist nominee for Governor, and Victor Harris, both of St. Louis. The union has called a strike intended to restrict operators to the purchase of union-mined tiff.

The affidavit of prejudice was made by George Cole of Denver, Colo., organizer for the International Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers' Union, who has been here for several weeks aiding in the development of the local branch, the Washington County Tiff Workers' Council.

New Restraining Order.

Defendants in the injunction suit were the international union and 44 individuals, nearly all union leaders or members, including Cole. Thirty-seven of the individual defendants were summoned to the hearing, some of the others having left the county.

Counsel appearing for the company were George T. Priest, a member of the St. Louis Police Board; Samuel Richeson of Potosi, Probate Judge of Washington County, and Harry Smith of Farmington. The company lawyers were asked by Judge Dearing where they wanted the case transferred and they selected the neighboring St. Francois County, in the lead belt. Defense counsel complained because they were not consulted likewise in the selection.

At Priest's request, the Judge signed a new temporary restraining order, to be effective until the coming hearing to show cause why a temporary injunction should not be issued. The original restraining order, issued Monday, the day after the strike began, ran until today.

Defense Plea Denied.

It was argued fruitlessly by the defense that, in the circumstances, the original order would have continued in effect and that the Judge, having already granted the change of venue, had no right to take further action. Judge Dearing replied: "We do not propose to have civil warfare in this county." A defense request for Judge Dearing to set the date for the hearing was denied, but the Court ordered the clerk to forward the records to Farmington today, if possible.

Attorney Duemler told the Judge that a motion for a new trial was pending under the permanent injunction granted by Judge Dearing last year to the National Pigments & Chemical Co. as the outgrowth of a strike by the American Workers' Union, former organization of the tiff miners. The Judge answered that he had denied the new trial yesterday or Thursday. Duemler protetsed that he had not been notified of this decision but the Judge insisted that he had been. Duemler announced he would appeal.

An orderly audience of about 350 persons, mostly tiff miners, filled the court room to capacity.

Warrants for Eight.

Warrants were issued today by Justice of the Peace James Whitehead, on application of Prosecuting Attorney John Eversole, charging eight union leaders and members with felonious assault in connection with an altercation Tuesday between about 300 strike pickets and 42 employes entering the Cadet plant of the Superior Mineral Co., second largest operator in the district. The warrants were sworn to by Fred Isgriggs at the instance of attorney and investigators for the National Pigments & Chemical Co., the principal operator. Isgriggs was one of the employes who was stoned.

Sheriff Steve Richards expected to serve the warrants some time today. The date for the hearing has not been set.

Defendants under the warrants are: A. H. Schrum, president of the County Union Council; John Miller, captain of strike pickets; Ben F. Boyer, Amos Carter, Neacy Bourbon and James Pat Johnson, who were among defendants in the injunction case; also Walter Bollinger and W. R. Cunningham.

Tiff Deliveries Light.

The National Pigments & Chemical Co. received only a fraction of its usual supply of freshly mined tiff this week from the comparatively few non-union miners. Other operators who have not signed union contracts got none, but a St. Clair jobber with a union contract has been buying and reselling much more than his average volume for the past four weeks. It was anticipated that services of about 300 union miners would be required next week to supply him with about 80 truck loads to fulfill orders for five freight car loads.

Light picketing of the National and Superior processing plants continued the latter part of this week. Mayor Otis L. Loomis of Potosi issued a statement today on the possibility that the National company might remove its plant to Georgia or close "because of labor trouble" and telling of the economic value of the business to the county.

TAXICAB DRIVER ROBBED OF $3 AND MACHINE BY TWO MEN

Pair Pose as Fares, Then Force Operator to Drive to Alley; Auto Recovered.

Martin Cibulka, a driver for the Yellow Taxicab Co., was robbed of $3 by two men last night whom he picked up as fares at Grand boulevard and Easton avenue.

The men said they wanted to go to Third and St. Charles streets. When they got to Easton and Leffingwell avenues one of the men leaned forward and put a hard object on Cibulka's neck and said: "This is a holdup. Drive like we tell you."

They ordered him to drive to an alley between Delmar boulevard and Franklin avenue west of Garrison avenue. Here Cibulka was told to get out of the cab. The robbers took the $3 and his cap and then drove away in the cab. An hour later police found the cab abandoned in the 3000 block of Thomas street.

AUTO, SIDESWIPED ON ROAD, TURNS OVER; YOUTH INJURED

New Truxton, Mo., Boy Gravely Hurt After Car Hits Machine Driven by Pastor.

Clem Calvin, 19 years old, of New Truxton, Mo., was seriously injured at 9:45 o'clock last night, in a highway collision near Hawk Point, Lincoln County. His automobile, which he was driving toward Troy, and the car owned and driven by the Rev. Mr. Woods, pastor of the Methodist Church at Warrenton, had a side-swiping collision which caused Calvin's car to overturn in a ditch.

Calvin's chest was crushed. He was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital, St. Charles.

Richard Reese, 14-year-old son of Mrs. Josephine Reese, 5630 Pershing avenue, suffered a skull injury, a fractured ankle and bruises yesterday when struck by an automobile when crossing Locust street at Ewing avenue. He was taken to City Hospital, where it was said his condition was serious.

The driver of the car, who said he was Eugene Sweeney, 793 Bayard avenue, told police that the boy darted into the path of his car from behind a bus which was making a stop for passengers at the intersection.

EX-CONVICT ESCAPES BY SECOND-STORY LEAP

Flees Handcuffed From Hospital After Jump Out Window; Robbery Suspect.

Raymond Lynn, 33-year-old ex-convict identified Friday as a drug store robber, jumped while handcuffed from a second-floor room at City Hospital yesterday afternoon and escaped by running north on Fourteenth street. A doctor, a nurse, a policeman and two other prisoners were in the room at the time.

The nurse, Miss Thelma Sheridan, told City Hospital officials that Lynn was standing near a window just after Dr. Clifford Bockelman had finished an examination of him and the other two prisoners. She said that when she started toward him with some medicine, he turned suddenly and leaped through the window. He had been taken to City Hospital from the Central District holdover after complaining of feeling ill.

He had been arrested Wednesday in front of the Municipal Courts building as he came from the Court of Criminal Correction where he had been making bond on a charge of carrying a concealed weapon. Later he was identified by the manager and cashier of a drug store at 2714 Cherokee street as the man who had held up the store on July 22 and escaped after taking $60 in cash.

Lynn plead guilty on March 25, 1930, to a charge of impersonating a police officer and taking $120 and 10 dresses from a house at 4159A Delmar boulevard after making a search of the premises. He was sentenced to 10 years in the penitentiary.

Four days later, while waiting to start serving his sentence, Lynn was taken to one of the judge's chambers of the Court of Criminal Correction where he and Mrs. Clara Spangler were married.

Zeller Aubuchon, 4256 North Broadway, told police yesterday that while he and a friend were sitting on the west bank of the Mississippi River near Ferry street, he saw a man jump from the middle of the first span of the Merchants' Bridge about 200 feet from shore.

Aubuchon said the man came to the surface after striking the water and swam about 500 feet before he sank from sight. The man was described as wearing a white shirt and dark trousers.

MOTIONS FOR NEW TRIAL IN MUENCH BABY HOAX CASE

Attorney Lacy Cites 102 Points, Wilfred Jones 41 in Petitions to Be Argued Tuesday.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

KAHOKA, Mo., Aug. 29.—A motion setting forth 102 reasons why Mrs. Nellie Tipton Muench, Dr. Ludwig O. Muench and Mrs. Helen Berroyer, all convicted of criminal conspiracy for perpetrating the Muench baby hoax, should have a new trial was filed here today.

Mrs. Muench and Attorney Wilfred Jones, the baby broker, were fined $450 last Saturday by a jury for their part in the deception; her husband, Dr. Muench, was fined $350, and their friend, Mrs. Berroyer, $150. Jones, acting as his own attorney, also filed motion for new trial. Circuit Judge Walter A. Higbee will hear the argument on the motions Tuesday.

The motion drawn in behalf of the Muenches and Mrs. Berroyer by their attorney Verne R. C. Lacy, is largely an attack on what he termed the prejudicial attitude of Judge Higbee, its effect on the jurors, and the conduct of two members of the jury, Foreman William Blum and Juror H. E. Lang.

Attack on Jury Foreman.

Blum failed to inform the Court that someone had sought to discuss the case with him until he had been prompted by defense counsel, Lacy said. (Questioned by the Court at the request of defense counsel, Blum assured Judge Higbee that the stranger had not sought to discuss the case, but had commented only on crops). Lang was so sick throughout the entire trial "that he slept or was in a semi-conscious or unconscious condition for 15 or 20 minutes out of every hour," the motion alleged. The Court erred, Lacy contended, in continuing the case under those conditions.

Unknown to the defendants at the time, the motion continued, there were several of Blum's relatives on the jury, which gave the State an unfair advantage as "Blum was always against the defendants." The verdict of guilty, the defense asserted, "in truth and fact reflected only the wish, opinion and desire of William Blum."

Refusal of the Court to entertain objections of defense counsel to certain testimony given by Mrs. Grace Thomasson, a State's witness, and the Court's further refusal to permit Lacy to cross-examine her on matters pertaining to her character and to letters she was alleged to have written, are other reasons why the defendants want the verdict set aside.

Objection also was taken to the Court having permitted Dr. Marsh Pitzman to testify, against the wishes of the defendants, to his previous relations with Mrs. Muench and to the fact that he had given her a large sum of money in 1934.

Heat of Jury Room Cited.

The jury was compelled by the Court to deliberate overlong in a small, hot room until "they suffered from heat, exhaustion and loss of sleep," which led them to agree upon a compromise verdict "irrespective of the guilt or innocence of the defendants," it is alleged.

Lacy also attacked the indictment on technical grounds, stating that the law on which it was grounded did not apply to the case at trial. He alleged that the law, in any event, was unconstitutional—an effort, perhaps, to take the appeal to the Missouri Supreme Court instead of to the St. Louis Court of Appeals where the habeas corpus suit filed by Anna Ware resulted in the Court ordering Mrs. Muench to return the child to her.

Jones' motion contained 40 similar allegations, including numerous objections to specific rulings of the Court also contained in Lacy's petition. He contended also that the evidence showed that neither the Ware baby nor its predecessor, the Price baby, which died, nor either of the mothers were residents of Missouri, hence the matter was outside the jurisdiction of the Juvenile Court. The statute under which the conspirators were convicted forbade transferring custody of an infant without permission of the Juvenile Court.

BONDING HOUSE SUED IN FAILURE OF SAVINGS TRUST

Action Alleges John J. Dowling, Former President, Illegally Used $34,851 of Bank's Funds.

Suit for $34,857 was filed in Circuit Court yesterday by the defunct Savings Trust Co. against the Fidelity & Deposit Co. of Maryland. The action is based on a blanket bond executed by the defendant in which it agreed to hold the bank harmless from losses sustained as a result of dishonest or illegal acts of employes.

The amount involved represents transactions in which funds of the bank are alleged to have been illegally used by John J. Dowling, its former president. The bank was taken over Jan. 12, 1933, by State Finance Commissioner O. H. Moberly, who is in charge of its liquidation.

One item in the suit relates to $24,565 said to have been paid from the trust company's funds to take up bonds and coupons issued by the Kings-Vern Investment Co. These payments, it is charged, were made between October, 1931, and Jan. 2, 1933. The bank was not obligated to pay this amount, nor had it been provided with money by the investment company for such disbursement, the suit states. According to the petitioner, the investment company was insolvent and the bank will not be able to realize more than 25 per cent of the claim from the sale of mortgaged property securing the bond issue.

Another allegation recites that Dowling illegally caused payment to be made for maintenance, taxes and insurance affecting various parcels of real estate which were under management of the bank. With reference to this item, $3656.62, it is alleged Dowling caused an account to be carried on the books of the bank purporting to show that Carl G. Mitchell was the owner of the property, when, as a matter of fact, "the whole control, if not the entire beneficial ownership, was exclusively in Dowling."

It is further charged that Dowling illegally caused payments amounting to $1025 to be made from funds of the bank to satisfy six notes for which the bank was not obligated; also that between Jan. 12, 1932, and Jan. 12, 1933, he illegally converted to his own use $1965 received from various persons who had directed that it be turned over to the trust company but which he deposited to his own credit.

Dowling also is alleged to have illegally made payments totaling $3645 to satisfy interest coupons due on 13 pieces of real estate. The petition states that the bank was not under obligation to pay that amount.

Dowling would not comment beyond saying he had not received a dollar of the bank's money to which he was not legally entitled. The suit states that demand has been made against the surety for reimbursement but it has failed to make settlement.

FATALLY INJURED LAUNCHING HOUSEBOAT BUILT WITH BONUS

John W. Wilkins of East Hardin, Ill., Fell Under Craft as It Rolled Into River.

A Coroner's verdict of accident was returned at Alton yesterday in the death of John W. Wilkins, 38 years old, of East Hardin, Ill., who died at St. Joseph's Hospital, Alton, Friday night, of injuries suffered earlier in the day when he was crushed under his own houseboat as he and two friends were attempting to launch it in the Illinois river.

Wilkins, a World War veteran, built the houseboat early in the summer with supplies bought with his bonus. In the launching on Friday morning, he was putting rollers under the boat when the rope which was holding it to the bank broke. Wilkins attempted to get out of the way but stumbled and fell and the boat passed over him. He is survived by his widow and a daughter.

Summer Hottest in 99 Years Recorded by Weather Bureau; 34 Days of 100 Degrees or More

Average Except for Last Two Days in August Was 83.6 — Previous High Set in 1934.

The summer which ends tomorrow, in the records of the United States Weather Bureau, seems certain to prove the hottest in the 99 years for which the bureau has records.

The blazing sun, which made July the hottest month ever recorded in St. Louis, and August, so far, the hottest August of record, reaped a tremendous toll of human lives and vegetation.

It sent the thermometer to 100 degrees or more on 34 days, exceeding by 11 the record of 23 established in 1934, previously the hottest summer on record. It maintained an average temperature for the three summer months—June, July and August—of 83.6 degrees, leaving the last two days of August out of the reckoning.

Cooler weather which set in late Friday may result in an average temperature for August and the summer a fraction of a degree lower than the present calculation, but the difference can hardly be sufficient to deprive this summer of the dubious distinction of being the hottest on record.

Previous Record in 1934.

Until this year the warmest summer was that of 1934, when the average temperature was 83.3. Normal for the season is 77.1. Last year was but .3 of a degree above normal.

After a moderate June, with an average temperature of 77.2 degrees, came July's unprecedented 87.4 degrees, and August's 86.2 June's temperature was 5.4 degrees behind the record breaking June of 1934, but July and August this year more than made up for that. July was .2 of a degree warmer than July, 1934, and August was 6.2 degrees warmer than August, 1934.

In an adjoining column there is a day-by-day record of the maximum and minimum temperatures for July and August, which shows but 11 days when the maximum reading was below 90.

July established a new record by a fraction of a degee, but August far surpassed other Augusts. The record for the month, established in 1881 and equaled in 1900, had been 83.8, or 2.4 less than the figure for this month. August of 1881 had 10 days with a maximum temperature of 100 degrees or more, but August of 1936 had 14.

Area Concentrated in August.

The July hot spell St. Louis and Missouri shared with all the West and Middle West, but in August the heat was concentrated in a smaller territory. The northern tier of states and the northwest escaped, and the brunt was borne in Missouri, Illinois, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Kansas, Nebraska and Iowa.

In St. Louis alone the Bureau of Vital Statistics listed 421 deaths during June, July and August, as due to heat. This total was 39 higher than the tabulation made by the Post-Dispatch on the basis of day-to-day reports, which included some deaths from heat in St. Louis County. No official total on heat deaths in the county was available.

The bureau listed six deaths in June, 362 in July, and 53 in August. The total was 48 less than the total for 1934, but Thomas Chamberlain, chief clerk at the bureau, said the method of classifying deaths this year was different from that used in 1934. The 1934 total, he said, included some deaths where heat exhaustion was a complicating factor in some other ailment which was the immediate cause of death. These were not classed as heat deaths this year, but if they had been, Chamberlain said, the 1936 total would exceed that of 1934.

Hospital Overtaxed.

During the July hot spell, the scream of ambulance sirens was a familiar sound on the principal streets as persons overcome with heat were rushed to the City Hospital. For several days the hospital's facilities were overtaxed, and corridors were crowded with beds occupied by patients receiving treatment for heat prostration.

In the eight days between July 9 and July 16, the hospital received 371 heat cases, and there were 48 deaths there from heat exhaustion. On July 14 alone 117 persons suffering from heat prostration were received at the hospital.

With the heat came drouth. Every month so far this year had less than normal amount of rainfall and the total for the eight months, 13.13 inches, is but half the normal of 26.22 inches. Even 1934, until now the record drouth year, had 3.36 more inches of rain in the first eight months of the year than 1936 has had.

Rain Far Below Normal.

The accumulated moisture deficiency of the soil may be observed in the following table which shows the precipitation for each month so far this year and the normal for the month:

	Precipitation.	Normal.
January — — —	1.32	2.34
February— — —	1.97	2.56
March— — — —	1.67	3.38
April — — — —	2.80	3.81
May — — — —	.85	4.34
June — — — —	3.07	3.82
July — — — —	.60	2.98
August — — —	.85	2.99

All but four of Missouri's 114 counties now have been placed in the official drouth area, where farmers are eligible for special assistance from the Resettlement, Agricultural Adjustment and Works Progress administrations. The four counties not in the drouth area, all in the southeastern tip of the State, are Mississippi, New Madrid, Pemiscot and Dunklin. Additions

PRINTERS' UNION URGED BY LEADER TO BACK LEWIS

Charles P. Howard Hints at Break With A. F. L. if Suspension Edict Is Allowed to Stand.

By the Associated Press.

COLORADO SPRINGS, Aug. 29.—Charles P. Howard, president of the International Typographical Union, and Secretary of the Committee for industrial organization, said today he would ask his organization to support John L. Lewis, United Mine Workers of America president, in the fight for industrial unions.

The executive council of the American Federation of Labor has threatened to suspend any union which continues to adhere to the C. I. O. after Sept. 5.

"The question has ceased to be whether the executive council or the committee for industrial organization is right," Howard said in a letter to all central and state branches of the A. F. of L.

"If the precedent the Executive Council has established is allowed to stand, no international union can safely retain affiliation with the A. F. of L.

"There appears to be but one way in which a permanent split may be avoided. Hove your council adopt a resolution demanding that the executive council comply with the constitution and refer the controversy with the C. I. O. to the next convention with the full right of all unions to have a voice and vote."

The Typographical Union will hold its national convention here Sept. 12.

Garment Workers Refuse to Quit Lewis Committee.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 29. — The International Ladies' Garment Workers Union informed William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor today, that it would not withdraw from the Committee for Industrial Organization "even under threat of suspension" from the federation.

The garment workers, third largest union in the federation, is one of the 10 unions ordered suspended unless they withdraw from the C. I. O. before Sept. 5.

Word of the union's stand was sent to Green by its president, David Dubinsky, after the general executive board decided the executive council of the A. F. of L. exceeded its authority when it ordered the suspension. Dubinsky proposed that the council lift the suspension and refer the controversy to the next convention of the federation, two months from now in Tampa, Fla.

HITLER GETS STRONG NOTE FROM CATHOLICS

Grievances of Church Set Forth in Memorandum of Fulda Conference.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Aug. 29. — Chancellor Adolf Hitler received today through the Bishop of Mainz a memorandum setting forth grievances of the Roman Catholic Church. In church circles it was said the note was worded in the strongest language yet used in the conflict between the church and the State.

The memorandum was a joint product of Cardinals and Bishops who met last week at Fulda. Brief reference is made to it in the pastoral letter to be read tomorrow from Catholic pulpits throughout Germany.

"After our joint conference we have submitted a detailed expose of Der Fuehrer," the pastoral letter said.

The pastoral letter, it was said, will warn that Germany "may go the way of Spain" and will condemn the Nazi "world outlook" based on "blood, soil and race."

Catholic sources said the memorandum aims to prove conclusively that the concordat with the Holy See has been broken by the Nazi regime.

Only two copies of this document are extant—one in the hands of Hitler and the other held by Adolph Cardinal Bertram, who presided at the Fulda meeting.

Vain Effort of Japanese To Hold Colony in Brazil

Natives, Sent Over in 1930, Were to Have Possession in 50 Years but Now Concession Is Held Void.

By the Associated Press.

RIO DE JANEIRO, Aug. 30. — Has the Brazilian Senate, in secret session, smashed Tsukasa Uetsuka's dream of a Japanese "utopia" in South America?

The Japanese "dreamer," a member of the imperial diet and former parliamentary councillor, held a 2,410,000-acre land grant from the Amazonas Government. It was his plan to settle eventually on this land 10,000 Japanese farming families.

The Brazilian Senate now has annulled the grant on the grounds that it was "unpatriotic and anti-nationalist."

Uetsuka has been engaged in his attempt to conquer the Amazon jungle for the last sever years. So far he has settled 200 families.

Grant Issued in 1930.

The land grant which the Senate has annulled was issued in 1930.

In its 707,000-odd square miles Amazonas has less than 450,000 people, less than one person a square mile.

Amazonas has been compared to early Egypt and Mesopotamia, a rich river valley, fertile, teeming.

Japan proper has an area of 148,756 square miles. Its population, according to latest figures, gives it more than 433 persons a square mile. Even in its empire there are more than 348 people to every square mile. Density of population is among reasons advanced by statesmen of Japan for its need of more land.

In 1926 Ephigenio Ferreira de Salles, president of the State of Amazonas, was visited by Shichita Tasuke, Japanese Ambassador to Brazil. The president said to the ambassador that Japanese immigrants would find a ready welcome in Amazonas. He promised to have legislation passed permitting land grants for colonization.

Negotiation for Grant.

When the legislation had been enacted in 1927, Uetsuka, then third highest official in the Tokio finance ministry, and a prominent member of the Seiyukai party, sent Gensaburo Yamanishi and Kinroku Awazu to negotiate for a land grant. They obtained an option for 1,000,000 hectares.

TSUKASA UETSUKA.

Two years later Uetsuka came to Brazil, toured the Amazonas regions, picked four large tracts totaling the 1,000,000 hectares (2,410,000 acres) and signed a contract which was approved by the Amazonas Government in 1930.

Under its terms he was given title to the land for 50 years and if by the end of that time he had 10,000 Japanese farming families on it, the land belonged to the families in perpetuity in their several shares. The concession permitted its holder to build railroads and highways, telephones and telegraphs, radio stations, power plants, factories, foundries, houses and buildings of all kinds.

The settlers were to become Brazilian citizens and be at all times subject to Brazilian Federal and State law.

List of Accomplishments.

Prospective capitalist supporters and settlers in Japan were skeptical when Uetsuka first approached them. Then he published a monthly periodical, conferred, lectured and wrote in an intensive publicity campaign. Subsequently he counted among his accomplishments:

The Amazonia Institute in Parintins, Amazonas, and its counterpart in Tokio.

The Superior School of Colonization in Tokio, wherein 276 university graduates were put through one-year courses to become "the future leaders of the settlement." Of these, 256 came to Amazonas.

Three hospitals and two elementary schools in the Amazonas settlement. Also in the settlement: a weather bureau, a flour mill, a smithy, a sawmill, a powerhouse, two river docks and 300 homes.

The Amazonas Industrial Co., incorporated in Brazil with capital of 1,000,000 Japanese yen, approximately $240,000 and no hope of immediate dividends.

An expenditure of 1,500,000 yen (about $840,000) in the first experimental stages.

Harnessing water power, planting jute and rubber, coffee and cacao, rice and cotton and many other experimental crops, Uetsuka has been planning what he himself calls "a new society."

Gov. Talmadge, New Deal Critic, Opposes Incumbent Russell in Primary Sept. 9.

By the Associated Press.

ATLANTA, Ga., Aug. 29.—Contributions of bales of cotton, worth $40 or more, are aiding in the campaign of Gov. Eugene Talmadge and Senator Richard B. Russell Jr., opponents for the Democratic nomination for United States Senator in the primary Sept. 9.

Russell is a Roosevelt supporter and former Governor. He was elected Nov. 8, 1932, to fill a Senate vacancy caused by the death of William J. Harris. Talmadge is a critic of the New Deal.

Music, barbecues and melon cuttings are playing a part in the campaign. Squads of girls have acted as "bodyguards" for platform appearances of Russell, a bachelor. Other girls have worn red suspenders, the Talmadge emblem, at the Governor's meetings.

SECOND MAN SHOT FLEEING FROM RAIL DETECTIVE DIES

Negroes Fired on After Special Agent Found Seal of Box Car Broken in Yards.

Major Gibson, 41-year-old Negro, 2603 Market street, died at City Hospital No. 2 Friday night of a bullet wound in the back inflicted by Special Agent Thomas Fitzgerald of the Frisco Railroad, who shot Gibson and another Negro last Sunday when he found they had broken the seal of a box car in the Frisco yards at 1300 South Thirty-ninth street.

The other Negro, Elbert Jones, 3140 Hickory street, died Monday after confessing, according to police, that he and Gibson had started to break into the car to steal canned food. Gibson denied it.

Fitzgerald reported he called on the men to halt, but they ran, and after chasing them a block and firing a warning shot into the air, he fired at them four times.

LARGE STILL SEIZED NEAR BONNE TERRE

Alcohol Plant 30 Feet High Found in Barn—Three Men Held.

By the Associated Press.

POPLAR BLUFF, Mo., Aug. 29.—Federal revenue agents working out of the Poplar Bluff office, who have confiscated 109 stills in the last 53 weeks, early today seized the largest alcohol still ever taken by them in Southeastern Missouri, and arrested three men.

Those arrested said they were Elmer Neustaedter, St. Louis chauffeur, and John P. Moore, a mechanic, and "Dude" Murphy, both of Collinsville, Ill.

The still, in a barn on a farm four miles north of Bonne Terre, in St. Francois County, was 30 feet high and in five sections. It was operated by a 12-horsepower steam engine.

The officers said they found 5000 gallons of mash and 10 five-gallon cans of alcohol. The three prisoners were charged with conspiracy to violate the internal revenue laws. They pleaded not guilty before the United States Commissioner here. Their bonds were fixed at $2000 each.

GAS WORKERS' UNION DEFERS JOINING JOHN L. LEWIS' DRIVE

Technicality in Constitution of New United Miners Branch Being Studied.

The St. Louis Gas Workers' Union deferred being enrolled in John L. Lewis' industrial union drive at a meeting Friday night, but only because of a technicality.

It was thought that two clauses in the constitution of the Gas & Coke Byproducts Workers' Union, which is being organized as a branch of Lewis' United Mine Workers of America and which the local union voted several months ago to join, would prevent many of the 550 members of the local union from enrolling. The clauses specify members must work "in or around" coke plants, and many of the local union members are meter readers and street and shop workers.

A committee was appointed to study the clauses and to report at the next regular meeting, Sept. 11, at Electrical Workers' Hall, Boyle and Gibson avenues. The Mine Workers are one of 10 unions which the executive council of the American Federation of Labor has voted to suspend Sept. 5 unless they withdraw from Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization. Joining the Mine Workers probably would force the local union to withdraw from the A. F. of L.

SUMMER HOTTEST IN 99 YEARS OF WEATHER RECORDS

to the list have been made almost weekly and these counties may yet be added to the drouth area if conditions do not improve.

Even with less rainfall this year than in 1934, crops are in better condition this year than they were then, E. A. Logan, State agricultural statistician, said yesterday at Columbia. This year, he said, farmers have more corn, more hay, and better oats and wheat crops than they had in 1934. The situation is most acute, he said, in dried up pastures and water holes for stock.

Many Trees Die.

Trees and shrubs, and city and suburban gardens suffered greatly from the heat and drouth, but in the city lawns of many homes where the water supply is not metered were kept green by constant sprinkling. Many healthy mature trees lost their leaves and died. Tests at Shaw's Garden showed trees generally existing with three-fifths of their normal moisture content and with internal temperatures above the point at which defoliation begins.

Evergreens in ornamental yard plantings were severely scorched and many were killed. During the hottest days homeowners draped sheets over their prized evergreens in an effort to shield them from the sun.

Golf course fairways were burned to a crisp, although greens were kept in good shape by drenching them with water each night.

Song Birds Desert City.

Most of the wild song birds, except for the robins and blue jays, have deserted gardens in the city and county, probably to seek cooler places and fresh water. Ground feeders such as the robins experienced difficulty in finding food as the crust of the soil baked and insects and worms buried deep in the ground.

The Mississippi and the Missouri, and smaller streams as well, reached record-breaking low levels. The Mississippi, at St. Louis, averaged 3.2 feet below zero on the gauge for August, and on Thursday stood at 4.1 below zero, an all time low record, except for a stage of 4.6 below zero caused by an ice-jam in December, 1933. The previous natural low record stage was 3 feet below zero on Aug. 31, 1934.

The Missouri River, on Thursday, reached a stage of 2.3 feet, equal to the lowest natural stage on record. Smaller streams throughout the State had little water in them. Deputy game wardens have been busy with seining crews removing tank-truck loads of fish from receding waters to deeper lakes and rivers.

The Meramec River, a favorite recreation spot for St. Louisans, fell so low that the St. Louis County Health Commissioner issued a warning that the stream was polluted and should not be used by swimmers.

Some of the smaller towns in the State found their water and ice supplies running short. Kansas City shipped water in tank cars to several communities in the western part of the State.

C. OF C. FAVORS OUTPUT CONTROL BY AGREEMENT

Federal Regulation of Production 'Indefensible,' It Declares in Statement of Policies.

FOR GOVERNMENT SUPERVISION ONLY

Restoration of World Monetary Standard Urged—Tax Structure, Spending Assailed.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29.—In a broad statement of policies, the Chamber of Commerce of the United States tonight declared any Federal control of production to be "indefensible," but urged that industry be permitted to make agreements to keep "production related to consumption."

Asserting its declaration of principles had been approved by its membership, consisting of 1400 business organizations with an enrollment of 700,000 members, the chamber took a firm stand against the "imposition of codes upon industry by administrative or executive authority."

In lieu of governmental codes, the chamber urged formulation of rules of fair competition by the industries themselves. A Government agency named by the President should have authority only to approve or reject these rules "without power of modification or imposition but with power to indicate conditions of approval."

At present, the Federal Trade Commission maintains a "trade practice conference division" which may approve or reject rules submitted by industries. Commission officials said it had sometimes modified regulations, but had no specific power to impose rules on industry.

Monetary Policies.

The policy statement said that restoration of "a satisfactory international monetary standard and strict maintenance of the integrity of the currencies of the world are vital needs."

It added: "The gold standard is the only international monetary standard that has commanded general acceptance. Its restoration and maintenance are dependent upon the development of confidence, the balancing of public budgets, removal of restrictions upon foreign exchange and greater freedom in the movement of goods."

The statement demanded adoption of "a well-co-ordinated fiscal plan" to reduce Federal expenditures and balance the budget "in the near future" without increased taxation.

Criticising the present tax structure, the chamber said combined expenditures of Federal, state and local governments "now demand so great a proportion of the total national income that they discourage business, threaten the security of wages and savings, and retard employment. . . .

Federal Expenditures.

"Federal expenditures, through the use of the taxpayer's money or by means of advances or loans, for the purpose of developing or extending governmental activities which compete with private enterprise should be discontinued."

The "invasion of government into fields of business properly occupied by private enterprise" was described as "one of the gravest threats against the economic freedom of our citizens."

As to agriculture, the statement asserted restrictions on production of exportable farm products which can be produced in other sections of the world "inevitably react to the disadvantage of the nation imposing such artificial restrictions, by encouraging the production of the restricted commodities in other nations."

On Other Issues.

Briefly, the Chamber's stand on some other issues was:

"Opposes all proposals tending to deprive the Supreme Court of the United States of its function to determine the validity of congressional action.

"Emergency expenditures necessary for the relief of the destitute unemployed should be provided by and under the control of the States of their residence, with reimbursal advances from the Federal Government only on application of those States or municipalities which are unable to obtain the needed funds for that purpose.

"The use of Federal tax power primarily to compel States or individuals to conform to social or economic readjustments, with revenue only incidental, is contrary to sound public policy.

"Interference by Government in attempts to reduce the whole complex problem (of economic security) to one of legislative formulae can only postpone the final solution by making it more difficult for business to assume its own obligations in the matter.

Conditions of Employment.

"Conditions of employment and work are basic in the relations between employers and employes. Both should have full freedom for the discussionand adjustment of terms of employment either through individual negotiations or through representatives of their own selection. Employes should be as free tion.
as employers from coercion or restraint from any source.

"The relation of Government to industry and commerce is primarily that of preserving equal treatment for all, assuring to everyone adequate protection in the development of individual initiative and enterprise. Adherence to this policy implies that there be placed on each individual, whatever his functions in the community, only that degree of restraint which will prevent his encroachment upon the rights of others.

"The anti-trust laws should be modified so as to make clear that the laws permit agreements increasing the possibilities of keeping production related to consumption."

Before issuing its statement today the chamber reported in its regular "Washington review" that conditions in industrial and distribution fields continued "favorable trends" during July and August.

It cited various business indicators as evidencing improvement and called attention to a 300,000 increase in the number of depositors in mutual savings banks during the first half of this year.

COUNTY SCHOOL DISTRICTS TAKE IN $6,015,500 IN YEAR

Expenditures $4,318,000, Supt. R. G. Russell Reports.

The receipts of the St. Louis County school districts were $6,015,500 and expenditures $4,318,031, in the year ending last June 30, Dr. Rufus G. Russell, County Superintendent of Schools, stated in his annual report yesterday to the State Superintendent of Schools.

A comparison with 10 years ago showed that the value of school sites and buildings, now $12,946,148, has doubled since 1926. Value of equipment increased to $1,352,915 from $963,514, and the bonded indebtedness increased to $7,881,432 from $3,757,558. The enrollment for 1936 was 42,810 as compared to 26,397 in 1926. There were 1373 teachers to 768 for 1926, but the teachers' salaries did not average as high, totaling $1,923,408 for 1936 as compared to $1,139,381 for 1926. There are now 192 schools, of which 20 are high schools; 114 of them are in the 20 consolidated school ditsricts and 78 in the 70 rural ditsricts.

Dr. Russell said schools would be opened Sept. 8, the day after Labor day in all districts except Webster Groves, where the opening will be a week later.

CRISTOBAL COLON SAILS AGAIN

Spanish Liner Trying to Reach Government Port.

By the Associated Press.

SAINT NAZAIRE, FRANCE, Aug. 29—The Spanish liner Cristobal Colon lumbered through the seas tonight hoping to hide from the eyes of Fascist warship commanders so it could find a port to call home.

The vessel put to sea in the morning in another attempt to reach some Government-held Spanish haven.

A Leftist control committee of deckhands and stokers presumably was still passing on or rejecting all the captain's commands and a man, who described himself as a representative of the Madrid Government, also was on board. The control committee has been trying for weeks to give the ship to the Government, but the rebel blocade of Government ports has prevented it.

The passengers who remained aboard also presumably were to be landed at Government ports.

Ousted for Arresting Reporter.

By the Associated Press.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Aug. 29. — The Civil Service Board dismissed Patrolman Francis E. Murray from the Louisville police force today on the ground that he was not justified in arresting Harold Hotopp, Louisville Times reporter. The board heard charges filed by the Times arising from the arrest of Hotopp and a photographer, Art Abfier, at the scene of the recovery of a body from the Ohio River. The Times contended that it was a violation of police department regulations for members of the force to set themselves up as censors of news and photographs.

RAIN CUTS DEMAND FOR DROUTH JOBS

Hopkins Reports Daily Applications by Farmers Reduced From 5000 to 2500.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29.—A 50 per cent drop in the new demand for WPA drouth relief jobs was reported today as a result of rains which the Weather Bureau said had made a "big dent" in the dry area.

From his inspection tour with President Roosevelt, Harry L. Hopkine notified his headquarters here that the daily increase in WPA jobs for drouth-stricken farmers had dropped from 5000 10 days ago to 2500.

Rainfall above normal in the Eastern Ohio and upper Mississippi valleys and some adjacent areas, J. B. Kincer, crop meteorologist, said, had "greatly improved the outlook of late crops and put the soil in better condition for plowing and for seeding winter grains."

Both Federal agencies, however, reported that some sections still were without relief. Supplementing the Weather Bureau report that high temperatures and lack of rainfall continued in Texas, Arkansas, Tennessee and much of Louisiana and Mississippi, Hopkins sent word that the Dakotas, Kansas and Nebraska were "no better off than a month ago."

Jobs Over the Winter.

A further increase in WPA drouth expenditures despite the rains was indicated by Hopkins who said that most of those now employed by WPA "will have to be taken care of over the winter." Total employment in the Great Plains states was placed at 118,172.

"If favorable weather conditions continue," he added, "it is highly probable that not more than 35,000 to 50,000 additional farmers will need aid. This would mean a substantial reduction from original estimates made when drouth destitution was mounting at such a dizzy pace."

With WPA already spending more than $5,000,000 a month on drouth jobs, officials here said the increase mentioned would boost the cost up to Jan. 1 above the $30,000,000 recently estimated by Hopkins.

Help for Dairy Regions.

Jesse W. Tapp, chairman of the Agriculture Department drouth committee, said the rains would be "particuularly beneficial in the dairy regions of Wisconsin, Minnesota and the northern portion of Iowa and Illinois, where deficient pasturage has forced farmers to feed a large portion of their winter roughage supply."

Tapp said the rains probably came too late for planting forage crops in the "northernmost portions of the Great Plains area." He said aridity in Southern areas was "intensifying the problem of winter feed and forage supplies."

Several expansions of territory in which emergency freight rates have been established as an aid to drouth areas were announced by Tapp's committee. He said the railroad concession would "facilitate the movement of livestock and feed from more distant points than would otherwise be possible."

PACIFIC RELATIONS INSTITUTE DISCUSSES FAR EAST ISSUES

French, Russian, British and Japanese Delegates Talk on Collective Security.

By the Associated Press.

YOSEMITE, Cal., Aug. 29.—Delegates from Japan, Great Britain, Russia and France agreed today that a method of achieving collective security and questions involving the changing of the balance of power in the Pacific were the most important problems to be met in the Far East. They presented their views at the closing session of the biennial Institute of Pacific Relations here.

Kenkichi Yoshizawa, former Japanese Minister to China, said the relations between nations were growing more and more strained, "tending to have grave consequences. Unless some method of improving them is devised, it is not difficult to surmise what the situation holds in the future."

A. V. Alexander, Laborite member of the British Parliament, said there could be "no lasting peace with justice until there is proper machinery for collective security."

"What would have been the world situation today," Dr. V. E. Motylev, Russian delegate, asked, "if, instead of the U. S. S. R., there were an imperialistic Russia? Isn't it evident that the socialistic system, eliminating any desire of expansion or aggression, is a factor for peace?"

Albert Sarraut, former French Premier, said: "It is forbidden to kill in Yosemite Valley. What a beautiful thing if the same restraint could be achieved in the lives of nations."

Alexander urged the Institute not to be "forgetful of what is the real problem—how to bring to the millions of the great toiling masses how they can enjoy all the best that life has to offer." He added: "They are pawns in the game — cannon fodder."

Tom K. Smith, president of the Boatmen's National Bank; the Rev. Ivan Lee Holt, pastor of St. John's M. E. Church, South, and the Rev. John J. Butler, president of Catholic Charities, have been appointed members of the National Citizens' Committee of the 1936 Mobilization for Human Needs, it was announced yesterday.

The mobilization, to promote voluntary welfare service campaigns this fall, will be launched with a national conference at the White House in September. It will be addressed by President Roosevelt.

The St. Louisans will represent United Charities. About 350 other community chests throughout the country will be represented. Gerard Swope is president of the mobiliza-

Four Buried by Cave-In Rescued.

By the Associated Press.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Aug. 29.—Comrades pulled four men from a six-foot trench tonight after a cave-in buried them under a heap of heavy wet earth. One of the workers, Worthy Wickline, 28 years old, was badly hurt. Doctors ordered an emergency operation. The others suffered minor injuries.

LEMKE PREDICTS U. S. DEBT OF $146,000,000,000 BY 1996

Says Calculation Is Based on Present Interest Rate Paid to Bankers.

By the Associated Press.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Aug. 29.—Predicting a "staggering" Federal indebtedness 60 years hence, Representative William Lemke of North Dakota said in an address at a Union party rally tonight that "we need only look towards war-torn Spain to realize what may happen to us long before 1996 rolls around."

Lemke, Union party presidential nominee, declared the national debt, computed at the present interest rate paid to bankers, would amount to more than $146,000,000,000 by the year 1996. His calculation was based, he said, on statistics of the Treasury Department which Lemke asserted showed Federal indebtedness would be $36,000,000,000 at the close of the current fiscal year.

"I suppose the answer of the press bureaus of the Republican and Democratic organizations will be that this outrageously increased Federal indebtedness will be something for our children and their children to worry about," Lemke said. "They will be right."

Borah Spent $296 in Campaign.

BOISE, Idaho, Aug. 29.—Senator William E. Borah spent $296.75 to win the Republican nomination Aug. 11 for a sixth consecutive term. His campaign expense report listed these items today: "Filing fee, $99; telegrams, $98.05; gasoline for use in private cars, $46.40; stamps, $11; expenses of C. E. Wallace in urging attendance at the primaries, $42.20." Byron Defenbach of Boise, Townsend-indorsed opponent of Borah reported expenditure of $244.75.

ORDERED MACHINE VOTING AND ONE-SIDED RESULTS IN ELECTIONS TO COMMITTEE

Senator Kinney Rolled Up 4235 to 23 for Opponent and Jimmy Miller Was Re-elected 4069 to 163.

(Copyright, 1936, by Pulitzer Publishing Co., the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. All property rights in news reserved under Federal Court decisions. Reproduction prohibited.)

Official returns in the election of the members of the Democratic and Republican City Committees, conducted in the primary of Aug. 4, have been analyzed by the Post-Dispatch, disclosing further instances of ordered machine voting, striking uniformity and one-sided results, similar to those found in a study of the votes for party nominations for public offices.

To a considerable extent, the unusual characteristics of returns were in the same sections of the city in the committee elections as in the party nominations.

Members of the party committees, constituting the official local boards of managers for the respective parties, are chosen by wards for four-year terms. They do not receive salaries but, especially in the case of the party in power, exercise considerable political influence and patronage. The committee is the head of party organizations. Each committee consists of a man and a woman from each of the 28 wards.

Kinney's Opponent Swamped.

No result was more striking than the re-election of State Senator Mike Kinney as Democratic Committeeman from the downtown Fifth Ward. He defeated Andrew Sansone, 4235 to 23. The vote by precincts:

Precinct.	Kinney.	Sansone.
8	466	1
9	337	2

The total vote was 4258. The vote for Mrs. Charles M. Hahn, re-elected committeewoman of the ward without opposition, also was 4258. Kinney, a principal political supporter of Mayor Dickmann, carried his ward for renomination to the Senate, 3656 to 6, only nine precincts of the ward being in the senatorial district. In six of these precincts, the vote for Senator was identical with the vote for committeeman, while there was only slight difference in the other three.

Easy for Jimmy Miller.

Jimmy Miller, Justice of the Peace and ward boss, was re-elected Democratic Committeeman of the Fourth Ward, defeating the Mayor's candidate, Joe Henry, 4069 to 163. Henry's largest following was in the Tenth Precinct, where he got 43 votes, against 254 for Miller, who has boasted that he "votes 'em like a machine."

In the Fourth Precinct the vote was 220 for Miller, 0 for Henry; but then that precinct divided its Democratic ballots exactly that way as between all candidates with Miller's approval and those lacking it. In the other precincts Henry's vote ranged from 1 to 22, Miller's ranging from 141 to 438 in all 15 precincts. Miss Charlotte O'Connor, unopposed, was re-elected Committeewoman, with 4238 votes.

John J. Moroney was re-elected Democratic Committeeman of the Sixth Ward, with the Mayor's aid, polling 1757 votes, against 448 for his nearest rival, A. Maceo May, a Negro, in a district containing a large proportion of Negro voters. David P. Lohr got 270 votes and W. J. Reilly 36. It was pretty much of a walkaway for Moroney in 10 of the precincts, in four of which Reilly drew no votes, while Lohr got none in three. May narrowly outran Moroney in two precincts and gave him a close race in two others. For Committeewoman the vote was: Miss Lilla Troy, backed by the Mayor and elected, 1424; Mrs. Bessie Guenther, a Deputy Circuit Clerk, defeated for re-election, 969.

Five-Way Race in Nineteenth.

There was a five-way tussle for Democratic Committeeman of the Nineteenth Ward, which has a considerable Negro population. William Cullinane was re-elected with Mayor Dickmann's support, with 2276 votes. His principal opponent, polling 1166 votes, was Constable Jordan W. Chambers, a Negro, who managed the 1929 re-election campaign among Negroes of Mayor Victor J. Miller, Republican, and was defeated for Republican Committeeman of his ward in 1932. He changed politics and aided in Dickmann's successful campaign for Mayor in 1933 and the next year was elected a Constable as a Democrat.

Votes for others in the recent committee contest were: Ben Barnett, 790; Timothy J. Dwyer, 140; Robert Laususe, 51. The division of the vote in five precincts was of special interest, as follows:

Seventh precinct—Cullinane, 139; Barnett, 21; Dwyer, 9; Chambers and Laususe, 1 each.

Eighth—Cullinane, 115; Dwyer, 26; Barnett, 8; Chambers, 1; Laususe, 1.

Ninth—Cullinane, 374; Barnett, 47; Dwyer, 25; Chambers, 4; Laususe, 3.

Tenth—Cullinane, 231; Barnett, 41; Dwyer, 16; Chambers, 2; Laususe, 0.

Thirteenth—Chambers, 202; Cullinane, 19; Barnett, 13; Dwyer and Laususe, each 0.

The first four precincts listed are in the white end of the ward, the last in the Negro section. For committeewoman, the ward's vote was: Mrs. Stella Carey, elected with the Mayor's backing, 2219; Mrs. Vera R. Callahan, defeated for re-election, 1087; Ardania Morgan, 3119 Delmar boulevard, 1181.

Some Figures in Twentieth.

In the Twentieth Ward, Constable John J. Dwyer and Mrs. Charlotte Corcoran Lee replaced James J. Gallagher, former Police Court Clerk, and Miss Margaret Burke as Democratic committee members. The Mayor favored Dwyer and Mrs. Lee.

There were four precincts in which the vote was identical in the Gallagher-Dwyer and Burke-Lee contests, as follows: Second precinct, Dwyer-Lee, 211; Gallagher-Burke, 8. Fourth, Dwyer-Lee, 295; Gallagher-Burke, 55. Tenth, Dwyer-Lee, 238; Gallagher-Burke, 35. Fifteenth, Dwyer-Lee, 288; Gallagher-Burke, 22. In four other precincts the vote for the Dwyer-Lee combination was much greater than for the Gallagher-Burke, with only small differences in the votes for committeeman and committeewoman.

Total vote of the ward was: Dwyer, 4189; Mrs. Lee, 3987; Gallagher, 1409; Miss Burke, 1507.

Hannegan's Easy Victory.

Eight of the 21 precincts of the Twenty-first Ward had identical votes as between Robert E. Hannegan and Mrs. Mary Whalen, who were re-elected to the Democratic committee, as desired by the Mayor, and Mrs. Kate H. Fox and Ralph J. Schmidt, their opponents. Hannegan recently was made chairman of the committee, following the Mayor's wish.

The identical votes were. Second precinct, Hannegan-Whalen, 164; Schmidt-Fox, 3; Sixth, Hannegan-Whalen, 124; Schmidt-Fox, 11; Twelfth, Hannegan-Whalen, 244; Schmidt-Fox, 8. Fourteenth, Hannegan-Whalen, 202; Schmidt-Fox, 10. Seventeenth, Hannegan-Whalen, 170; Schmidt-Fox, 15. Nineteenth, Hannegan-Whalen, 153; Schmidt-Fox, 6. Twentieth, Hannegan-Whalen, 163; Schmidt-Fox, 1. Twenty-first, Hannegan-Whalen, 188; Schmidt-Fox, 8.

Returns from the other precincts were likewise one-sided, a number of them showing only slight differences between figures for committeeman and comitteewoman. The total vote: Hannegan, 4244; Mrs. Whalen, 4090; Schmidt, 312; Mrs. Fox, 458.

Political Mixup in Twenty-third.

A number of one-sided precinct returns were found for both Democratic committeemen and committeewomen in the Twenty-third Ward, where there was a little political mixup. "Turtles" Reardon was re-elected and Miss Florence E. Carroll was elected. The Mayor was backing Reardon, also Mrs. Charles Corneli, who failed of re-election, but Reardon disavowed the Dickmann support. Precincts where the topheavy votes were noted went in favor of Reardon and Miss Carroll. The ward totals: Reardon, 2731; Miss Carroll, 2331; Henry J. Bromfield, 603; Mrs. Corneli, 800; Mrs. Mary Foy, 229.

The Twenty-second precinct of the Twenty-fourth Ward, in the "Hill" district west of Kingshighway and south of the railroad tracks, gave remarkably large majorities in the bitter Democratic contests for the committee, just as it did for favored candidates for Democratic nominations for public offices. L. Jean Gauldoni, supported by the Mayor and recently given a city job, was elected committeeman, defeating Recorder of Deeds John P. English, who had been chairman of the committee. Elected with Gualdoni was Mrs. LuRene C. Kaiser, defeating the former committeewoman, Mrs. Agnes M. Cheely.

For the twenty-second precinct the vote was: Gualdoni, 725; English, 23; Gualdoni's majority, 702; Mrs. Kaiser, 719; Mrs. Cheely, 26; Mrs. Kaiser's majority, 693. The winners' majorities in this one precinct were considerably greater than their net majorities for the combined 48 precincts of the big ward. A different result in this precinct might have changed the result in the ward.

Ward totals were: Gualdoni, 6176; English, 5828; Gualdoni's majority, 348; Mrs. Kaiser, 6101; Mrs. Cheely, 5664; Mrs. Kaiser's majority, 437.

The Twenty-Seventh Ward.

Four precincts of the Twenty-seventh Ward had lopsided votes in favor of City Marshal L. G. May and Mrs. Catherine Roden, who were re-elected to the Democratic committee, sponsored by the Mayor. Their reports were:

Eighth precinct—May, 244; John J. Myles, 16; Morris Feinberg, 5; Mrs. Roden, 242; Mrs. William A. Strom, 13.

Tenth—May, 244; Myles, 15; Feinberg, 6; Mrs. Roden, 243; Mrs. Strom, 22.

Twentieth—May, 216; Myles, 16; Feinberg, 1; Mrs. Roden, 214; Mrs. Strom, 10.

Twenty-second—May, 266; Myles, 12; Feinberg, 0; Mrs. Roden, 266; Mrs. Strom, 12.

Ward totals—May, 5584; Myles, 1387; Feinberg, 300; Mrs. Roden, 5869; Mrs. Strom, 1227.

Eleven of the 18 precincts of the midtown Seventeenth Ward showed topheavy results in favor of Miss Anna B. Noonan, who was re-elected Democratic committeewoman, defeating Mrs. Margaret Hoffman, 2632 to 452. Dewey S. Godfrey was re-elected committeeman, unopposed, with 3349 votes. He and Miss Noonan were favored by the Mayor.

Interesting Republican Race.

On the Republican side, there was an interesting contest in the Seventeenth Ward also. Louis E. Miller, incumbent, and Mrs. Freda A. Johnston were unopposed on the ballot. However, Miller, according to Mrs. Johnston, became dissatisfied with her because she was friendly to Chairman Fred W. Pape, and circulated cards in the white end of the ward, advising his followers to "vote for Catherine Offner, a white woman." Mrs. Johnston, a blond and white, took steps to have the cards switched to the Negro end of the ward.

The result: Mrs. Johnston, 1253 votes; her opponent, 342, the latter's name being written on the ballots by voters in 16 of the 18 precincts, her vote ranging from 2 to 99 in a precinct. Miller received 1671 votes. The name of Charles J. Rulley was written in against him by four voters in one precinct and one in another.

For the second successive committee election, no candidate for Republican committeewoman of the Fourth Ward filed. It costs $100, a fee paid to the committee, in order to file. However, Miss Elvia Troll, 1826A O'Fallon street, was elected, as 599 voters, ranging from 7 to 95 to a precinct, wrote her name on the ballot. She evidently was sponsored by Nick Polito, the re-elected committeeman, who is an election board office clerk.

In addition, 147 voters in 10 of the 14 precincts wrote in the name of Kate Brown for committeewoman; 96 in eight precincts wrote in the name of Mrs. Hazel McKnight, Negro, retiring committeewoman, who was elected in the same manner four years ago, and one voter each wrote in the surnames "Matthews" and "McNara." The total written-in vote was 844.

Polito, unopposed on the ballot, received 907 votes. In addition, in the tenth precinct three voters wrote in the name of E. Rogginson and one that of John Carter. Politicians have pointed out that Polito, being employed by the election board, was in a position to enter his own candidate if an undesired candidate for committeewoman should have filed formal candidacy at the last minute.

Identical Voting in 8 Precincts.

Identical votes were cast, as between the winners and losers, in eight of the 23 precincts of the Twentieth Ward, in the Republican committee contests. John J. Hurley, a WPA employe, was re-elected, and Miss Lillian A. Thirolf elected. They defeated H. D. Robinson and Mrs. Maude T. Oswald.

Cases of identical votes were: Second Precinct, Hurley-Thirolf, 71; Robinson-Oswald, 0. Third, Hurley-Thirolf, 18; Robinson-Oswald, 0. Fourth, Hurley-Thirolf, 67; Robinson-Oswald, 2. Sixth, Turley-Thirolf, 56; Robinson-Oswald, 0. Eleventh, Hurley-Thirolf, 90; Robinson-Oswald, 4. Twelfth, Hurley-Thirolf, 26; Robinson-Oswald, 0. Thirteenth, Hurley-Thirolf, 61; Robinson-Oswald, 5. Seventeenth, Hurley-Thirolf, 35; Robinson-Oswald, 18.

Ward totals were: Hurley, 1254; Robinson, 952; Miss Thirolf, 1097; Mrs. Oswald, 1042.

The Eighteenth Ward, First Precinct, gave not only the two men running for the Republican committee but the two women just 19 votes each. This precinct had showed just 533 Democratic votes for all nominations and 38 for Republican nominations, the latter being divided 19-19 in a number of instances. The ward totals for the Republican committee were: Fred H. Knollmann, 1306, and Mrs. Florence A. Raeder, 1242, re-elected, and Samuel R. Stinebaker, 355, and Mrs. Clara Hansen, 404, defeated.

A number of contests of election to both committees have been filed in Circuit Court, citing, as has been told, various charges of fraud or improper handling of the election.

STUDENTS FLUNK, END LIVES

Yugoslav Papers Wonder if Courses Are Too Difficult.

By the Associated Press.

BELGRADE, Aug. 29.—A series of suicides by school children who failed in examinations this summer has led newspapers to ask whether the Yugoslav course of study is too difficult.

Three students in Belgrade killed themselves, and suicides in other parts of the country were reported almost daily during examination month. In Zagreb, a 14-year-old girl received notice that she flunked, went to the cathedral to pray, and then flung herself from the church tower.

CHAMBER REPORTS JULY BUSINESS GAINS

Increases in Building Permits, Electrical Output and Loadings Over Year Ago.

Building permits, bank clearings, electrical output, industrial gas consumption and revenue freight cars handled by the Terminal Railroad Association showed marked gains in St. Louis during July, as compared with the same month in 1935, according to the monthly report of the Industrial Bureau of the Chamber of Commerce, made public yesterday.

Building permits increased 23.65 per cent; bank clearings 21.07 per cent; industrial electricity supplied by the Union Electric Light & Power Co. to 192 identical customers, 39.98 per cent; industrial electricity supplied by the Laclede Power & Light Co., 12.90 per cent; industrial gas consumption, 31.64 per cent, and revenue freight cars handled by the Terminal, 28.13 per cent.

The bureau also announced the following figures for July business, compared with those of July, 1935.

The skeleton of a man was found partly embedded in the bank of the Mississipi River near the Hillcrest Country Club, yesterday by Harry Hutchen, a fisherman. It was taken by county authorities to the Fendler mortuary, 714 Lemay Ferry road.

An employe of the mortuary estimated the skeleton had been there a year or a year and a half. The four false teeth on the upper plate furnished the only mark of identification.

SECRET OF BIG FUEL SAVINGS

WARMTH
HEAT

LOOK WHAT WE'VE SAVED ON THE COAL BILL ALREADY THIS YEAR
AND THE HOUSE HAS BEEN TWICE AS WARM SINCE WE PUT IN THE CRANE BOILER. WHAT A BUY!

CRANE "OVER-THE-TOP" HEATING PRINCIPLE TAKES THE HEAT FROM THE FUEL AND PUTS IT INTO YOUR HOME, NOT UP THE CHIMNEY
PAYS FOR ITSELF

Homeowners report a new high in comfort, a new low in fuel cost with the Crane Boiler.
A Crane Boiler places about 50% more of the heat-absorbing surface directly above the heating gases than the average boiler does. Further, patented baffles direct the water over the hottest part of the boiler.
That's why it absorbs so much more heat from the same amount of fuel . . . why it takes so much less coal or oil to produce the same temperature in your home.
And as long as you're paying for heat in the fuel you buy, why not get it?
Why waste a big part of every heating dollar with a worn-out heating plant when a Crane Boiler pays for itself?
"I have been a user of a Crane Boiler for several years and deem it to be one of the best boilers manufactured. I consider it to be a great fuel saver and I can cheerfully recommend it to any one in need of a boiler." E. C. WAYLAND, Piedmont, Mo.
That's not an unusual letter. We have hundreds like it telling of Crane comfort, convenience and economy.

Money in the bank and a warmer, happier, healthier home to live in. That's what Crane can do for you the minute you say the word.
The greater comfort a Crane Boiler gives you is worth paying a lot more for. And yet you actually pay far less. You win both ways. That's because Crane Boilers use less fuel to give you more heat.
Easy Terms— No Money Down
On the Crane Finance Plan, you don't pay a single cent down. And you have 3 years to pay on easy terms at government rates. Fuel savings will help pay the bill!
That applies to an entire new Crane Heating System as well as to the Boiler alone.

CONVICT KILLED, PAL SHOT IN GEORGIA BREAK

Guard Murdered When Pair Escapes—They Are Trapped in Swamp.

By the Associated Press.

ATLANTA, Ga., Aug. 29. — A young convict was shot to death tonight after an escape from a chain gang in which a guard was killed. Another convict, his companion, was seriously wounded.

Dekalb County Warden E. W. Weir said both fugitives at first were thought to have been killed in a fight which took place when pursuers trapped them in a swamp, but later at the Stockade Hospital one was found to be alive.

The prisoner who was killed was Charles Brown, 19 years old. The wounded prisoner was Theron Cranston, 22. The convicts fled in a laundry truck they seized early today in a desperate break that cost the life of guard Clyde Gresham.

Authorities said Cranston fired a bullet into Gresham's abdomen as a third prisoner, who did not escape, held the guard's arm, preventing him from drawing his own pistol. Cranston snatched the pistol he used in the break from another guard.

The break occurred in a fashionable residential district between Atlanta and suburban Decatur, seat of Dekalb County, where the convicts were working on a highway.

RICHARD BERGER'S NEW MUNICIPAL OPERA JOB

As Production Manager He Will Work Directly Under Committee.

Richard Berger, for the last two years manager of productions for Laurence Schwab at the open air theater in Forest Park, has been appointed production manager for the 1937 Municipal Opera season, the Municipal Theater Association announced last night.

Schwab relinquished his post as producing director for the association two weeks ago when he signed a contract as associate producer for the Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation, a position which will require his full time in Hollywood.

Berger has been associated with various Schwab enterprises for the last 10 years. His theatrical career started in the box office. Seven years ago he became Schwab's personal assistant in the casting and staging of plays in New York.

In his new position Berger will be under the direct supervision of the Municipal Opera's Executive Committee. This committee will pass on all details of the Forest Park productions. Berger will be a full-time employe of the Municipal Theater Association and during the winter will have his headquarters in an office to be opened by the association in New York.

She was 79 years old. After joining the order in Emmitsburg, Md., she was assigned to an orphanage in California before being sent to the technical school here.

PLASTERING FIRM LOW ON BID AGAIN LOSES JOB

For Fourth Time Keystone Co. Is Unable to Hire Men After Getting Award.

The Keystone Plastering Co., 5463 Queens avenue, which in the last year has been forced to give up three large jobs on public buildings because it was unable to get union men to do its work, has lost another job for the same reason.

This time it is the work of plastering the nurses' home for the new Homer G. Phillips Hospital for Negroes at Whittier street and St. Ferdinand avenue, for which the Keystone company submitted the low bid of $19,989. Ever since it was awarded the job by the Pelligreen Construction and Investment Co., general contractors on the building, it has been waiting around to get union workmen.

Two weeks ago, however, Lee B. Pelligreen, president of the general contracting firm, notified William C. E. Becker, chief engineer for building construction for the city, that the Keystone company apparently was unable to get men to do the work and that he would therefore give the contract to the L. Tackser Plastering Co., 817 North Ninth street. The Tackser company's bid was for $24,600.

A 25 Per Cent Increase.

Becker said he would approve the change provided there would be no difference in the amount of the contract which the general contractor held with the city. Pelligreen agreed to this, and he must apparently bear the difference of almost $5000, or a 25 per cent increase in the cost of the plastering job.

The Public Works Administration, which made a 30 per cent grant toward the cost of the building, also has approved the change.

Informed of the change in plasterers, Charles H. Schaffner, secretary of the Keystone Company, said to a Post-Dispatch reporter: "That doesn't seem like any way to do business to me. But we're still waiting for union men and we're going to keep on waiting. Nobody's going to run us out of business."

The situation which prevails in this instance is the same as occurred when the Keystone company lost its other three jobs, on each of which it made the low bid. These were for the plastering work on the arena part of the new Municipal Auditorium, the south wing of the Phillips Hospital, and on the new high school being built at Kingshighway boulevard and Arsenal street.

It was after the loss of the Auditorium job that the Federal Government began an investigation of the plastering and plasterers' union situation in St. Louis, which ultimately resulted in the indictment by the Federal grand jury of five plastering contractors and four union officers on charges of conspiracy to defraud the Government by fixing excessive prices on public works plastering jobs.

"Violation of Union Rules."

One of the indicted union officers, William Anderson, business agent of the Plasterers' Union, when asked at the time of the loss of the earlier jobs by the Keystone company why this company had been placed on the union's unfair list, replied that the company was guilty of "violation of union rules." He would not elaborate that statement.

The Federal indictments charges that the nine defendants, by obtaining control of the Plasterers' and Lathers' unions and setting up their own contractors' association, dominated the whole field in the city and forced, or attempted to force, all contractors to do their will by threats of bodily harm and by impairing or cutting off their labor supply.

Pelligreen informed Becker that the Tackser company had begun the plastering work at the nurses' home. Pelligreen's contract for the building is for $241,900.

LANDON SEEKS JOINT RAIL RATE CUT TO DROUTH AREAS

Individual Reductions on Feed and Cattle Fail to Benefit Some Farmers, He Says.

TOPEKA, Kan., Aug. 29.—Gov. Alf M. Landon said today western railroads had "turned us down twice" on requests that emergency freight cuts on feed and cattle shipments in the drouth area be made joint—that is, effective on shipments moving over more than one line.

Landon explained that while the carriers had made effective emergency freight rates for drouth shipments, there was on joint schedule so that the cut rates would apply to feed shipments moving over two roads.

(The emergency rates are 66 2-3 per cent of normal on hay; 50 per cent on forage crops and a one-way fare for round-trip shipments of foundation herds out of the drouth area and back again.)

"For example, a farmer living on the Santa Fe gets an emergency rate on feed shipments originating on that line," said Gov. Landon, "but if he lives on another line and the shipment originates on the Santa Fe he won't get it. The emergency rates are effective on all lines individually, but only the Santa Fe has been willing to make them joint."

The Republican presidential nomniee has designated Prof. L. E. Call and Prof. W. E. Grimes of Kansas State College to accompany him to the Des Moines drouth conference with President Roosevelt and the Governors of Nebraska, Iowa, Missouri and Oklahoma. He said he had been notified that, because of the death of Secretary of War Dern, the conference would be held Sept. 3, instead of Sept. 1 as originally scheduled.

SUIT TO SET ASIDE WILL OF MRS. MARGARET MULDERIG

Two Nephews File Action as Heirs at Law, Claiming One-Fifth Interest in Estate.

A petition seeking to set aside the will of Mrs. Margaret Pickel Mulderig, who died Jan. 12, was filed in Circuit Court yesterday by her nephews, Fred Pickel Jr. and James Pickel, residing in St. Louis County. Mrs. Mulderig left the bulk of her estate to two sisters, Mrs. Anna P. Koch and Mrs. Mary L. Feldman.

The plaintiffs, who are the children of Fred Pickel, a deceased brother of Mrs. Mulderig, allege their aunt was not of sound mind when she executed the will last Nov. 9. They were not included among the beneficiaries. Their attorney, Louis H. Steffen, estimated the value of the estate at $35,000.

Mrs. Feldman and Mrs. Koch were named as executors. They could not be reached. The plaintiffs filed the suit as heirs-at-law, contending they are entitled to a one-fifth interest.

BROKER BLIND FOR 40 YEARS SELLS FIRM

Albert J. Wright of Buffalo Tells How He "Kept On" Despite Affliction.

By the Associated Press.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Aug. 29.—Albert J. Wright, Buffalo broker, art connoisseur, author and traveler, stood before the employes of A. J. Wright & Co. tonight and told them that on Monday the business of the 71-year-old brokerage house would be absorbed by a New York firm. One hundred and fifty employes from New York, Pennsylvania and Canada offices attended.

At home, before the meeting, Wright discussed for the first time for publication the total blindness with which he was stricken 40 years ago.

"I have rarely spoken of it," he said. "I have, perhaps, been sensitive about it. At any rate I have never talked about my blindness or allowed others to. It was a baseball accident when I was an undergraduate in college. It bothered me for four or five months. Then I recovered, completely, it seemed. Ten years later my sight started to go. Nothing could stop it.

"I kept right on, however. I wouldn't let anything stop me. I wanted to continue my father's business and did."

Many of Wright's customers did not know for years that the broker was totally blind. He trained himself to lose the outward characteristics of a blind man. His mind became an index of facts and figures. He knew at the opening and closing of the grain and stock markets just how his customers' accounts stood and issued orders accordingly. It was said Wright never erred in figures.

Wright was married July 14, 1931, to Miss Tatiana Moslova, member of an English-Russian family. Shortly afterward he wrote and published "The Red Demon," a piece of fiction involving a plot against the gold standard and a love story.

Wright retains his memberships on the New York Stock Exchange and the Chicago Board of Trade.

"I plan to be less active in business, but I will still be at my office each day and I have a lot of other things to do," he said.

FIRE AT BROOM FACTORY; FINISHED STOCK SAVED

Damage Estimated at $2500 by Samuel Wiber, Owner of Plant at 1410 Dodier Street.

A small fire that broke out on the first floor of a two-story broom factory at 1410 Dodier street at 3 p. m. yesterday was quickly extinguished by firemen, who threw burning broom corn, stored on the first floor, into the street.

Damage was estimated at $2500 by the owner, Samuel Wiber. A stock of finished brooms on the second floor was undamaged. The loss was insured. No one was in the building when the blaze started. How it started was not determined.

Whiting
THE AUTOMATIC BURNER THAT PAYS ITS OWN WAY

● Homes have been heated automatically for some time—but mostly with high-priced fuels! How many families could afford such burners? Then the 52-year-old Whiting Corporation perfected a wonderful, new coal burner—the Whiting Stoker—a burner that actually costs no more to operate than hand-firing with coal. In most cases, much less! The reason is that the Whiting Stoker doesn't waste fuel the way a hand-fired furnace does and burns less expensive coal. Many Whiting owners save as much as $2 to $4 a ton. Today, practically every family can afford the luxury of Whiting automatic heat. In fact, the savings made by a Whiting Stoker should easily meet the payments on it. That means you'll get the automatic comforts of a Whiting for nothing. Thermostat temperature control. No fires to make in the morning or to "bank" at night. No smoke or ashes. Safe, clean heating with steady, even, healthful temperatures. Is it any wonder that Whiting sales, last season, were four times as large as the year before? Let us show you how a Whiting can pay its own way in your home.

WHAT WHITING OWNERS SAY...
[* Names upon request]
* "The Whiting, according to my calculations, will pay for itself in a very few years in money saved, besides the satisfaction in having uniform heat continuously, and the smoke and ash problem solved forever. We have enjoyed our home this winter as never before."—Mr. M. H. B.
* "Savings will easily pay for the cost of the stoker over a three-year period—saying nothing of the satisfaction of having an even heat at all times during the most severe winter I ever experienced."—Mr. H. B. S.
* "Our stoker will be paid for out of savings in less than two years."—Mr. J. B.

New 1937 Studebaker Cars Introduced at Dealers' Meeting Here

Many Improvements in Cars Outlined by Salesmanager of Corporation at Session Here.

L. K. Manley, salesmanager for the Studebaker Corporation, South Bend, Ind., and other executives, attended a meeting and luncheon attended by 153 dealers and salesmen from the St. Louis territory, that was held at Hotel Chase on Monday. At the meeting, the 1937 Studebaker car was introduced to the dealers.

The meeting was opened by Arthur R. Lindburg, president of A. R. Lindburg, Inc., the Studebaker distributer here, who introduced R. F. Gloster, Studebaker regional branch manager, to conduct the session.

A two-reel motion picture; in which Paul Hoffman, president of the Studebaker Corporation, took a part, outlined the many improvements made in the 1937 Studebaker models and covered a tour of the factory at South Bend, and the processes that go into the making of Studebakers.

Sales Manager Manley also discussed improvements for the 1937 cars, and outlined sales promotion plans with a representative of the Roche, Williams & Cunningham Advertising Co.

J. H. Lindner, in charge of the wholesale department, said, after the meeting, that the dealers and salesmen drove home one to three cars for each dealership represented. So, every dealer in the St. Louis territory now has for disiplay at least one of the new 1937 Studebakers.

Ten Improvements Added to Ford V-8 Since Last October

Ten important improvements have been added to the 1936 Ford V-8 since it was announced to the public last October, according to local Ford dealers.

This is in line wtih Henry Ford's policy, adopted many years ago, of making improvements available as soon as they are perfected without waiting for yearly model changes. The improvements include:

A new "economy" dual down draft carburetor, permitting use of a "leaner" fuel mixture, without lessening performance. More economical "stop-and-go" driving is made possible by a new accelerating pump.

A new "economy" rear axle, with a ratio of 3.78-to-1, which reduces materially engine speed in relation to car speed and is an important factor in fuel saving.

New interiors for both de luxe and standard body types, new fittings for the de luxe types, new colors—armory green and light-fast maroon—in de luxe types, and the addition of mohair upholstery for standard types.

Addition of four new body types—the tudor and fordor touring sedans, the club cabriolet and the convertible sedan.

Among the other improvements are a new design cast steel alloy crankshaft with increased weight and increased bearing surfaces, new crankshaft bearings of steel-backed type; positive lubrication of cantilever type car springs; improved water pump design intended to increase the speed of circulation of cooling water; improved oil pump design and the production of the "high wheeler" car for use in rough country where roads are unpaved and ruts deep.

Packard Preparing for Production Far Beyond Any in Past

Soon Will Be Making Four New Lines of Automobiles for 1937, Gilman Says.

Anticipating a production in the next 12 months which will far exceed that of any year in its history, the Packard Motor Car Co. is more than doubling the productive capacity of its plant, it is announced by M. M. Gilman, vice-president and general manager. The cost is in excess of $5,100,000, Gilman said.

"Present expansion activities," he says, "mark the completion of a general development and manufacturing expansion program on which the Packard company will have expended $18,000,000. We launched this program in our preparations for the One Twenty car.

"More than $7,000,000 was spent two years ago for plant rearrangement and quantities of ultra-modern machinery. Our current activities include purchase of further large quantities of machinery and plant equipment and additional factory rearrangement. Shortly we expect to be able to produce fully twice as many cars as at present. We confidently expect to use all of this increased productive capacity to its utmost during the next 12 months."

Gilman says that the big milelong plant is being entirely rearranged and soon will be in production on four complete lines of new automobiles for 1937.

Many of the new machines which Packard has just installed have aroused intense interest in the industry. They are said to be revolutionary in character and the first of their kind ever built.

Campaign to Minimize Danger on Highways by Replacing of Worn Tires

A "round-up" campaign, aimed at getting unsafe tires off cars in the St. Louis area, is being conducted by Goodrich Silvertown, W. G. Wilkins, manager, notes, and will be continued through September.

It is highly important in the interest of safety, Wilkins points out, that these tires be replaced with new, safe casings. He reminds, also, that the danger from worn tires is not only to the car driver and his passenger, but also to other drivers and everyone using the streets and highways.

The Goodrich Silvertown lifesaver, golden ply tire, Wilkins says, is designed especially for prevention of blowouts.

Pontiac Cars Carry Constant Reminder Of High Speed Peril

The Pontiac Motor Co., in view of the safety drive being waged against the rising tide of automobile deaths, is building into its 1936 "Silver Streak" sixes and eights a constant warning.

Imprinted on the face of the speedometer dial near the 50-mile-an-hour mark, the two words, "Safety-First," offer a permanent reminder to the driver that excessive speeds are dangerous.

Thousands of letters from Pontiac owners have been received complimenting the factory on the inclusion of this warning on the speedometer dial, as well as praise from State Highway Safety Commissions and other organizations whose aim is the reduction of the annual highway death toll.

Buick Registers Fourth of Increase in Cars Priced Over $700

Unusual expansion in the market for medium and upper medium priced automobiles cited by W. F. Hufstader, general sales manager of the Buick Motor Co.

He commented on the large share of the increase obtained by Buick, saying that the sales of Buick automobiles having accounted for more than a fourth of the entire gain in registrations of all new cars priced above $700.

"According to latest available registration statistics, covering the first six months of the year, there has been a gain in 1936 over 1935 of 45.1 per cent in the sales of cars in the price groups referred to," Hufstader said. "As against this price class increase, Buick sales have shown a gain of approximately 140 per cent. Of a net gain of 181,200 units reported for the price groups as a whole, which include 19 makes of automobiles, Buick accounted for 47,900, or 26.1 per cent."

Sales of Buick cars have been running in unusually heavy volume during the summer Hufstader said, deliveries in July having been the largest experienced by the company in that month in seven years. During the month, a total of 14,724 new cars were delivered at retail to customers in the United States as compared with 16,354 in June and 6002 in July a year ago.

Chevrolet Truck Runs 38 Miles in 12 Months Daily Service

It is asserted that a Chevrolet truck, used by Eastern Air Lines for refueling planes at Jacksonville, Fla., has set the world's short-haul record, with a total of 38 miles registered on the speedometer after 12 months of daily service. Every day it makes eight roundtrips. It backs up, non-stop, for 35 feet. Then it refuels a plane and makes a forward non-stop run of 35 feet. There it rests until it is time to do it all over again.

The truck is one of a fleet of four 1½-ton trucks, the others being located at Atlanta, Washington and Newark. Each has a capacity of 510 gallons of 80-octane gas and 150 gallons of 87-octane. The latter contains more lead, and is used only on take-offs. Sixty gallons per minute are pumped from the truck into the Douglas planes, a total of 1500 gallons per day in the summer. As a matter of fact, it is expected that 2500 gallons will be used every day next winter when extra sections will be flown to take care of the New York and Chicago-Miami business.

The "Champ," as the airport crew calls it, has three drivers but no state license, since it operates entirely on the company property.

The truck would have to be in service 5812 years to equal the 225,000 miles run by several Chevrolet trucks.

British Motorists on Motorcade Tour in U. S. and Canada

Eighty members of the Junior Car Club of Great Britain brought their own English-made automobiles aboard the Queen Mary for the first of three motorcade tours this summer in the United States and Canada.

Thirty-four cars of 22 different makes were shipped, including two miniature Riley's and two Rolls Royces. As the cars were swung off the ship, the Englishmen and their wives took American driving tests and got New York State license plates for touring in this country.

The complete trip covers 2000 miles from New York to Montreal, by way of Washington, D. C., Uniontown, Pa., Detroit and Niagara Falls.

Many of the party expressed amazement at the price of the American-made automobiles they saw on the pier and of gasoline. They said petrol in London costs about 40 cents a gallon. France, it's even higher.

They admitted that a car comparable to the Plymouth sedan, for example, would cost about $1800. Its size and beauty obviously impressed the Englishmen, and some of them personally inspected the powerful Plymouth engine and the floating power engine mountings which prevent vibration from reaching the frame.

A "fair weather" insurance policy covers the party while it is en route, offering each Junior Car Club member $15 a day whenever weather conditions make driving difficult. Under the terms of the contract, a rainy morning is worth about $7.50.

Pontiac Introducing New Car Servicing Plan for Its Owners

An innovation in new car service policies is being introduced through the dealer organization of the Pontiac Motor Company.

"Heretofore, it has been necessary for new car buyers to have their cars serviced at the 500 and 1500 mile marks in the shops of the dealers where they bought their cars," C. P. Simpson, vice-president, said.

"Often owners have had to go out of their way to drive back to the point of purchase. In the summer, this has frequently meant additional expense to the owner for service given gratis by the factory and dealer.

"The new service plan is simple in operation, permitting owners of new Pontiacs to have their cars serviced by any authorized Pontiac dealer in the United States. All they have to do is to present their service identification cards to the dealer and the work is done free, according to Pontiac's service plan.

"Two coupons are attached to the service certificates presented to new car buyers, one of the 500, the other for the 1500 mile checkup. If a Pontiac owner is out of town, even in a distant part of the country, all he has to do is go to the nearest Pontiac dealer for his checkup.

"At the completion of the work the coupon is detached from the certificate and mailed to the Pontiac factory. The dealer who did the work is credited for his expense, and the dealer where the owner bought his car is charged a like amount."

Demand for Space At New York Show Opening Nov. 11 Heavy

With all available space for cars and trucks taken at the drawing a few weeks ago, announcement is made that the exhibition of trailers and accessories will require another floor of Grand Central Palace, in New York, when the National Automobile Show opens Nov. 11.

Increasing interest in trailers, these new "homes on wheels," which have recently attained popularity throughout the country, has necessitated a special section of the fourth floor with all the surroundings that go with trailer camps.

In additon to the cabin types, there will be the smaller two-wheeled affairs for carrying light loads as well as exhibits of accessories adapted to trailer use. These will all be exhibited on the fourth floor, reached by six elevators.

This floor will be appropriately decorated and converted into an outdoor setting for the trailer exhibit, providing a National Park atmosphere.

Among companies already listed to show trailers are: Covered Wagon Co., Mount Clemens, Mich.; Federal Motor Truck Co., Detroit, Mich.; Hayes Body Corporation, Grand Rapids, Mich.; Kozy Coach Co., Kalamazoo, Mich.; Mullins Manufacturing Corporation, Salem, O.; Palace Travel Coach Corporation, Flint Mich.; Pierce-Arrow Motor Corporation, Buffalo, N. Y.; Schult Trailers, Inc., Elkhart, Ind. and Split Coach Motor Corporation, York, Pa.

Quebec Simplifies Entry Rules.

For the benefit of American tourists entering Quebec, the entry regulations have been further simplified, it is announced. A permit, good for six months, is obtained at the entry ports without payment of any fee or duty. No separate permit is required for automobile trailers, and sporting and camping equipment may now be taken in without duty or deposit.

Factories Reckon Advantages From November Auto Shows

Also See Continuing Replacement Demand Helping to Develop Car Sales.

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Aug. 29.—Nearing the end of its first "working year" under the new policy of changing models in the fall instead of at the beginning of the year, the motorcar industry is reckoning many advantages as directly due to swinging into new type output at a period that normally ushers in a slack season.

For more than 30 years the motorcar industry held its annual shows in January and while model changes were made at various times during the year, in a general way, new model production was timed for the first-of-the-year show periods. As soon as the industry reached the volume production stage the year-end weeks brought a "lean" period for producer and employe.

The feeling of the producers toward the new policy is indicated in a statement by the Automobile Manufacturers' Association that the January national shows have gone permanently into the discard along with many other traditions of the industry.

Specifically, the makers of motorcars believe they have found in the late-year activity that results from swinging more than a dozen producing units into new model work the solution to the problem of maintaining employment on something approximating an even level throughout the year. They agree that re-tooling operations necessary to converting plants from one model to another involves some slowing down and some idleness. At the same time under the pressure of a retail demand that has seemingly been spread more completely over the year, idleness has been reduced to only a fraction of what it was under the old order that had production and distribution almost at a standstill in the final quarter of the year.

The producers concede that much of the success attending the new policy during the past year has been due to a larger consumer demand than they expected. They add, however, that barring some complication wholly unlooked for at present, retail demand must continue upward for a considerable period if all the vehicles now overdue at the scrap heap are to be replaced. It has been suggested in authoritative quarters that more than half the 26,000,000 cars and trucks now registered in the United States are in that state of mechanical obsolescence that makes replacement practically imperative within the next two or three years.

Even were there no first car buyers during that period, say sales executives, replacement output alone could keep the assembly lines working at high levels.

Others have been replaced from dump heaps as they dropped off. About 10 cars are represented in the present unit.

BOUNDARY CHANGES IN 60 PRECINCTS

Election Board Also Adds Voting District in 24th Ward.

Boundaries of about 60 voting precincts, principally in the northwest and southwest sections of the city, have been changed for the September registration and November election, with a view to a better distribution of the voting population.

In addition, a precinct has been added in the Twenty-fourth Ward, increasing the number of voting precincts in the city to 670. The official number, however, is 671, the additional precinct being the Fourth of the Sixth Ward, which consists of the Memorial Plaza and contains no voters, but remains in legal existence to fill out the number of precincts in a Justice of the Peace district.

In response to an inquiry by a Post-Dispatch reporter, John J. Kelly, Election Board clerk, said yesterday, the boundaries were changed by the Board last June with the provision that they would not be effective until the registration of Sept. 21-24. Kelly said that some precincts were enlarged, some made smaller, the general plan being to have about 600 voters in each precinct.

No changes were made, however, in the precinct boundaries of the downtown river wards, the Fourth, Fifth and Sixth, where some of the most flagrant registration frauds were exposed by the Post-Dispatch, and where, in some cases, there are 1400 registered voters to a precinct. Election Commissioner Stephen M. Wagner, a Republican, said, in response to a question that the Board had not definitely decided whether to make further revisions or to revise the boundaries in the downtown wards.

FIVE DEFENDANTS DENY ARKANSAS FLOGGINGS

Men Sued in Federal Court at Jonesboro for Total of $45,000 in Damages.

By the Associated Press.

JONESBORO, Ark., Aug. 29.—Miss Willie Sue Blagden, of Memphis, who alleged that she was flogged in East Arkansas in June in connection with the sharecropper controversy there, filed a damage suit in United States District Court today, charging five men with the attack.

Another woman and a man filed similar suits at the same time, also alleging they had been beaten in Crittenden County. Damages of $15,000 were asked in each of the three actions, which involved some of the same defendants.

All of the defendants denied today that they flogged Miss Blagden. John "Boss" Dulaney, planter, said: "I never laid one lash on her, and I don't know a thing in the world about it."

Miss Blagden alleged she was whipped by five men when she went to Earl, Ark., last June 15, accompanied by the Rev. Claude C. Williams, to investigate the reported death of a Negro sharecropper. She alleged that the assault made her "sick, sore, lame and bruised," that her "nervous system was permanently disabled" and that she suffered "mental and physical anguish and humiliation."

She asked for $5000 actual damages and $10,000 punitive damages from Dulaney, Earl Cherry, Ernest Richards, Tony Thompson and Percy Magnus, all described as residents of Crittenden County.

The Southern Tenant Farmers' Union, which was sponsoring a strike in East Arkansas cotton fields at the time of the alleged attack, announced recently in Memphis that Miss Blagden and others would file the suits.

Also filing $15,000 damage suits here today were Eliza Nolden, formerly of Earl, now of Memphis; and J. M. Reese, who said he was from Bolivar County, Miss. The Nolden suit named as defendants H. S. Watson, Boss Dulaney, Percy Magnus and L. L. Barham. It alleged that on June 8, the plaintiff was seized in Earl by Watson, Dulaney, and Magnus and was struck with a stick.

Reese named as defendants in his suit, Percy Magnus, H. S. Watson, Boss Dulaney, Earle Richards and L. L. Barham. He charges that on June 8 he was assaulted on the highway with sticks and ax-handles.

Fisherman Killed in Gale.

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 29.—A gale drove a 32-foot lobster boat onto the rocks of Gooseberry Island today, killing one man and injuring his companion. Battered by waves as he struggled to free himself from between two rocks, Henry St. C. Curll, 60 years old, of Newport, died shortly after being taken ashore. His companion, Ernest H. Shellman, 65, was found suffering from a dislocated shoulder.

Normal Production of Body Heat Factor in Epidemic of Deaths In Summer in Northern U. S.

Temperatures Higher Farther South, But There People Are Adjusted to Them, Ohio Doctor Says.

By DR. CLARENCE A. MILLS, Professor of Experimental Medicine, University of Cincinnati.

Written for the Associated Press.

CINCINNATI, Aug. 29.—The severe epidemic of heat deaths of 1936, coming so soon after the scourging of the 1934 heat, has made the people of America very conscious that they do have a heat problem to face.

Summer dress in the North has gradually trended more and more toward tropical styles for both children and adults, as summer temperatures have gradually risen through the years. Particularly with the children has the primitive breech clout stage been most closely approached. All of which has been along sensible lines and a change to be encouraged, but still it is in line with other evidences that north temperate America is slowly tending more toward subtropical summer conditions.

There has arisen, too, in many inquiring minds the question as to why heat effects should be so much more severe and deaths more frequent with heat waves in the North than with the more commonly prevailing heat of equal severity further toward the tropics.

Where Most Deaths Occur.

Temperatures of states to the south and southwest of Kansas are usually higher in summer heat than are those of the regions lying north from Kansas. Yet the severe epidemics of heat deaths usually occur in the upper half of the Mississippi River basin—Kansas City, Omaha, St. Louis, Springfield, Indianapolis, Cincinnati and Columbus.

Farther north the heat was a little less severe, but in the Southwest temperatures equally high failed to causes unusual mortality. In 1936 the high temperatures extended farther north and most deaths came in the northern tier of states of the Middle West. Kansas City in 1936 still had more prolonged heat than did the cities further north, but her heat deaths became negligible as compared with her 1934 scourge.

Reason for Sensitivity to Heat.

The reason for this greater sensitivity to heat of people living under cooler climates lies in the level of body heat production. In 1933 an article was published in the American Journal of Hygiene bearing on this very question, in which it was shown that animals became increasingly sensitive to heat prostration and death the lower the temperature to which they were adapted, while those adapted to higher temperatures successfully endured heat that quickly killed those from cool environments.

Great variability of the environmental temperature, such as frequent storm changes bring, still further increased the sensitivity to heat, making even the animals living in warm environments heat sensitive. Cool environments, making body heat loses easy, lead to high internal heat production, while external warmth suppresses body combustion. With the sudden onset of high temperatures, however, the body may be unable to suppress its internal fires with sufficient rapidity to avoid fever and heat stroke.

Cause of Heat-Strokes.

This is what happens when sudden severe heat waves afflict north temperate regions where the people are living at an active energy level. In the South equally high temperatures are less troublesome because the population is already attuned to a lower level of body combustion and can more easily meet the external heat by the appropriate banking of internal fires.

It has long been known that north temperate people going into tropical heat need to be particularly careful of the heat for the first year or two until they become acclimated. This acclimatization we now know involves a distinct banking of body fires, a fall in blood pressure, and in general a more relaxed, less strenuous existence.

With recent years the Upper Mississippi Valley has had brought to its population the heat problems people in past decades normally experienced only on journeying to tropical or subtropical regions.

Other Factors in Deaths From Heat.

The great storminess and cold of last winter and spring, followed by the sudden heat of July were the factors that were responsible for the thousands of deaths in the northernmost states of the Middle West.

The next two winters are likely also to be cold and stormy, and the summers somewhat less given to severe heat, for we are in the period of increasing sun spots when the temperate zones are usually cooler and more stormy. But following that the uptrend of the last 80 years will most likely be resumed, necessitating our continuance of heat adaptation.

Air conditioning enters the picture in summer heat effects, for by it complete relief can be obtained for the indoor workers of the cities where heat deaths are most frequent. Cooling of either sleeping quarters or day-time work rooms will give a large measure of relief. The person subjecting himself to cooling for a part of each day should bear in mind, however, that by keeping his body heat production up he has made himself more sensitive to external heat when he must leave his cooled quarters. A few hours of heat can be much more safely endured, though, than can whole periods of several days. Mortality usually rises to its peak after seven to 10 days of high temperatures.

Summer cooling of living quarters offers, therefore, a fair protection against heat effect, even though the individual cannot remain at all times in the cooled environment. In this picture of generally rising world temperatures, more complete control of interior environment comes to assume a place of great importance, just now great we can as yet little more than guess.

ARABS SEND ULTIMATUM TO BRITONS IN PALESTINE

Will Recognize British Commission Only If Government Will Abide By Its Verdict.

JERUSALEM, Aug. 29 (Jewish Telegraphic Agency).—High Commissioner Sir Arthur Grenfell Wauchope was informed tonight that Arab leaders would recognize the British Royal Commission, empowered last month to investigate recent disorders in Palestine, only on condition that the Government pledge itself to carry out findings of the commission.

The ultimatum was presented after influential Arabs, including members of the Arab Supreme Committee and an unofficial Arab delegation which returned from London several days ago, met at a tea given by Dr. Hussein Khalidi, Mayor of Jerusalem. They discussed proposals made by the Iraq Foreign Minister, Nuri Pasha Essaid, acting as intermediary between the Palestine Government and the Arabs.

Although Arab circles were optimistic of achieving results at tomorrow's session of the conference, a rift in the Arab united front appeared. Followers of Ragheb Bey Nashashibi, former Mayor of Jerusalem, have agreed to call a separate conference, even if it should mean breaking off with the Arab Supreme Committee, unless Nuri Pasha's proposals are accepted.

Industrial Improvement Reports And Lessening of Foreign Tension Form Favorable Market Background

Stocks Recover the Ground Lost in Preceding Week—Sustained Activity in the Steel Industry Cited in Week's News.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 29.—Robust industrial improvement and lessening of foreign tension provided financial markets with a more favorable background this week.

After a sluggish start equities gathered momentum and recovered ground lost in the previous week. That the share market got away to an indifferent start was attributed by financial circles to the absence of any fresh influence.

On Thursday traders, encouraged by the comparative lack of liquidation on the preceding day's decline, stepped in and bid the list up aggressively.

Fuel for bullish enthusiasms was contained in the spectacle of sustained activity in the steel industry, a new record for electric power production and the sharp July earnings gain scored by several railroads.

The rally included rails, steels, chemicals, oils, motors and industrial specialties.

As the market neared the finish line, the advance lost some of its speed. The manner in which volume of trading held up and the limited size of price changes was seen by some as a symptom of hesitancy.

See Low Money Rates.

Most of those attempting to sense the drift of trade and industry this fall emphasized their faith in continuance of general betterment.

While the slackening of grain shipments owing to drouth was disappointing, encouragement was to be had from the expansion of loadings of miscellaneous products, it was said.

In the bond market the drive of U. S. Government obligations to unprecedented peaks was said to have had considerable significance. As some saw it, this demand for treasury issues meant that the financial community does not expect Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau to ask for new money in his mid-September financing operations.

Meanwhile the impression prevailed throughout Wall Street that money rates would probably continue low for some time yet. The jump of $80,000,000 in excess reserves for the week ended Wednesday to $1,890,000,000 was seen as affording neart-erm technical support to the loan market.

Sales during the week amounted to 5,843,270 shares, compared with 5,501,540 last week and 7,197,280 the corresponding week last year. Total sales from Jan. 1 to date were 320,920,044 shares, compared with 197,332,878 a year ago and 253,135,643 two years ago.

Rail Shares Advance.

The rails, slowing down only briefly for profit-taking grades, rolled up another impressive advance in today's brief session.

Buying forces, buoyed by earnings statements and signs of sharply expanding passenger and freight traffic, climbed aboard carriers in the final hour and rode them for gains of fractions to two or more points.

The alcohols and a number of specialties put up a show of strength based principally on actual and prospective business improvement and hopes of further increased dividends.

Many recent industrial favorites were unable to get very far past realizing barriers and the majority finished little better than even. The utilities, on the whole, were slightly improved.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was up two-tenths of a point at 68. That for the rails advanced eight-tenths, while the industrials were unchanged and the utilities average was ahead one-tenth. Transfers totaled 618,350 shares, against 431,830 last Saturday.

Drawing renewed attention to the transportation group was the survey of the Association of American Railroads disclosing that July net operating income of 113 class 1 lines was about 129 per cent above the same month last year.

Some distilling shares took a turn for the better on report that price cutting had abated throughout the industry and a boost in whisky was likely soon.

Steels Improve Moderately.

Steels improved moderately as optimism was still in evidence regarding the outlook for a high rate of mill operations over the balance of 1935. But realizing cropped up early in this department.

Motors were inclined to mark time, although R. L. Polk & Co. announced that registrations for new trucks and commercial cars last month were the largest for any such period in the history of automobile makers.

Demand for carriers was reflected in an upturn of several equipment issues. Companies in this category feel that, with rail earnings on the jump, some roads will soon begin to come into the market for replacements and new materials.

Helpful to Borg Warner shares was the action of directors in voting the regular quarterly of 75 cents a share and adding an extra of a like amount.

Among the Gainers.

Among the best stock gainers were New York Central at 43⅞, Southern Pacific at 43, Baltimore & Ohio at 23⅝, Lackawanna at 19⅞, Atlantic Coast Line at 33¼, Southern Railway at 22¾, Santa Fe at 82⅞, Union Pacific at 143, Bucyrus-Erie at 14¾, Distillers Corporation-Seagrams at 25¾, Borg-Warner at 76½, Interlake Iron at 12⅛, Montgomery Ward at 47, Crosley Radio at 33½, Baldwin Locomotive preferred at 49, American Car and Foundry at 45¼, American Commercial Alcohol at 28¼, National Distillers at 30⅛, American Sugar Refining at 63⅝, Bethlehem at 67⅝ and Murray Corporation at 20⅝.

Corn at Chicago was off ⅝ to up 1¾ cents a bushel and wheat was ¾ to 1¼ improved. Cotton yielded 25 to 40 cents a bale.

Railway bonds were firm and other listed loans were steady. Foreign currencies held to a restricted range.

COMMODITY PRICES SHOW-MIXED TREND

Industrial Group Jumps to New 1936 Peak as Farm List Declines.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 29.—Rising industrial activity and a downward revision in drouth damage to crops, forced industrial and farm commodity price trends to part ways this week; the former jumping to a new 1936 peak, the latter dipping.

Available supplies of industrial staples have been cut sharply in recent months by the high rate of business activity. Corporation managements have kept inventories so low that a sustained improvement—industrial activity is currently at the mid-1930 level—sent buyers into the market to make up deficiencies.

The farmers' principal stock in trade, on the other hand, have been soaring steadily in recent months as drouth walked the Western plains leaving burned crops in its wake. Last week these commodities touched the year's top.

Views Revised Upward.

This week, however, opinions on the harvest were reconsidered in the light of recent rain in the parched areas and revised upward. This led to liquidation of many long positions.

The Associated Press weighted index of wholesale commodities dropped to 79.77 per cent of the 1926 average, from 80.34 last week, and compares with 74.87 in the same week a year ago.

All grains plunged downward on the basis of smaller damage reports, including corn, wheat, oats and rye. Cotton moved off, with larger crop prospects offsetting the high rate of operations in the textile industry.

Foods eased under the impetus supplied by agricultural products. Flour, lard and butter joined the downturn, while eggs and cocoa advanced. The latter shot up to the highest level in three years, with chocolate manufacturers combing the market for sellers.

Livestock was steady, cattle and lambs closing unchanged and hogs losing a fraction.

Textile quotations continued the slow decline of the past month, with trade circles holding that at least part of the setback is due to the inventory position. Although not considered seriously top-heavy, it is said to be somewhat larger than necessary. Wool and silk shared in the reaction.

What Index Shows.

Industrial products, hides, rubber, steel scrap, turpentine and tin were strong.

The index and its components, with 1926 as 100, follows:

FOREIGN EXCHANGE CHANGES NARROW

Conditions Abroad Continue Unsettled—Little Gold Moves From Paris.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 29.—Leading foreign monies fluctuated within a narrow range in terms of the dollar this week as conditions abroad continued unsettled, but showed signs of responding to the efforts of statesmen to straighten out some of the worst kinks.

The British pound sterling moved up and down minor fractions around the $5.03 level, French francs displayed evidences of being virtually "pegged" around the 6.58½-cent rate, and Holland guilders hovered closely around 67.90 cents.

International banking quarters were active in the markets and on each occasion when the French franc slipped below its gold export point engagements of the yellow metal in Paris for shipment outside the country followed. The amount, however, was generally small and was to some extent offset by the homeward flow of French money that had been deposited abroad.

The Spanish peseta continued without an active market in any center, as the moratorium in Spain remained. New York bankers held another conference on the situation and decided to let the peseta contracts accumulate for the time being.

FOREIGN MARKETS AT A GLANCE

LIVERPOOL, Aug. 29.—Wheat futures closed lower in sympathy with the decline in yesterday's North American market and increased Canadian crop prospects.

Cotton declined under hedging, liquidation and scattered selling caused by improved weather conditions and bearish weekly statistics.

London and Paris—Closed on Saturdays.

Consumers' Demand for Steel Products Still Unsatisfied

Ingot Production at 73 Per Cent but Operations Are Behind Demands.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 29.—Consumers' demand for steel products continued unsatisfied last week. Ingot production reached a new peak for the year at 73 per cent, but the step-up in operations was still behind the demand.

Rolling mills are running at 80 to 100 per cent of theoretical capacity, but despite the expansion, the flow of new business exceeds shipments, especially on sheets, shapes and plates.

Interest of the copper trade was focused on the foreign situation. Electrolytic for export advanced 10 points for the week, with the upturn reflecting the unsettled aspect of political affairs abroad and the attendant war preparations. The domestic market was active and unchanged at 9¾ cents a pound.

War talk also affected tin, with the local market taking its cue from London. Prices at the end of the week were ⅝ to ¾ cents higher.

Lead was active and firm at unchanged prices. Producers report the maintenance of a well diversified demand and requests for expedited shipments indicate a steady flow of the metal into actual consumption.

Zinc was the most neglected of the metal group, prices were unchanged and buyers marked time, being covered on necessary commitments for some weeks to come.

Antimony continued to be featured by quietness and the maintenance of prices at unchanged levels.

Financial Notes

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 29.—The Sugar Institute, Inc., reported today the total sugar melt of 13 United States refiners from Jan. 1 to Aug. 22, inclusive, was 2,800,000 long tons, compared with 2,810,000 in the corresponding 1935 period. Deliveries for the comparable periods were placed at 2,440,000 and 2,555,000 long tons, respectively.

Railway Age announced several railroads are contemplating purchase of new equipment. The Rio Grande Do Sul of Brazil was said to have under consideration the ordering of 10 articulated locomotives, 100 stock cars and 300 box cars. The Detroit & Toledo Shore Line, the publication said, is inquiring for three locomotives of the 2-8-2 type. It was also indicated the Chicago & Northwestern is sounding out the market for two seven-car light-weight passenger trains.

Revenues of the transit industry for the week ended Aug. 22 showed continued improvement over last year, the Transit Journal reported following a telegraphic survey of operating transit companies. The Journal's revenue indicator stands at 107.35, using the like 1935 week as 100. On the same basis, the indicator stood at 109.33 for the week ended Aug. 15 last.

Sale of Plant Reported.

By the Associated Press.

ALLIANCE, O., Aug. 29—Officials of the Buckeye Jack Manufacturing Co. announced the sale of its plant today to the Kelvinator Corporation of Detroit and the Dexter Co. of Fairfield, Ia. They said the concerns would manufacture washing machines.

INDUSTRIAL ACTIVITY RATE DIPS SLIGHTLY

Curtailed Output Among Automobile Makers Is Most Important Factor.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug 29.—The industrial front returned mixed reports this week, with advances slightly outweighed by losses.

The Associated Press index of industrial activity dipped to 95.1 from 95.7 a week ago, and compared with 73.6 in the same period last year.

Curtailed output among automobile makers was the most important adverse influence. Although two companies resumed production this week, the number closing down for inventory or new model retooling were the most potent factor.

Carloadings continued to reflect smaller grain shipments occasioned by the drouth. Cotton manufacturing eased a bit as plants adjusted operations to actual demand.

Two important indices of business well-being reached new peaks for the year, electric power production and residential building. Power output mirrored the enormous, and steadily growing, amount of current taken by refrigerators and other appliances; home construction stemmed from a reported shortage of dwellings in many cities.

Steel mill activity nudged ahead. Reviving demand from motor makers bolstered output.

The index, with its seasonally adjusted indices based on the latest available statistics, and with 1929-30 as 100, follows:

	Last Wk.	Prev. Wk.	Year Ago
Composite Index —	95.1	95.7	73.6
Automobile Prod. —	70.0	83.7	96.8
Steel Mill Act — —	97.3	96.9	64.3
Cotton Mfg. Act. —	123.0	123.2	87.1

Washington Commerce Notes

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29.—Labor Department figures show that the Mountain States achieved a greater percentage gain in July employment than other sections.

With workers in all industrial groups except building construction numbering 123,084, the advance was 3.7 per cent over June. Both the greatest increase and the greatest decrease in employment are listed for states in this section, Utah leading the nation with a rise of 10.4 per cent and Nevada marking up a decline of 5.1 per cent.

The payroll increase in the Mountain section, listed at 1.6 per cent, was less than the 2.4 per cent rise in New England and a 1.7 per cent advance in the East South Central States.

Although recording a substantial rise over the similar 1935 period, leaf tobacco exports for the first seven months of 1936 were less than the average volume for the last 10 years.

The Commerce Department reports shipments of all classes in the period this year totaled 193,084,600 pounds, compared with 150,670,981 last year and the 10-year seven-month average of 243,534,600 pounds.

Business advices to the Commerce Department from representatives in foreign countries include:

Canada—July motor vehicle exports totaled $1,881,697, an increase of $112,609 over June but $126,805 under the same month a year ago.

Great Britain — Responding to public demands, the British Post-office Department plans broad expansion of the telephone system, involving a $67,500,000 expenditure this year.

Russia — Exports from Russian Black Sea ports passing Istanbul declined 17 per cent in the first seven months of this year compared with the corresponding 1935 period.

South Africa—Demand for new automobiles during current year 25 per cent above 1935.

China—Opportunity seen for foreign investment in railroad construction to meet pressing transport needs.

DAY'S FINANCIAL BAROMETER

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 29. — "Excess" reserves of the Federal Reserve Banks continued to rise in the latest statement. Financial circles point out that although the 50 per cent increase in reserve requirements sharply reduced the size of the reserve above the lgal minimum, it was not expected to change the uptrend that has prevailed for many months.

The most recent increase was due to a sizeable drop in Treasury cash in the Reserve Banks and a further addition to the gold stock.

"Excess" reserves of the member banks compared as follows:

Week ended Aug. 26 —$1,890,000,000
Previous week— — — 1,810,000,000
Same week last year— 2,749,000,000

Oak Flooring Buying Increases.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Aug. 29.—C. B. Cunningham, Chicago lumber authority, said today the recent increase in oak flooring buying, the highest volume since March, at prices somewhat above the first quarter, was indicative of a stronger fall market.

Pointing out that sharp advances were witnessed last March in oak and maple flooring grade rough lumber as well as material advances in oak flooring space, Cunningham asserted heavy buying on the advancing market was attended by too rapid advances in prices.

U. S. Treasury Issues Reach New Peak Levels in Rising Bond List

Railroad Liens in Demand With New High Marks Recorded on Three Days — Average of Group Reaches 94.7.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 29.—A rise in U. S. Treasury issues to unprecedented peaks high-lighted this week's advancing bond market.

Early in the week Government issues surged ahead, but as the market came down the home stretch the group leveled off.

Investment circles said the run-up in Treasury loans signified Wall street's expectation that Secretary Morgenthau will not ask for any new money when he discloses on Sept. 8 the Treasury's mid-September financing operations.

In most quarters the impression prevailed that the Treasury will merely refinance $514,000,000 of 1½ per cent notes which fall due Sept. 15. A few observers, however, expressed the opinion that should the Government bond market continue strong, the Treasury might take advantage of the situation to raise new funds.

Insurance Companies Buy.

Dealers reported the advance in Treasury loans reflected more aggressive buying of insurance companies and growing unwillingness of banks to sell.

In the corporate division demand was distributed fairly evenly. At times industrial issues with stock conversion privileges ran ahead of other types, reflecting strength in share prices.

Financial analysts, pointing to the expansion of $80,000,000 in excess reserves of Federal Reserve member banks to $1,890,000,000, said this was another indication of continued low money rates.

While new bond issues dropped sharply this week to around the $70,000,000 mark from more than $130,000,000 in the week before, banking circles recalled that in the previous week there was a $100,000,000 issue of General Motors Acceptance Corporation debentures.

Rails Continue Rise.

Railroad issues were in demand again today, advancing enough to lift the group average to a new 1936 high for the third consecutive session.

Other divisions of the market, while generally steady, felt the effects of week-end profit taking and other adjustments and showed little change on balance.

United States Governments kept in the background with trading too light to establish a definite trend. Sales amounted to but $160,000, par value, the major portion of which was in Treasury 3s, which ended unchanged at 103.11, and Home Owners Loan 3s, which finished 1-32 of a point higher at 103.19.

The Associated Press average of 20 railroad bonds advanced .1 of a point to 94.7, a new high for the year and the third peak registered by the group in as many days. The averages of other major divisions were .1 of a point higher to .1 of a point lower.

Transfers of $5,325,000, par value, were a little better than the usual Saturday turnover due almost entirely to the continued interest in railroad issues, a number of which enjoyed a broad demand. Sales a week ago totaled $3,592,000.

Among the Gainers.

Gainers of small fractions to more than a point included Baltimore & Ohio 4½s at 79¾, St. Paul 5s at 21, Erie refunding 5s at 85½, Great Narthern 4s at 118¾, Lehigh Valley 4s at 66½, New York Central 6s at 116½, Missouri Pacific 4s at 37⅝, Youngstown Sheet & Tube 3½s at 131, and Utilities Power & Light 5s at 72.

Foreign dollar bonds were quiet but steady. Italian 7s and Cuban 7s and Cuban 5½s were among others advancing fractionally.

UNEVENNESS MARKS TRADING ON CURB

Trends Fail to Develop Group-Wise as Trading Is Selective.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 29.—Some unevenness marked the Curb Market today, although changes were narrow and slightly higher prices prevailed among the more active issues.

Trends failed to develop group-wise, as trading was conducted on a selective basis. In the utility quarter Consolidated Gas of Baltimore sold offf 1½ to 90 and Commonwealth Edison dropped ⅞ to 106. American Gas and Electric moved the other way for a gain of ⅜ at 43⅞, Cities Service added ¼ at 4¼ and Electric Bond and Share gained ⅛ at 23.

Fisk Rubber preferred rose 1 to 61½, as the common eased ⅛ to 6¾. Most of the oil shares were steady. Imperial moved up ¼ to 20¾, while International Petroleum lost ⅜ to 34. Mining stocks were firm.

Trading was comparatively brisk, with transactions totaling 115,000 shares, compared with 86,000 the previous Saturday.

Scrap Steel Nominally Up.

NEW YORK, Aug. 29.—Dow, Jones & Co. said today number one heavy melting steel scrap at Pittsburgh was quoted nominally $16.50 to $17 a ton, an advance of 25 cents over the previous level.

This price was said to represent the highest range since October, 1929. The report also said inquiries from mills for tonnage lots at top prices were bringing no response from brokers "and it is apparent that the next sale will bring a price above the present quotation."

GRAIN MARKETS WIPE OUT SOME OF WEEK'S LOSSES

All the Day's Gains Not Held—September Corn Has Rally of More Than 3 Cents at One Period of Day.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Aug. 29.—The grain market staged a mild recovery today, wiping out some of the price losses that occurred during yesterday's break.

Wheat values advanced about 2 cents a bushel at times, while corn gained two to more than three cents from early lows at one stage. Short covering was in evidence.

Early buying of wheat was sympathetic with firmness at Winnipeg, both markets being affected to some extent by reports Western Canadian farmers were being urged to withhold their wheat from market temporarily. Later wheat strength was associated with the sharp 3⅝ cents rally in September corn.

Maximum gains scored for wheat after midsession were not held and the market closed ⅜@1¼ higher compared with yesterday's finish, September $1.09⅝@¾, December $1.08⅞@09, May $1.07⅝@¾. The rally shown in corn also was shaded before the end, the market closing ⅜c off to 1⅜c higher, September $1.06⅛@¼, December 93⅞@94⅛c, May 89⅝@⅞. Oats gained ⅛@½c, December 42⅞@43c, rye ½@1c, and barley lost 2@4c. Provisions ranged 3c off to 5c up.

Overnight Selling Orders.

Overnight accumulation of selling orders which brokers were unable to execute yesterday at the maximum decline, caused a further break of 1½ cents in September corn when the market opened, but soon offerings dried up and a few cash houses began buying. When September firmed, short covering appeared and the price shot up from $1.05 to $1.08⅜, or 1⅞ over the previous close. Belief was expressed in some quarters the possible effect of Argentine corn importations had been exaggerated so far as availability of that grain for delivery on September contracts was concerned. Profit taking later pared 2 cents from the top price of September corn.

December and May corn, representing grain to be harvested this fall, were firm throughout the session.

Yesterday's liquidation in wheat, having no real basis in new developments, made the pit tight at the opening, resulting in scattered new buying and short covering. Reports strong Canadian co-operatives were urging the holding back of wheat accompanied expressions of disappointment the Government did not raise the minimum guaranteed price to producers. Private interests were understood to be inclined to increase loans on country wheat in Canada, and this was considered a strengthening influence.

European Markets Weak.

European wheat markets were weak, reflecting the Friday decline in North America.

Oats and rye followed the action of other grains, while provisions were unsettled, some stop loss orders being uncovered in lard.

Wheat futures purchases yesterday totaled 32,425,000 bushels; corn, 18,861,000. Open interest in wheat was 91,902,000 bushels and in corn 46,238,000.

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, Aug. 29.—September corn sold at $1.07½, down 2½c from last asking price. September corn was down 2½c on asking price.

Winnipeg wheat opened ¼@½c lower and early was ⅜@½c up. The close was ¼@⅜c higher.

Liverpool wheat started out 1⅜@1⅝d lower and closed 1@1⅜d lower.

ST. LOUIS CASH GRAIN

In the cash grain market Saturday, soft wheat was 1½@1¾c lower than Friday's sales, or about ½@¾c higher than Friday's nominal close. Receipts were light, but it was necessary to lower trading basis to move the grain. Mills were the buyers. There were no offerings of hard wheat. Inquiry from mills was fairly good at the prevailing basis. Corn was 1¾c lower. A clearance of the light supply was effected. Industries were the chief purchasers. One car went to feeder. Oats were unchanged. Supply and demand both improved. Feeders, shippers and elevators bought, with the latter the more active buyers.

Local wheat receipts, which were 42,000 bu., compared with 34,500 a week ago and 111,000 a year ago, included 20 cars local and 8 through. Corn receipts, which were 18,000 bu., compared with 42,000 a week ago and 40,500 a year ago, included 12 cars local. Oats receipts, which were 12,000 bu., compared with 14,000 a week ago and 52,000 a year ago, included 5 cars local and 1 through.

Horses and Mules.

NATIONAL STOCKYARDS, Ill., Aug. 29.—The week's horse and mule market was spotted. Dry weather restricted demand from nearby territory and points east, but there continued a good Southern trade, particularly on gentle mares and fillies and full aged cotton mules.

Big strong-boned horses sagged in price because of a disappointing trade from Northern Illinois, Indiana and Ohio. Too, thin stuff of all kinds went at relatively low prices, due to the drouth and shortage of feed.

Broke cotton mules with quality, from all three to seven years old, received a good call, but there were too many colt mules on hand and the market for these eased.

COTTON DROPS TO NEW LOW FOR MOVEMENT

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 29.—Cotton dropped to new lows for the movement today on reports of rains in some Western sections, but met a good trade demand which absorbed offerings on a comparatively slight decline. December sold off to 11.36c and closed at that figure, with the general market steady at net losses of 5 to 8 points.

The opening was 2 to 5 points lower, in response to easy Liverpool cables and reports of showers or rains in some Texas and Oklahoma sections. The appearance of trade buying in considerable volume around 11.40c for December and 11.50c for May helped to check the decline, however, and gave the market a fairly steady undertone, although closing quotations were at the lowest of the day.

There was considerable doubt as to how much rain had fallen in the Western belt, and the official forecast held out no promise of additional moisture except for showers in south portions of East Texas and the Rio Grande Valley tonight or Sunday.

The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 21,000 bales, against 24,000 last year.

STEALING NEW CARS ON ORDER ALLEGED; EIGHT MEN HELD

Two Hundred Thefts and Sales Charged; Arrests in Chicago and Fort Wayne.

CHICAGO, Aug. 29.—Eight men were under arrest—four in Chicago and four in Fort Wayne, Ind.—and six more were sought in Cincinnati tonight on charges of operating an interstate "steal on order" automobile business. Two hundred thefts and subsequent sales of new cars were charged to the band by Police Lieut. John Kelly of the auto theft detail of the State's attorney's office. Kelly said junked cars were bought at Seattle, Wash., with legitimate titles, which, he said, were used to mask changes of motor and serial numbers.

The "distribution point," Kelly said, was a garage with steel doors controlled by an underground electric button.

Kelly said the ring was smashed with the aid of United States Justice Department agents, after Marvin Shapiro of Chicago identified a car in a Fort Wayne garage as one stolen from him.

Louis A. Bohn, 37 years old, garage owner; Darl L. Workman, 34; Omar Allen Smith, 29, and Sam Essak, 25, were arrested in Fort Wayne. Martin Levin, 40, employe of an auto parts company; Philip Levy, 25, auto wrecker; Thomas Lawson, 30, Negro, and Cy Wheatley, 32, Negro, welders, were arrested in Chicago.

CUT OFF FROM BIG ESTATE BECAUSE SHE WENT ON STAGE

Neice of Late Miss Julia Parker Gets Only $1000 of $1,500,000 in Will.

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Mich., Aug. 29.—Disapproval of a stage career for a niece prompted the late Miss Julia Parker to bequeath only $1000 out of a $1,500,000 estate to the niece, the filing of the will today for probate disclosed.

Mrs. Julia Parker-Brown, the niece, a New York divorcee visiting in Detroit, said that her aunt objected to her wearing half hose when she was a child. Later she opposed the young woman's plans to go on the stage, although her career as a chorus girl proved to be a short one, she said.

"Aunt Julia stormed all over," Mrs. Parker-Brown related, "and said that if I dragged the name of Parker across the footlights she would disinherit me. After that we had nothing to do with each other. . . . I am not surprised that I was cut out of the will. I don't care. I have enough money, and I enjoy life and do as I please." She is the former wife of Howard H. Brown.

ENVOY TO MADRID FROM SOVIET UNION

MARCEL ROSENBERG,

FIRST Ambassador from Soviet Russia to take up his duties in the Spanish capital. Rosenberg opened the Embassy, Friday. It was the first time Russia was represented, diplomatically, in Spain since the days of the Czars. In 1933 Anatoli Lunasharsky was named Ambassador to Spain, but died before reaching his post, and was not replaced. The appointment of Rosenberg was a practical manifestation of Soviet Russia's friendship for the Leftist Spanish Government.

TRIAL TOMORROW OF 12 IN KILLING BY BLACK LEGION

Dayton Dean, Confessed 'Executioner,' to Be Principal Witness in Murder of Charles A. Poole.

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Mich., Aug. 29.—On the night of May 12, the pleas of a bewildered WPA worker were answered by a fusillade of shots, and his body, with five bullets through the chest, fell into the ditch beside a country road.

The shots killed Charles A. Poole and brought exposure of the Black Legion. Monday in Circuit Court 12 men are scheduled to go on trial for the killing.

Dayton Dean, the "executioner" who said "I didn't even have to aim. I was only five or six feet away," will be the principal witness against the 12 the State charges arranged to kill Poole "because he knew too much" about the Black Legion.

Dean on June 3 interrupted an examination of himself and the other defendants by announcing that he wanted to make a full confession in court. Dean's accounts of other crimes he attributed to the terroristic organization led to the arrest of most of the 79 men who have been charged with 16 crimes ranging from perjury and arson to kidnaping and murder.

What Inquiries Disclosed.

The investigations of the killing of Poole and of Dean's statements disclosed that the Black Legion was a fantastic band of terrorists, held together by bigotry, oaths, and fear of their fellow members; a band that dreamed of achieving political dominance and preferred positions for its members in industry.

A Black Legion plot to seize control of the Federal Government in which armed members were to converge on Government arsenals and buildings was charged in a grand jury indictment brought last week against 22 men.

Whether such a plot existed, or whether tall talk of such a scheme was indulged in by leaders merely as a means of holding the interest of the members is one of the questions the State hopes to have answered during the series of trials beginning Monday with the Poole case.

"Ordered" to Fire Shots.

Dean, who has pleaded guilty of murder in the Poole shooting, said in the court statement he made under the gaze of his co-defendants, that he fired the shots "because I was ordered to. In the Black Legion you have to do whatever your superior officer orders you to do."

The executioner's confession related that Poole, a non-member, had been accused at a Black Legion meeting of beating his wife, who was about to become a mother.

"Some said 'whip him,' some said 'hang him,' and some said 'shoot him,'" Dean testified at the examination, relating that the meeting broke up with "50 or 60" of those present starting for the point on Gulley road where he said it had been arranged to take Poole.

Killing for "Hell of It."

Dean created further astonishment with his story of the "thrill killing" by a Black Legion drinking party of Silas Coleman, an unoffending Negro hod-carrier who Dean said was shot down in a swamp near a summer resort "just for the hell of it."

In other statements he related that parties of the terrorists had sought to kill Arthur L. Kingsley, Highland Park newspaper editor, and William Voisine, Mayor of Ecorse, another Detroit suburb. Both men stood in the way of the order's political plans, he said. Five men are awaiting trial in the Coleman case, five in the Voisine case, and 17 in the Kingsley case.

The political aspects of the Black Legion's activities came to the fore again with the indictment last week of the 22 under Michigan's famed criminal syndicalism law, originally drafted as a weapon against Communism.

To Take Over Government.

The indictment also focussed attention again or Virgil F. (Bert) Effinger, Lima, O., electrical contractor who is said by Prosecutor Duncan C. McCrea of Wayne County to be the national commander of the organization. Effinger once said that the Black Legion had 6,000,000 members. This statement was scouted by investigators.

The syndicalism indictment was based partially on an affidavit by Dean asserting that Effinger had told Black Legion meetings a plot to "take over the Government and get rid of politicians'" was planned for Sept. 16 this year, and that captains should have their men armed and ready to answer "the call."

The defendants in the syndicalism case are to be examined Monday at about the time the Poole case trial is scheduled to get under way.

On Lookout for Effinger.

Police at Lima were reported on the lookout for Effinger, but officers said no special assignments had been made to seek him as a fugitive. Police Chief Ward Taylor said his men had been ordered to arrest Effinger on sight.

Clarence Miller, attorney for Effinger, said:

"I haven't the least idea where he is. I'd like to see him show up now. I've a hunch he may drop in today or tomorrow."

Effinger has been missing since Tuesday when he walked away from an extradition hearing in Coluumbus,

Maedic, a superior mud runner. He broke good but dropped back in first sixteenth, then moved up gamely on outside, caught Billionaire entering the stretch, took lead at furlong pole and was only galloping at end. Billionaire ran a great race on a track that he did not like. He was rushed into lead, set a very fast pace but weakened suddenly. Tedious was kept well out in the best going, closed fast. Sir Damion did not like the going but ran a good race. Galsun closed a big gap. Traulove failed to show any speed. Charing Cross is a high class colt but does not like mud. Mosawtre also a high-class colt but does not like mud.

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y., Aug. 29.—Granville, three-year-old son of Gallant Fox, carved another notch in the turf trail blazed by his famous daddy six years ago, when he soundly whipped the great Discovery in the fifty-seventh running of the Saratoga Cup today.

Much as The Fox won the distance classic in 1930, so did Granville, flying William Woodward's white and red-dotted silks, take the measure of the handicap king from Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt's Stable, in the gruelling mile and three-quarters test.

Unlike many of his other races this year, Granville did not draw the line fine. Perfectly at home on the rain-soaked track, the great three-year-old set all the pace and splashed home six lengths in front of his five-year-old rival.

1936 Earnings Now $90,745.

Granville's backers, and they were legion in the crowd of 18,000, received 9 to 5 for their confidence in the Woodward colt, which has won his last five races and earned $90,745 this year, after losing several close decisions and tossing his rider in the Kentucky Derby. Today's victory was worth $6520. Discovery, the 2-to-5 choice, picked up $1250 to run his total earnings for four years to $192,287.

They were the only two horses in the classic but it was a thrilling duel for more than a mile and a half. Jimmy Stout, 21-year-old Lakewood, N. J., jockey, shot Granville to the front at the start and threw mud in the eyes of Discovery and Johnny Bejshak of Baltimore all the way. Not until Stout let Granville out at the head of the stretch was the issue really settled, however.

Granville opened up a four-length lead in the first half-mile and still had two lengths to spare as they sped past the grandstand the first time. Bejshak called on Discovery mid-way of the back stretch, and although he drew up to his younger rival's flanks, he never was able to stick his head in front.

Discovery made one last desperate effort rounding the bend, cutting Granville's margin to half a length, but Stout looked back all through the stretch as Granville finished in 3:00 4-5. The time was more than five seconds slower than Reigh Count's track record, but the track was in its worst condition in years.

Maedic Takes Hopeful.

BROWNS' NEW PITCHER MAY START AGAINST WASHINGTON

By James M. Gould.
Of the Post-Dispatch Sports Staff.

BOSTON, Aug. 29.—The Browns said their 1936 farewell to Boston today and a teary farewell it was, with the heavens supplying the tears in a day-long downpour. The day and the two teams which were to have met were drab, alike, with neither of the clubs going anywhere this season, and both personnels wondering what would happen before the first Brownie-Red Sox series in 1937.

If either club was a greater disappointment than the other, Boston would seem to take preference. Here was a club of which great things had been predicted. It was a team fairly studded with stars—that is, they were stars if judged by the salaries being paid them by the generous, perhaps over-generous Tom Yawkey. Yet, outside of the first few weeks of the campaign, the Sox never really have figured in the fight and today the gap between them and the league-leaders is well over the 20-game mark. That several of the Boston team today wearing the Yawkey insignia will be seen next year in other uniforms is a foregone conclusion.

Yawkey and Eddie Collins have learned their lesson "the hard way," and the lesson has taught them that a cluster of stars on one club doesn't always work into a concerted firmament. Boston observers see Manush, Melillo, Wes Ferrell and Foxx in enemy livery a year hence, but Boston observers are merely guessing for there is no word from the Sox front-office. They refuse to say what will happen. What

The Four-Minute Mile.

THE suggestion that men would be running a mile in four minutes ten years years ago would have caused the athletic world to smile widely. "Can't be done" would have been the comment.

After watching Lovelock of New Zealand win the 1500 meter in world record time, Olympic Games fans are not so sure. Many believe it will be done in the near future by Lovelock. He finished with reserve.

"I had plenty left," he said after the race.

"Quite likely I could have made better time. But a mile in four minutes — that's not being done you know."

Even Lovelock himself is skeptical.

Woodruff as a Miler.

THE surprise observation came from an American trainer who said that he expected the four-minute mile, if accomplished in the near future, would be run by a Negro and not by Lovelock. He regarded John Woodruff, Pittsburg half-miler and winner of the 800-meter championship, at Berlin, as the man most likely to do it.

"Woodruff's stride is ideal for a mile runner and I look to see him become a strong factor in this event before long," the American authority said.

Woodruff's running is the most effortless of any middle distance runner we have seen. It is comparable to Jesse Owens' sprinting. He takes tremendously long strides (between 9 and 10 feet) that eat up ground amaz-

CARDS BEAT PHILS, 4-0; GAIN ON BOTH GIANTS AND CUBS

It's Lots of Fun to Make a Run

Leo Durocher smiles crossing the plate in the second inning of the Cardinals' 4-0 victory over the Phillies at Sportsman's Park, yesterday. It was the second tally in the frame, breaking a run of 25 scoreless innings for the Redbirds. Virgil Davis walked at the start of the rally, Durocher singled, Gelbert flied out, scoring Davis, and Si Johnson singled, sending Durocher home.

"Gas House Gang Back; Will Win," Dizzy Dean Says

"THAT'S the first time the Cardinals looked like the Gas House Gang in two weeks," said Dizzy Dean, the club's leading pitcher, in an interview on the radio last night. He was referring to the way the Cardinals snapped out of their slump and beat the Philadelphia club, 4 to 0.

"We were at lot farther behind in 1934 than we are today and we have a much better club today than we had then," he added. "We're going right on now to win the pennant and the world series."

MERCEINA WEISS WINS DISTRICT TENNIS MATCH

Marceina Weiss, defending champion, breezed through her first round match in the women's district tennis tournament at the Lewis Park courts, University City, yesterday afternoon, defeating Alpha Cousins, a former Houston, Tex., woman now residing in St. Louis.

Miss Weiss was not pressed as she won the match, 6-1, 6-1.

A tennis player in this district of several years ago, Mrs. Paul Peltason of Westwood Country Club, returned to the tournament wars by defeating Louise Springer in a hard-fought match, 6-3, 6-3.

Giants' Streak Ended at 15 When Pirates Win, 7-4; Cubs Stopped at Six by Bees, 6-4

The heat wave has been broken, the Giants' 15-game winning streak also was ended yesterday and the Chicago Cubs lost after six consecutive victories and thereby dropped into a second-place tie with the Cardinals, which makes things more rosy for St. Louisans than they have been in some time.

Bill Terry came through as a pinch hitter for the second successive day but his ninth-inning single only drove in two runners and left the Giants on the short end of a 7-to-4 score at Pittsburgh. The Bees at Chicago displayed some of that vim that enabled them to trim the Redbirds four times in a row here in St. Louis recently, Boston defeating the Cubs, 6 to 4.

Floyd Young Beats Giants Single-Handed.

By the Associated Press.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Aug. 28.—It finally happened to the Giants—their long 15-game winning streak was terminated here today, 7 to 4, with Floyd Young batting in five runs for the Pirates, and Red Lucas outlasting Al Smith and going the route for his twelfth victory of the year.

So the Giants got nothing better than an even break in the two games here, after having captured the majority of the games in each of their preceding 13-straight series.

A personal winning streak of five straight games was broken for Al Smith when he was batted out in the fifth, when the Pirates broke through a 2 to 2 tie to go into the lead, and hang on the rest of the way.

The Giants rallied gamely in the ninth, with singles by Whitehead, Ripple and Pinch Hitter Terry, the latter's blow driving in his team's last two runs.

The Giants made 12 hits off Lucas, but the Pirates made 14 off four Giant pitchers: Smith, Coffman, Castleman and Gumbert.

Castleman was tagged for a homer by Floyd Young with two aboard in the seventh that provided the Buccos' margin of victory. Young had driven in the Pittsburgh's first two runs with a single off Smith with the bases full in the fourth.

The homer off Castleman brought the first scoring done against him in 22 straight innings of pitching.

Cards Even With Giants in Odds On World Series

BETS being made on world series prospects indicate the Cardinals are a better wager to beat the New York Yankees than the Chicago Cubs. Charley Burke, betting commissioner, quotes the Yankees as a 7-to-10 choice to beat either the New York Giants or the Cardinals in the big series but he thinks the Chicago Cubs would be a wee bit easier. The Yanks would be 13 to 20 against Chicago in his book.

You must put up 10 to win 11 on the Cards to beat the Yanks; 10 to 11 on the Giants to beat the Yanks, and 5 to win 6 that the Cubs could beat the Yanks.

Brown will be awarded the gold medal as the national champion, also three silver medals and the Hughes Trophy for winning the grand aggregate in the Group A division.

SI JOHNSON PITCHES BIRDS INTO SECOND-PLACE TIE; THREE GAMES BACK OF LEAD

Right-hander Fans Six in Shutting Out Jimmy Wilson's Club on Eight Hits—Only Two Runners Reach Second—Medwick Gets 51st Two-Bagger.

By Dent McSkimming

When the Cardinal organization reached out and brought Silas Johnson in from the Toronto club of the International League to help out a staggering pitching staff in the National League pennant drive, it was with the expectation that Silas would be able to turn in a shut out or two for the Redbirds.

Prior to yesterday, Si had shown unmistakable promise, winning his first two games, but he was hit hard in both, and then he was charged with two defeats in one afternoon—last Sunday (Black Sunday in the Cards' 1936 calendar). But the men responsible for Johnson's return to the major leagues must be happy today for the big blond right-hander stood the Phillies on their ears yesterday afternoon and came off with a brilliantly pitched 4-to-0 victory. Si returned to form and the Cardinals returned to second place in the league standing, tied with the Cubs and three short games behind the leading New York Giants.

Only Two Phils Reach Second.

Only two runners advanced as far as second base, against the crafty pitching of Silas. He was reached for eight hits but he kept them so well scattered that only Pinkey Whitney, in the sixth, and Chuck Klein, in the eighth, put his foot on second base, and neither went any farther. Johnson struck out six batters and issued only one base on balls. In three full games and parts of two others that he has worked as a Cardinal pitcher, he has walked only four batters, one of them intentionally. Control has been the secret of his success in scoring three victories.

Birds Score Two in Second.

But, if the Cardinals, with something close to their maximum strength in the batting order for a change, had failed to score some runs, Johnson could not have won his ball game. That's where Leo Durocher's double comes in. In the second inning, Virg Davis drew a walk off Pitcher Ray Benge and Durocher, a great little pinch hitter, hit the chalk mark on the right field foul line for two bases, putting Spud on third. Gelbert whacked a fly to right deep enough to score Davis and Johnson helped to win his own game by beating out a drive that Norris knocked down, scoring Durocher.

With a lead of 2 to 0 as early as the second inning, Big Si looked like a champion.

And with the Cubs taking a beating from Boston, and the Giants losing to Pittsburgh, the Cardinals were inspired to greater things in the way of runs. They added their third marker in the fifth when Terry Moore beat out a single to deep short, was forced by Pepper Martin who was then driven home by Medwick. With two out at the time Jersey Joe came to bat, Pepper Martin was a 100-to-1 shot to try for a stolen base. He bluffed the steal enough times to worry Benge into pitching two balls to Medwick, but then he got over two strikes. Then Pepper cut loose in earnest for second base and Medwick co-operated by hitting Benge's pitch against the right field screen for a double. Martin was rounding second when Joe hit the ball and scored standing up.

Benge Taken Out.

That run about clinched the game but in the sixth the Redbirds went after some more. Davis opened with a single but was rubbed out in a double play. Then Gelbert revived the attack with a single to

DIZZY DEAN AND WINFORD WILL PITCH TODAY

FRANK FRISCH says that Dizzy Dean and Jim Winford will be the Cardinal pitchers in today's double-header. Diz, in fine spirits after a work out yesterday, looked fit as a taut fiddle string. The first game will start at 1:30 o'clock.

Leo Durocher is under treatment for a painful condition in his right ear. Too much water from the shower got into the ear and entered the inner ear, but Leo has hopes that it won't interfere with his speech.

Frisch's injured leg is responding to rest and with the aid of yards of adhesive tape as applied by the skilled hands of 'Doc' Harrison Weaver, club trainer, he may be able to start one of today's games.

Casey Stengel doesn't like us anymore. He's making the Cardinals face Ed Brandt (poison to the Cards) and Van Lingle Mungo. Some call Mungo the fastest pitcher in either league. Aw, Casey, that ain't right.

Pepper Martin's diving catch of Chiozza's low liner in the first was a typical Martin performance—most sensational single fielding play of the day.

Joe Medwick brought his total

MISS TRAUNG WINS, 6 AND 5, IN WESTERN CLOSED GOLF FINAL

COAST PLAYER NEVER BEHIND IN MATCH WITH MISS BARRETT

Westerner Gains First Major Title by Steady Play; Ends It by Laying Stymie for Opponent.

By the Associated Press.

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Aug. 29—Dorothy Traung of San Francisco, today won her first major golf title—the women's Western closed championship—with a stunning 6 and 5 defeat of 19-year-old Beatrice Barrett of Minneapolis.

She started the day right by winning the first hole with a birdie 3 and was never behind as she piled up a four-hole lead on the first nine, led two up at the end of eighteen and then won six of seven straight holes through the middle of the afternoon round to clinch the victory. She was 5 up after 27 holes.

Miss Traung played steady, unspectacular golf all through the week to win her way to the final round—upsetting the defending champion, Marion Miley, of Lexington, Ky., in the semi-final yesterday—and she never gave the brilliant but erratic Miss Barrett a chance today.

On the basis of their early rounds Miss Barrett was a strong favorite to win, having overwhelmed all her early opponents by lodsided margins and showing the best medal card of any of the semi-finalists. Her poorest previous round on the out nine was a 42 but she needed 48 and 47 strokes both times round today and had only one good nine-hole card—the in nine on the morning round, where she carded a one-over-par 39 to cut Miss Traung's lead to two holes.

Miss Traung in her winning march had rounds of 43-41-41 and three over par for the last four holes, the worst stretch she had all day. She laid her opponent a stymie on the thirty-first green.

The weather, which had been blistering hot Monday, turned cold today after four straight days of rain and a high wind swept the course, blowing high-hit balls far off line and bothering the players in their putting.

Miss Traung, one of the longest woman hitters in the game, outdrove Miss Barrett. The latter's short game which was deadly yesterday against Patty Berg — also was off today.

Miss Traung, a finalist in this same tournament and in the national against Virginia Van Wie two years ago, had won California and minor sectional titles before but never one of the standing of the Western.

She plans to go from South Bend to Summit, N. J., to play in the two-ball foursomes 10 days hence and then stay on and practice for the national, which also will be played there late in September.

PROMOTERS ABANDON PLANS FOR BOXING SHOW HERE SEPT. 11

The Jackson Johnson Jr. American Legion Post, through promoters Lew Raymond and Benny Greenberg, last night announced that it had abandoned plans for a boxing show scheduled to be held Sept. 11. The promoters contemplate moving the site of their shows from the Municipal Auditorium to the Coliseum when they hold their next program early in October.

British Team to Rely on Four Young Golfers in Walker Cup Matches With American Squad

By the Associated Press.

CLEMENTON, N. J., Aug. 29. — America and Great Britain will meet Wednesday and Thursday at Pine Valley in the eighth renewal of the International Golf Matches for the Walker Cup. Persistent, the British are still trying to win the trophy, first taken by America's amateurs at the National Golf Links in 1922 and successfully defended ever since.

Convinced that they cannot win with their veterans, Britain has sent over a young team, only one of whom has competed before in this country. Dr. William Tweddell, British amateur champion in 1927 and captain of the British team in 1928, is again leading the team, but it is doubtful if he will play.

The British hopes rest rather on four newcomers, Hector Thomson, 22-year-old British and Irish amateur champion Jack McLean, three times winner of the Scottish amateur crown, Johnny Langley 18-year-old British boy's champion, and H. G. Bentley, the English closed champion. Bentley and McLean played for Britain in the last matches at St. Andrews in 1934, but this is their first try in this country.

The other members of the British squad are Gordon Peters, P. B. Lucas, G. Alec Hill, J. Morton Dykes and Cecil Ewing.

U. S. Has Five Veterans.

Against this squad, the United States can send five veterans, Francis Ouimet, Brookline, Mass., George Dunlap, New York, Johnny Goodman, Omaha, and Johnny Fischer, Cincinnati, and six newcomers, Scotty Campbell and Harry Givan, of Seattle, Reynolds Smith, Dallas, Tex., Ed White, Bonham, Tex., Walter Emery, Oklahoma City, and Charlie Yates, Atlanta.

It is likely that for the first time since the Walker cup matches, Ouimet will not be in this year's lineup. Though the veteran is captain of the American team and has won four, tied two and lost two in the competition since 1922, his game has not been up to standard recently and he is not likely to risk it against strong young Britishers over so exacting a course as Pine Valley.

The teams will be selected and the pairings announced Tuesday. The foursomes competition will be held Wednesday.

Winding and angling through a pine forest between the Tuckahoe and Delaware rivers 16 miles from Philadelphia, Pine Valley has been called the "hardest course in America." It was not planned for the average golfer, but was designed as a monument to the game as the game should be played. Every shot must be hit to a spot.

Par for Course Is 70.

The course is laid in sandy soil. Great expanses of this stretch from tee to fairway. Drives must carry over the sand to the fairway. Then the fairway ends and another stretch of sand forms a hazard for the second shot. The championship course is 6703 yards long and is par 70.

All matches will be played over the 36-hole route. In the foursomes, each team plays a single ball, one player in each pair driving from the odd-numbered tees, the other from the even. After the drive, the players alternate shots.

In singles competition in the 14 years of the cup competition, United States players have won 43 matches to Britain's 15.

MIZE AND WEATHERLY DROP OUT OF "BIG SIX"

By the Associated Press.

The rookie "wonders," Johnny Mize of the Cardinals and Roy Weatherly of the Indians, slid all the way out of baseball's batting "Big Six" yesterday. Weatherly got only two hits in seven times at bat to drop from third place in the American League into a tie for fourth at .366, giving Luke Appling of the White Sox a chance to move into the pace-setting trio. Mize went hitless in four chances, sinking five points to .357 and winding up in fourth place in the National League. Paul Waner of the Pirates got three hits in four times up to advance from fourth to second with .363, while Frank Demaree of the Cubs held third.

The standings (three leading hitters in each league):

THE FINISHING TOUCH: Ouimet Practices Putting for Cup Matches

It takes a lot of practice to roll a little golf ball a short distance into a small cup and the U. S. Walker Cup team members have been putting in a lot of time on the stroke that counts so much. Here's Captain Francis Ouimet sending one straight to the mark, while Teammates Ed White, Reynolds Smith and Walter Emery watch. The photograph was made at Clementon, N. J., on the difficult Pine Valley course, where the international play will take place this week.

JIMMY HINES SHOOTS 69 IN RAIN TO LEAD OPEN GOLFERS

GLEN FALLS, N. Y., Aug. 29.—Duplicating an opening round sub-par 69 despite a driving rain, Jimmy Hines of Garden City, L. I., 1935 winner, led a drenched field through the second round of the $3500 Glen Falls Open today with a 36-hole total of 138, six under par.

Tied for second place with two others at the end of the opening round, the Long Islander forged into the half way lead with nine-hole figures of 35 and 34, three under part and one of eight par-shattering rounds in a day that saw rain fall throughout.

Hines' sparkling card gave him a stroke lead over 24-year-old Byron Nelson of Ridgewood, N. J., opening round leader with a 66 who needed 73 blows today to tour the hilly course.

Bracketed at 140 in third place were slim Harry T. Nettlebladt of Auburn, Mass., recent New Hampshire open winner, with rounds of 73 and 67; Bill Kerr of Toronto, Canada, with a pair of 70's and slender Paul Runyan of White Plains, former National P. G. A. titleholder, 69-71.

Guldahl Hits Even Par.

Two strokes back were Leonard Dodson of Springfield, Mo., and Harold (Jug) McSpaden of Winchester, Mass., each with rounds of 70 and 72, while knotted at 143 were blond Craig Wood of West Orange, N. J., and Mike Turnesa of White Plains. Wood added a par 72 to his opening round 71 and Turnesa put together a 72 and second round 71.

Even with par for the 36 holes at 144 were Joe Turnesa of West Hartford, Conn., 72-72; the veteran Willie MacFarlane of Purchase, last year's winner, 71-73; Willie Klein of Williston, L. I., 70-74; Ralph Guldahl of St. Louis, Mo., 72-72, and dapper Tony Manero of Greensboro, N. C., another former winner, 73-71.

Sixty players who shot 152 or better, qualified for the final 36 holes tomorrow.

Included among the shotmakers still in the scramble are Bobby Cruickshank of Richmond and Denny Shute of Newton, Mass., former British open king, each with 145; blond Walter Kozak of St. Albans, N. Y., 71-75, and "Wild Bill" Mehlhorn of Louisville, Ky., 77-74.

Six amateurs made the grade, including Wilfred Crossley of Dedham, Mass., 72-74; Tommy McCarthy of Poughkeepsie, 74-74; Jack Munger of Dallas, Tex., 73-76; Charles Whitead, Plainfield, N. J., 75-73; H. O. Kowal, Bridgeport, Conn., 77-71, and Bill Tobin of Plandome, 80-72.

New Yorker Gets Ace.

The only startling upset of the day saw Frank D. Ross, Hartford (Conn.) amateur, drop out of the race with an 84 after a fine 69 yesterday that tied Hines and Runyan for second place.

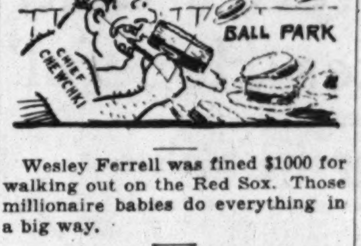
Highspotting the second round was a hole-in-one by Peter Cassella of Valley Stream, L. I., recorded with a seven iron on the 128-yard ninth hole. He also bagged an eagle in a round of 73, which, added to an opening 74, put him in the 147 bracket.

Hines was over regulation figures on only two holes, the third and twelfth, which he three-putted and sank long putts on the fourth, ninth, thirteenth, sixteenth and eighteenth holes for birdies.

SPORT SALAD by L. C. Davis

Okay, Chief.

This is the merry season of the year when every deed of valor performed by the home team is followed by a straw hat shower. It might pay Chief Chewchki to take a trip to the ball park and pick up some easy breakfast food free of charge.



Wesley Ferrell was fined $1000 for walking out on the Red Sox. Those millionaire babies do everything in a big way.

Wesley, by the way, denies that he walked out. He says he was waived out by Joe Cronin. Maybe just a case of crossed signals.

It is said that Dave Levin, world champion wrestler in several states, keeps a diary. Well, he has got to have some record of the states in which he is world champion.

Aug. 25—Up with the lark, took cold shower, followed by a brisk rubdown. Then to a hearty breakfast of ham and eggs. In the evening tossed a stumblebum for world heavyweight wrestling championship of Long Island, and so to bed.

Every one of the 53 members of the All-Star football squad has been approached by professional clubs. As Anna Held used to sing, "Oh, won't you come and play wiz me?"

A Berlin correspondent says the native hot dog is as big as a Louisville slugger bat and just about as succulent . . . which is something for the Stevens boys to take a bow on. That goes double; make it a bow-wow.

After the cobwebs had cleared away, Jack Sharkey said: "I made a mistake somewhere, but what it was I don't know." That's easy. To an expert without portfolio it looks like Jack's mistake was in getting in the ring with Joe.

From an artistic point of view, Jack booted one. Financially he was the same old Wall street wizard, dragging down 30,000 berries as his share of the loot.

UNION AND VONS NINES IN JUNIOR BASEBALL FINAL

A boy who was pitching his first game of the season for the Vons baseball team hurled a 4-to-3 victory over the Fienup-Chows yesterday to place his team in the final series of the junior municipal baseball league.

It was Lou Kissell, ordinarily a first baseman, who puzzled the Fienups with left-handed curves to pull a big upset in the eliminations. In the other semifinal game at Fairground diamond No. 1, the Union Avenue Merchants defeated the Boys' Club, 9 to 0. The first of a two-out-of-three game final is scheduled for next Sunday.

Sid Cibdrowski pitched the Union team to victory. He allowed only two Boys' Club batters to reach base.

Martin of the Boys' Club, hitting a single in the fifth inning, was the first to reach base. Cibdrowski put down the next five in order. Then in the seventh, George Drew was walked but the next two Boys' Club batters went out.

The Union team got a two-run advantage in the third inning. Tevis walked and Koch singled. Reis sacrificed, moving them up a base, Moore flied to the second baseman, then Schulte knocked a double to drive in Tevis and Koch.

In the fifth Union added four more runs, scoring on several errors as only one hit was made.

BROWNS' NEW HURLER MAY START AGAINST WASHINGTON TODAY

happened this year still has them in a daze.

So, it is propable that the Bostonians, picked for a one-two position will finish in the sixth spot. The Browns, as near the cellar as they are, can point to a better record than that for they are fairly certain to finish seventh and that's only two positions from the fifth place which even their most ardent boosters in the Spring refused to better.

However, despite this comparative showing, Hornsby's club has been, in its way, as great a disappointment as have been the Red Sox. They have failed to draw at home, though they are among the leaders on the road. They have made few moves to help the club this year and, if there are any in contemplation for 1937, they are being cleverly concealed. How long such conditions can continue is a matter for a magician to figure out.

In all of the cities visited on this trip there have been stories that Rogers Hornsby will not be back at the helm of the Browns next season. To dispose of these stories, it is only necessary to ask two questions:

1. Will the Browns' officials pay Hornsby off for the two years his contract still has to run?

2. Where would they get a manager to do any better with the material given him?

The answers are so obviously easy that it might be well for the fans to put the Hornsby-to-go story away in moth balls for the winter.

One thing is about decided so far as the 1936 Browns are concerned: They will hardly equal their 1935 record. A year ago, Hornsby's team won 65 games. To date, the present Browns have won 46. So, to equal 1935, they would have to win 19 more games. Well, maybe they'll do it, but there are only 29 more games to play to round out the schedule, so figure out their chances for yourself.

Tomorrow the Browns will meet the Washington Senators in a doubleheader which will be the greater part of a three-game series. Monday is scheduled as an off day, and a single game will be played Tuesday. It is probable that Sig Jachucki, the new Brownie righthander, will make his debut in one of tomorrow's games, with Al Thomas pitching the other.

Time was when the Browns looked forward to meetings with the Senators, because no matter how unkind other clubs were, the said Senators always could be depended upon to help the Brownies out. But this year the Senators are cut from a different pattern. In fact, they have been kept fairly close to the first division simply because of their ability to trounce the Browns.

The teams have met 17 times thus far this season and the Senators have won 14—more than any other club has been able to win from the seventh-placers.

After tomorrow's doubleheader, Manager Hornsby and Jim Bottomley will move to St. Louis to participate in Old Timers' day ceremonies to be held there by the Cardinals next Tuesday. Hornsby intends making the jump by plane, Bottomley by train.

THREE CHAMPIONSHIP FIGHTS TO BE DECIDED THIS WEEK

CANZONERI IS 3-1 FAVORITE TO TRIUMPH IN AMBERS BATTLE

Belloise Opposes Crowley, While Escobar Tackles Marino in Other Title Contests.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 29.—The lull in boxing circles, occasioned by the collapse of the Jimmy Braddock-Max Schmeling heavyweight title bout, ends in the metropolitan area next week.

Topped by the much-postponed match between Tony Canzoneri, the lightweight king, and his most persistent challenger, Lou Ambers of Herkimer, N. Y., no fewer than three titles are to be decided during the week.

Ambers and Canzoneri are billed for a 15-rounder in Madison Square Garden Thursday night. On the same card Mike Belloise of New York and Dave Crowley of England will scrap 15 rounds for the privilege of being tagged featherweight champion in New York State.

The title derby gets off Monday night at Dyckman Oval when Sixto Escobar, the American bantamweight champion, defends his crown against Tony Marion of Pittsburgh, recent conqueror of Baltazar Sangchili, former European title holder.

Big Chance for Marino.

For Marino, the 22-year-old Pittsburgher, who crashed the bantamweight spotlight almost overnight, the Escobar bout is the big chance of his career.

An unknown in the East a few months ago, Marino has fought six engagements here. Three of them were preliminaries. Then he defeated Lou Salica, recognized as the American champion before he lost to Escobar.

That victory put him on the big time. When he went on to knock out Cangchili, Marino became the No. 1 bantamweight contender in these parts. Sangchili had taken the European title from Panama Al Brown.

Although Escobar is generally favored in the betting, many think his long idleness may hurt his chances. Since winning the title from Salica in the Garden last November, Sixto has fought only twice, both over-the-weight affairs.

Meanwhile Ambers and Canzoneri are putting the finishing touches on their training at Pompton Lakes, N. J., and Marlboro, N. Y.

Canzoneri 3 to 1 Favorite.

Despite his improved showing, the Herkimer hurricane is given little chance of lifting Canzoneri's 135-pound crown. Now that the nose injury, received in his fight with Jimmy McLarnin, is healed, Tony has plunged into his workouts with all of his old-time gusto and the way he has been cuffing his sparring partners around leads boxing writers to predict he will give his former sparring partner the same boxing lesson Ambers got in their last fight.

In view of the importance of the bout, there is surprisingly little wagering. Indications tonight are that Canzoneri will go to the post a 3 to 1 favorite.

Belloise will be defending the world's featherweight championship awarded him some months ago by the New York State Athletic Commission when he emerged victor in an elimination tournament sponsored by the commission.

REDS GET 17 HITS, BEAT DODGERS, 12-2

By the Associated Press.

CINCINNATI, Aug. 29. — The Reds, entertaining the Brooklyn Dodgers at Crosley Field for the first time this season, banged out 17 hits for a 12 to 2 victory in the opener contest of their three-game series today.

While Benny Frey chalked up his eighth pitching victory, the Reds found Max Butcher and Winston easy to solve, getting three runs in the first, four in the fourth, two more in the ninth, and pecking away for one each in the second, third and sixth.

Les Scarsella led the winning attack, with a homer and four singles, driving in three runs. Babe Herman batted in four runs with three singles.

ROWE YIELDS ONLY SIX HITS BUT TEAM BOWS TO YANKS, 6-4

NEW YORK, Aug. 29.—The Yankees were held to six hits by Schoolboy Rowe today, but one of them was a homer by Red Rolfe with two mates aboard, so "Murderers' Row" beat out the Detroit Tigers, 6 to 4.

The victory was a costly one, however, since Frank Crosetti, the shortstop ace, was put on the sidelines for at least a week when Gerald Walker spiked him on the left wrist in sliding into second base in the first inning.

The defeat was the eighth for Rowe this season against 15 victories. Lefty Gomez, although relieved by Pat Malone in the seventh, won his tenth victory.

It was the Yanks' fourth straight triumph, and the third loss in a row for the Tigers.

Rolfe's homer featured a four-run, game-clinching spree by the Yanks in the fifth.

Up to that point, the Tigers were leading 2-1, on the strength of a pair of tallies in the fourth. when Al Simmons singled, Marv Owen walked and Jack Burns brought them both home with a base hit. The Yanks had scored once in the third.

In the fifth, Rowe walked the first two men, and Gomez, third up, was safe on Owen's error. One run was scored on a grounder by Don Heffner, who took Crosetti's shortstop berth, and then Rolfe lined his circuit clout into the right fiedl stands to sew up the game.

The Tigers added one in the seventh on a pair of hits, and another in the ninth on a hit batter and two singles, and the Yankees pushed one over in the eighth on a hit, a walk and an outfield fly.

STEEPLECHASE AT BRIDLESPUR CLUB IS SET FOR OCT. 3

The sixth running of the Mississippi Valley Gold Cup steeplechase, for four-year olds and upwards, will be held Oct. 3 at Huntleigh Downs, it was announced yesterday.

The cup race is to be run in connection with the eighth annual race meetini of the Bridlespur Fox Hounds. It will be over a timber course of about three miles with 21 jumps about four feet high.

The cup, a three-time trophy, has been won by the following: Frank Baker's Brown Parcel in 1931; Benjamin Leslie Behr's Hawkins, 1932; Thomas W. Durant's Arcade, 1933; Behr's Outlaw, 1934, and Anderson Fowler's Charioteer, 1935.

center and Johnson inserted his second hit, a drive to the same spot. Terry Moore hit to right field for one base, driving Gelbert across the plate with the final run of the game. When Benge walked the next batter, Stuart Martin, he was removed from the box and Kowalik finished for Philadelphia.

Terry Moore's return to center field was something of surprise to those who watched him in the pregame practice, for he threw every ball underhand, just like a softball pitcher. He is still suffering from a bruised shoulder received in his collision with Catcher Al Todd of the Pirates last Sunday, and it was apparent that he could not, under any circumstances, make an overhand throw. However, Frisch thinks so much of Moore's defensive ability and his presence in center field has such a wholesome effect on the team's morale that Moore was sent out there. It happened that he was not at any time called upon to make a fast throw to any base, and when the Phils went to bat in their eighth inning, Frisch called Moore in and sent Lyn King out to center to take his place.

His efforts to throw from center field, underhand, recalled the experience of Goose Goslin some six years ago when he returned to left field for the Washington club when his arm was so crippled he had to take off his glove and throw the ball with his left hand.

With New York and Chicago playing a doubleheader today, the Cardinals have an opportunity to pick up two full games on the league leaders.

of two-base hits to 51 for the season when he reached the right field screen with a drive to score Pepper Martin in the fifth.

Apparently there is no spirit of fraternalism between rival third basemen. Pinkey Whitney, Phils' third sacker, caught Charley Gelbert back a foot too far in the fourth inning and laid down a neat bunt that whipped out Charles.

Moore made a desperate but futile attempt to take Gomez's short fly in the fifth, turning a complete somersault without the ball.

Here's a Thought for the Gas House Boys — '26 Cards Began Stretch Drive Aug. 30

St. Louis' celebration of the National League's 60th Anniversary Year has been aptly conceived and planned. The program at Sportsman's Park, Tuesday—first a game by 1876 rules, then the reunion game starring the 1926 Cardinals, then the regularly scheduled league game between the 1936 Gas House Gang and Brooklyn—spells the story of major league baseball in the Mississippi Valley metropolis.

The National League started in 1876 and St. Louis had a team in the original charter lineup of baseball's first major league. Hence the game illustrating the style of play in those ancient days.

The record of St. Louis achievement, however, dates from 10 years ago. It was in 1926, the year the league as a whole celebrated its golden anniversary, that St. Louis arose in its might after 50 pennantless years and took a place in the first division of baseball's senior circuit.

First to Win World Series.

After 50 years, spent mostly in the second division, St. Louis became a name of power in baseball through the deeds of the 1926 Cardinals, the first St. Louis team ever to win a pennant in either modern major league and the first team to fly a world championship banner over a St. Louis ball park.

The reunion of the 1926 Redbirds—19 members of the championship squad have accepted invitations and will be present on the field in uniform to engage in a four or five inning game against this year's team—should inspire Frisch's Gas House boys into making a spirited rally and a fight to regain the league leadership in short order.

It would be a fitting climax to an afternoon of turning back history if the current Cardinals snap back into their 1934 stride, bounce out of their recent slump and start a great September drive such as won them the pennant and the world championship just two years ago.

The story of the 1926 Cardinals provides a wealth of inspirational ammunition. Never in all major league history had St. Louis won a pennant. It was baseball tradition that St. Louis could never win a pennant. Every other city in both major leagues had at some time or other tasted the cup of triumph but not St. Louis.

That was the tradition the Birds of '26 had to lick. Right down to the season's last week, Pittsburgh and Cincinnati were almost neck and neck with Hornsby's Flock in the pennant fight. The Reds, who had led the league all spring and on into the summer, from May 15 to July 17, were the favorites in mid-September.

But the 1926 Cardinals, starting with the second game of a doubleheader Aug. 30, beat the pennant-hungry Pirates four straight games and this signal victory was the launching of their own pennant drive. The Cardinals first invaded Cincinnati and Pittsburgh, then swung around the East, leaving a trail of wrecked pitching staffs and dejected garrisons.

They achieved the impossible, a pennant for St. Louis. They faced the impossible, beating the great Yankees, with Babe Ruth at his peak form and young Lou Gehrig backing him up with a big bat nearly as powerful as that of the Bambino.

Every city in the National League stages its own celebration of the league's sixtieth anniversary year, but no city except St. Louis has marshalled for its fans as inspiring a revival of past glory as the scene scheduled for Sportsman's Park Tuesday.

The heroes will be there, from Manager Hornsby right on down the line. Tommy Thevenow, a world series hero because in the final test against the Yanks he batted exactly .417 in seven games after batting .256 in the league season, is still so important a major league performer that the Cincinnati Reds could not consent to his attending the festivities here.

With the single exception of Thevenow, the Cardinals' regular lineup, as it was in the 1926 pennant race and world series, will take the field here Tuesday afternoon after the 1876 game.

OPEN GOLF TROPHY LOST IN STORE FIRE

By the Associated Press.

GREENSBORO, N. C., Aug. 29.—The national open golf trophy—a silver cup carrying the names of golfdom's immortals—was lost today in the ruins of a fire.

The famous cup was brought to Greensboro after Tony Manero, Sedgefield pro, won the 1936 title, and it was on exhibition at the Schiffman Jewelry Store.

A fire destroyed the building today.

J. Vernon Ruzicka, president of the Sedgefield Country Club, said he hoped the cup could be found and restored.

He said he understood it was insured.

BUDGE, PERRY ARE EXPECTED TO REACH U. S. SINGLES FINAL

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 29.—If you didn't know already, you will be interested to learn that the national singles tournament at the West Side tennis club, Forest Hills, Long Island, starting September 3, probably will be decided in a final round battle between Fred Perry of Great Britain and Donald Budge of Oakland, Cal.

Wilmer Allison of Austin, Tex., who won the 1935 title and the national No. 1 ranking along with it, is out. Last year, Perry, the favorite then as now, suffered a back injury in the U. S. tournament in a match he subsequently lost to Allison. This year Allison went abroad and returned with a back injury that will keep him out of singles play.

Perry, the world's No. 1 racqueteer, wants to be the first foreigner ever to win the national singles crown three times. He romped off with the title in 1933 and '34. Jean Rene Lacoste of France won twice, too—in 1926-27. But, as the bounding Briton said when he reached this country on the Queen Mary:

"I'm not going to last forever. I might be licked by Don Budge any time."

French Players No Threat.

Perry is just about the only foreign threat to the American men. Franch set over four players but all were unimpressive in the Newport casino invitation tournament.

Bernard Destremeau is considered the standout among the French. At Newport, he extended Frankie Parker, who might go places in the national himself, but parker came out of a slump to win.

The veteran Jacques Brugnon, one of France's smartest players, lost to Joe Hunt, the 17-year-old Los Angeles star, by a lopsided score. Hunt is hailed by Davis cup officials as a worthy compatriot of Don Budge. The blond boy from the West coast announced his presence in no uncertain way in July, when he beat Gregory Mangin, sixth-ranking U. S. star, in the Seabright tournament.

Hunt immediately was called the finest young prospect in the United States. Mangin insisted the boy had everything, from a bewildering service that curves like a boomerang to a forceful volleying attack.

Then Hunt proceeded to get himself trimmed in the Seabright finals by John McDiarmid, the Princeton professor from Texas, who had stunned the galleries by eliminating Sidney B. Wood of New York City, the nation's fifth-ranking star.

All of this just goes to prove that there are upsets in tennis, just like there are in any other sport. Any man mentioned above (except Allison, who isn't entered) may come through in the national singles.

More Dark Horses.

So, for that matter, might John van Ryn, who pairs with Allison in the U. S. top doubles ranking, or Clifford Sutter, the intercollegiate champion from New Orleans. So might any of the country's ranking players: Bryan M. (Bitsy) Grant, Jr., the Atlanta giant-killer, who is third; J. Gilbert Hall of Orange, N. J., eighth; Wilmer Hines of Columbia, S. C., ninth; or C Gene Mako of Los Angeles, Budge's doubles partner, who ranks eleventh.

Art Hendrix or Henry Culley or Bob Harmon or somebody else may surprise, too, but it looks impossible. There is just one more to mention—Bobby Riggs, Joey Hunt's mortal enemy from California. Riggs, like Hunt, is a Davis cup hopeful. He lost to McDiarmid in an early round at Seabright. He's 18, national claycourt champion, and owns a smashing victory over Bitsy Grant, earned in the eastern grass court tournament.

It's all a hodge-podge. The American stars—those who played on this side of the Atlantic—have been beating each other all summer.

WHITE SOX AGAIN BEAT SENATORS, 5-4

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29.—Halted once by rain and again by darkness brought on by impending showers, the Washington-Chicago game today finally was called in the ninth inning due to darkness, giving the White Sox a 5-to-4 victory to sweep the two-game series with the Senators.

The victory sent Chicago into undisputed possession of third place as Detroit lost to New York.

After the seventh inning, the game was halted so long that most of the spectators left under the impression the game had been called.

GIANTS STREAK ENDED; CUBS STOPPED BY BEES

the National League champions' winning streak at six straight.

While the Cubs lost no ground to the league-leading New York Giants, whose winning string was ended by Pittsburgh at 15 in a row, they dropped back into a second place tie with the St. Louis Cardinals, who whipped the Phillies.

Baxter Jordan's single, a double by Tony Cuccinello and an intentional pass to Hal Lee filled the bases for the Bees in the sixth with none out. Root's first pitch flicked Joe Coscarart's left arm, forcing in a run, and a whistling triple to left center by Al Lopez cleaned the bases. Lopez scored the last run of the big inning on Rabbit Warstler's fly.

A pinch-homer by Johnny Gill in the seventh drove Johnny Lanning to cover, but Guy Bush and Tiny Chaplin managed to keep the Cubs under control the rest of the way.

WHERE AWAY EASY WINNER IN GREAT WESTERN HANDICAP

BEATS SILENT SHOT LENGTH AND HALF FOR $4100 PRIZE

Countess Ann Finishes Third in Washington Park Event; Victor Pays Only $3.60 Straight.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Aug. 29. — Where Away, royally bred four-year-old son of Stimulus-Bobolink II, picked up by Anthony Pelleteri of New Orleans a year ago for $3000, raced to a brilliant victory in the $5000 added Great Wetsern Handicap before 12,000 spectators at Washington Park today.

Where Away, a castoff of Mrs. Ethel V. Mars of Oak Park, Ill., trailed the Eastern horse, Black Gift, during the first part of the mile and an eighth struggle, but at the head of the stretch rushed into the lead and defeated Silent Shot, the noted mud runner owned by J. E. Hughes of Chicago, by a length and a half, with Countess Ann third. The winner ran the mile and a furlong in 1:54 4-5 over a slow track.

He was ridden by Jockey Charley Corbett. In the betting Where Away was an odds-on favorite, paying $3.60 to win, $2.80 to place and $2.40 to show. The place price on Silent Shot was $5.40, with $3.60 to show, while Countess Ann paid $7.60 to show.

Where Away earned $4100 today for Owner Pelleteri, bringing his total winnings to date this year to $14,860.

Appealing and Bernard F. Win Stakes at Detroit.

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Aug. 29.—Appealing, the favorite, carrying top weight of 115 pounds, won the $3000 Mackinac Handicap here today and Bernard F., an outsider with low weight of 98, outran several classy juveniles to win the $2000 Fort Wayne Handicap.

Two field horses, Exhibit and Infidox, were second and third in the Mackinac, Exhibit finishing barely a nose behind the Motor City Stable's three-year-old colt, which galloped the six furlongs over a slow track in 1:13 2-5.

Appealing, with a record of five victories, including the Roger Williams Stake in New England, paid $5.40 to win and place, $4.20 to show and earned $2930 for his owner. The field paid $5.60 to place and $4.40 to show.

Bold Lover slipped and threw Jockey Noel Richardson at the gate, but the boy was not injured.

In the Fort Wayne, I. J. Collins' little gelding finished a good length in front of Mary Vito, winner three times at Thistledown, and left Mundorf a neck farther back. Miss Dolphin, holder of two track records here, was among the also rans. Bernard F. ran the five and a half furlongs in 1:07 3-5 and paid $19.40 to win.

By the Associated Press.

PAWTUCKET, R. I., Aug. 29.—Staging his usual late rush, C. V. Whitney's Roustabout came from far back to win the first renewal of the Fall River Handicap, a mile and one-sixteenth for three-year-olds and up, over a sloppy Narragansett Park track today.

Loser by a nose over a similar track a week ago, he won by a length today from Dark Hope, which was two lengths ahead of Emileo. The time was 1:45 4-5.

Roustabout, a close second choice to Count Morse in the betting, paid $7.70, $3.70 and $2.70 and earned $4910 for his owner.

Count Morse, Dark Hope and Emileo sprinted down the clubhouse stretch in front of the others, when Starter Harry Morrissey gave the word. But the Corsicana Stable's Wacoche, a winner yesterday, squeezed through the first turn on top with Emileo running second. Starting down the back stretch, Count Morse went into command, with Dark Hope not far behind.

Roustabout lay sixth down the back stretch, but when Dark Hope started up on the outside of Count Morse, the Whitney horse started his run.

He sailed by them all and went after Dark Hope in the last eighth. Down the stretch it was the blue silks of the Martin and Whitney stables, splashing mud at each other as the horses raced side by side.

Dusty Dawn and Count Morse finished in a dead heat for fourth.

The daily double paid $450.40.

GIRLS' SOFTBALL TEAM SEEKS 44TH VICTORY

The Krogers of Memphis and the local Kroger team will conclude their two game series tonight at West Side Softball Park, starting at 9 o'clock. Sawyer Gains Honors

MARIETTA, O., Aug. 29.—Paul Sawyer Jr., Pocono Lake (Pa.) student, won amateur honors yesterday in the opening program of the annual Midwest outboard regatta on the Ohio River as he captured first place in three events. Tom Cooper of Kansas City led the professional field with two victories.

ST. LOUIS SKEET SHOOTERS WILL BE STRONG IN U. S. MEET HERE

When the second annual National Skeet Shooting Championships get under way Sept. 12 on the steeplechase grounds of the Bridle and Spur Club, Clayton and Denny roads, St. Louisans, including William H. Bradbury, Sidney Weber, Paul Siebens, R. Warren Ketchum, Don Frost, Ted Dahlke and Pete Sahm, are expected to give the large number of out-of-town sharpshooters a battle for the major laurels.

The youthful Bradbury looms as one of the outstanding of the local entrants as a result of his excellent marksmanship displayed when he won both of the top honors in the Missouri State Eastern Zone skeet shoot conducted earlier in the summer. At that time he cracked up 192 clay pigeons out of 200. His father, Walter W. Bradbury, president of the Missouri State Skeet Association, states that William has engaged in little practice in recent months. However, enthusiasts here believe the Eastern Zone champion can give national leaders some tough opposition.

Many Skeet Shooters in St. Louis.

Siebens, one of the St. Louis Skeet and Gun Club's leading performers with the shotgun, displays a fine record to stamp himself also a dangerous man on the traps. Other St. Louisans expected to put in a determined bid for either the major or class titles are Dan Zimmer, J. A. Johnston, Dr. David Litchfield Penney, R. W. Smith, P. S. Conrades, W. W. Bradbury and Joseph L. Werner.

St. Louis women who will strive for honors are Mrs. J. A. Flury, always a prominent shooter in both trap and skeet shoots; Mrs. Joseph L. Werner, Mrs. Virgil A. Lewis, Mrs. Paul Siebens, Mrs. T. Niedringhaus and Mrs. Harry Maitland.

Among the Missouri shooters will be the Hannibal clan of W. P. Birney, William L. Harrison, L. E. Renie, L. Harrison and E. E. Breisch, while the Lakeside Gun Club of Bagnell will be represented by Louis H. Egan, G. E. "Bing" Crosby, C. E. Michel, E. H. Lewis and George Miltenberger.

The St. Louis Skeet and Trap Club, Creve Coeur Gun Club, Airport Gun Club, Bridle and Spur Club and the Clayton Skeet Club are expected to enter the team championship event.

While the invading shooters will have the privilege of using the six traps for practice next Saturday, Sunday and Monday, the main competition gets under way on the following Tuesday, Sept. 15. The program follows:

Tuesday, Sept. 15.

EVENT NO. 1—National 20-gauge championship at 100 targets. (Contestants must use 20-gauge guns or smaller.)

Frank Keaney, winner of the University City open and St. Louis Municipal titles this year, is in the top bracket. Among other players in this bracket are Richard Tindall, District junior champion; Charles McMillin, former Clayton open champion; Howard Stephens Jr., Bert Lambert and Jack Gordon.

Referee Russell Hadden has scheduled a total of 26 matches for play today. Of the total 10 are first round matches to be played this morning with the winners meeting in the afternoon. Unless darkness interferes the third round will be reached by tonight.

There are a number of good matches to be played in the opening rounds. Herbert Weinstock will meet Edmund Serrano, former city chamipon, in one, while Charles Sigoloff will oppose Russell Hadden in another. Gus Serrano plays Connie McDonald.

LOU GARCIA INJURED, IS LOST TO SPANISH ELEVEN FOR SEASON

Lou Garcia, who has played a prominent part in the activities of the Spanish Club soccer team for several years, probably will be lost to the team this season as the result of an automobile accident, in which he suffered a fractured skull. The little center forward is resting at his home after having spent a week in a hospital. He has been ordered not to leave his bed until the middle of September. Except for the head injury, Garcia suffered no other fractures.

The Spanish team will oppose the German Sport Club eleven in an exhibition game at the German Club's field on the Meramec River this afternoon.

Steps are being taken to get the St. Louis Soccer League ready for the opening of the season late in September. Under present plans outlined at a meeting last week, games will be played at West Side Softball Park, on Skinker boulevard north of Delmar.

Bill Lehman, business manager of the Shamrock Club, is also aligning his forces. It is reported that the Shamrocks will not play at Sportsmans Park this season, but Lehman says that he is not in position to announce now where the team will play its games.

The Kellogg team, which has compiled a remarkable record during the past two seasons in Municipal Baseball Association competition, will oppose the Schaefer-Lafayettes of the South Side League this afternoon in one of the semifinal round games scheduled in the elimination series to determine the city championship. In the other contest, which will start at 1 o'clock, the J. Burke Democrats, Mound City League champions, play the St. John Nepomuk nine, South Side Sodality League titlists.

The Kelloggs, under the name of the Wellston Legionnaires, won the Mid-City League title and the Municipal championship with 20 consecutive victories last year. This year the club successfully defended its league title by winning 13 of 16 games, losing two and tying one. In defense of the city title, the Kelloggs won through the first two games by one-run margins, defeating the Feldkamps, 2—1, and then coming from behind to win from the Floris, 6—5, in 11 innings.

Shannon Will Pitch.

Tommy Shannon, who pitched the Kelloggs to a majority of the league victories and who was credited with both of the elimination triumphs, will be on the mound. His opponent will probably be Ken Rutledge, although Vic Valendy was the winning hurler in both elimination triumphs for the Schaefers.

The Schaefers won from the Polish Trades, 16—2, in the first round and then rallied to score six runs in the inning and eliminate the Meramec Merchants, 6—5.

If the semifinal games follow form as did the earlier contests, the final three-game series opening Sept. 6 will be a repetition of last year's final, when the J. Burke Democrats, then known as the Donnelly Stars, lost in two games to the Kelloggs. The Burkes, seeded No. 2, will meet the St. John Nepomuk squad, which reached the semifinals last season, losing to the Kelloggs in a close game.

Have Plenty of Power.

The Burkes have overpowered both of their opponents in the eliminations, defeating the Gaylords, 4—1, and the Ray Dohles, 12—3. Bob Altsmansberger, veteran of the Burkes' staff, will probably oppose John Manna of the Nepomuks.

The Nepomuks had a struggle to get by the first round, winning out in the thirteenth inning of the game with the Monsanto nine. They easily won their second contest, however, beating the Gualdoni team, 5—1. John Manna was credited with both victories. He pitched a two-hit game against the Gualdonis.

The new champions will go to Evansville, Ind., for the National Public Parks tournament, starting Sept. 18.

MARRIAGE OF OLYMPIC WOMAN SWIMMER IS PUT OFF INDEFINITELY

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—After obtaining a marriage license with her fiance and announcing wedding plans which were not carried out, Mary Lou Petty, 21-year-old Olympic swimmer from Spokane, tonight said the wedding had been postponed indefinitely.

Miss Petty and Robert S. Skok, a Spokane brokerage office clerk, obtained the license at City Hall this morning and said the ceremony would be performed on Long Island later in the day.

Asked tonight if the ceremony had taken place, Miss Petty said it had not.

"It hasn't and we don't know when it will," she said, adding that it may not take place at all."

She would give no explanation, but remarked "there's lots more at stake" than the money paid for the license.

She said there had been no disagreement between her and her fiance. He could not be reached for comment.

Miss Petty, who placed fourth in the 400-meter free style finals at the Berlin Olympic games, was born in Spokane. Skok was born in Salt Lake, Idaho.

Cyclists Who Rode for U. S. in Olympics to Compete in National Meet in St. Louis

Senior Champion Cecil Hursey of Georgia, and Junior Titleholder David Martin of New Jersey, Will Risk Crowns on Forest Park Course Sept. 12 and 13.

By Robert Morrison

Cyclists who rode for the United States at the Berlin Olympics will come to St. Louis for the twelfth annual national championships of the Amateur Bicycle League of America, Charles Forrest, state secretary of the league, announced yesterday.

Olympic team members, Forrest said, are eligible for the national races without qualifying, as well as the defending champions — Cecil Hursey of Savannah, Ga., in the senior division, and David Martin, Newark, N. J., in the junior section.

The races will be held in Forest Park Sept. 12 and 13 over the same course as the recent state title meet. The course is a two-mile, circular road with no sharp turn at any point.

The senior races will be point sprint competition at 25 and 50 miles. With most of the riders in top condition from their pre-Olympic training, bicycle officials expect records to topple.

The defending champions probably will have no easy time retaining their crowns. Eddie Schroeder, California state titleholder; Ray Ligman of Illinois, and Ray Jones, a comparative unknown from New Jersey, are pointing for Hursey's senior title.

Jones was one of the surprises in state qualifying races which saw few of last year's winners repeat. Jones of the Triangle Cycle Club, Paterson, won both championship races to defeat Jackie Simes, one of the favorites.

Ligman won the Illinois title in a five-mile race-off against Walter Vertenten, who had tied him in points. Schroeder of Long Beach, Cal., was first in the 50-mile race there and second in the 25-miler.

None of the American Olympic riders finished among the leaders in the 100-kilometer (60-mile) race at Berlin but all should be good enough to give the best riders in the National real competition.

Other state champions to come here will be Charlie Thomas, Buffalo, N. Y., who won both senior races on the Northern New York sectional event; Philip Dorsch, Maryland, who swept the senior races in that State, and John Gregorio, a new face among Pennsylvania riders, who won the 50 and was third in the 25-mile event at Philadelphia.

Leonard Maffie, New York junior titlist in 1933, won the senior class 50-mile this year. Lawrence Hawke was first in the Utah races.

The only junior to repeat for State honors, according to incomplete reports here, was David Martin, the New Jersey boy. Other junior winners who may compete in the National are Paul Cole, California; George Hurlburt, Northern New York; Charles Wood, Maryland; Hughie Cullen, Pennsylvania; Lucien Masso, New York, Scott Buswell, Utah; Anthoni Burgari, Illinois.

The two-day national program calls for the following races, starting at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon, Sept. 13—one mile junior race; 10-mile junior and 25-mile senior. Sunday, beginning at 8 a. m. these races will be held: two-mile junior, five-mile junior, 50-mile senior and five-mile girls' race. They are all national championships.

The point system to determine the champions:

Senior Division.

25-mile event—5, 3, 2, 1.
50-mile event—7, 5, 3, 1.

Junior Division.

1-mile event—5, 3, 2, 1.
10-mile event—5, 3, 2, 1.
2-mile event—5, 3, 2, 1.
5-mile event—5, 3, 2, 1.

These points are awarded to riders finishing first, second, third and fourth. The position of the riders is determined by the number of sprint points they accumulate during the event.

Sprints in the 25-mile race will be held at the end of the third, sixth, ninth, twelfth and fourteenth laps—five in all. In the 50, they will be held at the end of the third, sixth, ninth, twelfth, fifteenth, eighteenth, twenty-first, twenty-fourth, twenty-seventh and twenty-eighth laps—10 in all.

To score points in the sprints, riders must be on even mileage. Riders hopelessly out of the point score competition in either the 25 or 50-mile race may be removed by the referee after 15 miles of the shorter race or 35 miles of the longer event. There will be a time limit for finishers in order to qualify in the point standing in each race.

A diamond-tudded gold medal goes to the championship winner.

GUNDLACH, OAK HILL IN TITLE GAME TODAY

The Gundlach School Patrons' team, and that of Oak Hill School will meet today in the second of a three-game series for the championship of the St. Louis Patrons' Alliance Softball League. The game will be played on the north field of the Public Schools' Stadium, starting at 1:30 o'clock.

His Title Will Be a Target

CECIL HURSEY,
The national senior bicycle riding champion, who will compete in the Amateur Bicycle League of America championships in Forest Park two weeks hence.

SIMMONS IS ONE OF 10 SENIORS ON IOWA SQUAD

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

IOWA CITY, Ia., Aug. 25.—Iowa football players will accommodate football scouts and fans this fall by wearing brilliant gold silk numerals eight inches high on the backs of their jerseys.

In other respects the Hawkeye football apparel will resemble last year's medley of old gold and black. Five-inch numerals will appear on the fronts of the jerseys.

The squad will be outfitted with special light shoes, the linemen will have five cleats on the toes and the backs will wear four cleats. The Hawkeyes will wear the conventional gold headgear, gold rubberized silk pants and black stockings.

More than half of the Iowa squad of 61 men reporting Sept. 10 will be made up of sophomores.

A total of 33 sophomores are on the list, while only 10 seniors and 18 juniors are included. Of the 10 seniors returning for the third year of duty, three held regular berths on Iowa's 1935 machine. They are Oze Simmons, Negro fullback; Corney Walker, tackle, and Ted Osmaloski, center.

Eight major letter winners are included among the 18 juniors returning this fall.

20 CARS ENTERED IN MIDGET RACES TUESDAY

Twenty midget racing cars are entered in the "post-season" program Promoter Earl Reflow will hold Tuesday night at Walsh Memorial Stadium. The receipt of seven entries late yesterday brought the field of racing stars to this total, one of the largest for any program at the stadium this summer.

The new entries are headed by Pat Warren, who figured in a disastrous spill here three weeks ago. He suffered a badly sprained back and cuts and bruises about the body and for a while it looked as if he would be on the shelf for several months. He is slated to drive Cowboy O'Rourke's car.

Art Hartzfeld, Ray Richards, Carl Hattell, Ernie Gessell, Everette Rice, Johnny Sawyer and Warren are the latest to enter. Gessell and Hattell are from New York.

Other drivers entered in the closing program include Jimmy Snyder, Marshall Lewis, Paul Russo, Wally Zale, Duke Nalon, Ralph McDaniels and O'Rourke.

Mack McCoy, Johnny Rogan, Pete Alberts, Rumsey Thompson, Nick Dino and Mel Wainwright are the St. Louisans enrolled.

A 75-lap series, comprised of a 35-lap final and two 20-lappers, and a pair of match races will feature the program.

Also Will Coach Collegians.

Paul Ribbett, former Penn football star and later a player with the Brooklyn Dodgers, will be an assistant coach of the City College of New York team, as well as line coach of the Dodgers this year.

CHEWCHKI TO WRESTLE AGAIN HERE SEPT. 10

Chief Chewchki, the 235-pound Cherokee Indian from Seymour, Ind., will be brought back for another engagement and will appear in the main event of the wrestling show Sept. 10 at the Coliseum.

Three men are under consideration for the match with Chewchki. They are Orville Brown, 220, Wallace, Kan., Paul Jones of Texas, and Milo Steinborn of Germany.

The Chief made his first appearance here in 18 months on the last Coliseum card, and was defeated by Dorv Roche in a match that lasted 17 minutes.

OWENS TO PUT ASIDE SPIKED SHOES FOR TAPS; 'STILL AMATEUR'

By the Associated Press.

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 29.—From a springy cinder track, Jesse Owens, the "Buckeye Bullet," set out today for the glare of the footlights—as a professional entertainer.

The Olympic track star, who gave the United States three firsts and aided in winning a fourth, decided to shelve his spiked shoes for the clicking plates of a tap dancer.

Larry Snyder, Ohio State University track coach, who piloted Owens through his Olympic triumphs, said the Cleveland youth would drop out of school indefinitely for screen and stage appearances.

"Jesse is building up for the future," Snyder said. "He's hopeful of making a good bit of money out of this venture to guard and protect him in later life.

"This becoming a professional entertainer does not mean that his days as an amateur athlete are over. He's not going to get money for his running or track work, but as an entertainer."

Snyder explained that if Owens raced before a crowd and was paid for the performance, that would make him a professional runner, but that a paid appearance for some other activity would not affect his amateur status.

Owens, a junior at Ohio State, said during a visit here he hoped to resume his studies after finishing work as an entertainer. Later he plans a teaching and coaching career.

"We hope to have him back here running for us again," Snyder added, "but of course something may come up later that he can't compete at Ohio State or any other school."

Owens selected Marty Forkins of New York as his manager. Forkins is the manager of Bill Robinson, famed Negro tap dancer, and other stage and screen entertainers. He will go to New York Tuesday.

"Robinson wants him to start practice as soon as possible," Snyder related. "Jesse can jig a little and Robinson feels that with that and a winning personality, Jesse will make a big hit.

'Owens and Forkins have accepted no offers yet. How long he'll remain an entertainer I don't konw I do know Jesse has some very definite ideas about returning to Ohio State, completing his education and then going to a normal life.

"He's practical about it. He can use the money and he wants to get it now while the opportunities are there."

Owens is either the holder or coholder of 10 world's records.

New Pro Football Leagues.

There are two new leagues in professional football this year, the American in the north and the Dixie in the south.

Reduced Entry Fees and Free Instruction by Ted Drewes to Pep Up Muny Tennis Tourneys

Entry fees have been cut 50 per cent and a course of free instruction, to be conducted by Ted Drewes, veteran muny champion for the last 20 years and recent co-winner of the National Public Parks doubles title, has been arranged as an inducement to stir up interest in the boys' and girls' municipal tennis tourneys, it was announced last night by Superintendent Frank D. Sullivan.

DREWES

Originally set to open tomorrow, the tourneys have been reset for Wednesday morning, and the entry closing deadline extended to noon of Tuesday, when the draw will be held in the City Recreation office. Three events will be conducted simultaneously; for boys up to 14 years old and for boys and girls not older than 18 years.

While the number of entries on file was sufficient to conduct a small boys' tourney, there were no girls entered. Since entries in these tourneys have been declining during the last five years and since he believed that the fees of 50 cents for singles and $1 for doubles might be too high for minors and possibly were keeping out of play many eligible youngsters, Sullivan reduced the fees to 25 and 50 cents. Refunds of course will be made to those who filed at the higher scale. The tourney revenue loss will be borne by the Municipal Tennis Association.

All of the quarterfinalists in each of the three tourneys will be given individual instruction by Drewes for four weeks following completion of the championship finals.

Drewes Still a Champion.

Drewes, winner of 26 municipal championships alone besides being national parks singles champion four times and now its doubles champion, readily consented to help stimulate tennis by teaching correct fundamentals to youngsters who will be tourney players of tomorrow.

"I have benefited a lot from muny tennis," Drewes said, "and I've had a lot of fun playing the game. The Muny has done a lot for me, so why shouldn't I be willing to try to do something for our future players? I certainly wish I had had the opportunity of learning correct ground strokes when I first began to play tennis. As a matter of fact, I had to learn nearly all of my strokes over again after I had won my first city title back in 1916."

Drewes' course of instruction will be on four fundamental points, presented on successive weeks, of service strokes, the forehand, the backhand and net play. A lesson a week, in the above order, will be given on three afternoons a week each group of quarterfinalists to have an afternoon set aside especially for them.

Ted has observed that young players generally cannonball their first serve outside the service court and lob the second and he will try to impress the need for and teach serving two balls of nearly equal speed, served accurately and with top spin. Foot faults will also be corrected.

Both forehand and backhand returns should be hit with some topspin, or flat, Drewes will point out. He will attempt to discourage the tendency to chopstroke, insisting no player should try it until he is able to hit balls with enough speed and accuracy to score placements. He will attempt to correct the "push" forehand many players have and illustrate the "punishing" stroke as such a stylist as Don Budge of California uses.

Regarding net play, the 38-year-old star will stress the need to learn to come up to the net to put away weak returns of forcing shots for placements; will illustrate when not to go to the net; how to direct placements at the net; and show the "force shot" or deep drive to the baseline, especially to the opponent's backhand.

Drewes is preparing a definite program on all these points. He will briefly illustrate his points and then put the players on the courts and correct them as they attempt to carry out his instructions.

FATHER AND SON GOLF TOURNEY TO BE HELD SEPT. 13

The St. Louis District Golf Association will hold its father and son championship tournament Sept. 13 at Bellerive Country Club.

C. W. Schnecko, handling the tourney, asked that entries, which may be made at $1 per person or $2 per team, be sent early to him at 3 South Meramec, Clayton.

A three-time trophy is at stake. It is to be held by the winning low gross team for one year. Other prizes are to be awarded the winner and runner-up of low gross, low net and fewest putts competition.

Play will be nandicap two-ball foursomes over 18 holes. Players who have no district handicap must submit their club handicaps with their entries. Boys without handicaps may send in their five lowest scores for the season.

BOWLING TEAM WANTED.

One vacancy evists in the men's Thursday 7 p. m. Handicap League at Heidel's Recreation. Teams or individuals interested may call Frank Heidel at PRospect 8400.

Final Legion Baseball Series Opens Tomorrow

By the Associated Press.

SPARTANBURG, S. C., Aug. 29.—A five-game series for the national championship in American Legion junior baseball opens here Monday afternoon with Los Aneles, Cal., the Western champions, opposing Spartanburg, the Eastern champions.

The Los Angeles team will arrive tomorrow from Indianapolis, where it has been resting since traveling east from Bismark, N. D., in charge of Manager O. K. Jones and Coach Mike Catron.

An estimated total of 25,000 fans saw the three-game Manchester-Spartanburg series here this week.

Gastonia, N. C., won the national championship last year.

A Pretty Girl is like?

Notice how evenly Van Dyck burns. It feels good in your mouth—no loose ends. See how firm the ash is. These are signs of fine tobaccos.

One thing a good cigar has in common with a pretty girl. No man can predict another man's likes or dislikes.

136 million Van Dyck 32's were sold last year—but it means nothing to you unless you like Van Dyck's flavor. When we say Van Dycks are better made of better tobaccos—that they're smoother, sweeter, milder—it matters little unless you enjoy this particular cigar.

But this IS important. For only a nickel, you can meet Van Dyck 32's at any cigar counter in town. Five cents and five minutes will tell you whether you'll live happily with Van Dycks forever after!

FOOTBALL PRACTICE BEGINS THURSDAY, FIRST GAME SEPT. 25

WASHINGTON U. AND ST. LOUIS BOTH FACING HARD SCHEDULES

Bears to Play Notre Dame at South Bend Oct. 10—New Teams Included on Two Schedules.

By Harold Tuthill.

The hot weather doesn't suggest it, but the calendar says that football time is almost here again. Less than two weeks remain before official practice begins Sept. 10, but there will be almost a week of informal work to get the athletes in shape after the summer vacation.

The local universities, St. Louis and Washington, are scheduled to open their 1936 seasons the last week in September. On Friday night, Sept. 25, the Billikens will meet their perennial rival, the Missouri School of Mines, at Walsh Stadium. The next day, Saturday, Washington will oppose Bradley Tech at Francis Field.

Each school apparently has cut out a man-sized order for its squad this fall, with a slight intimation that Washington has scheduled sterner competition than the Billikens. Here are the schedules:

ST. LOUIS U.

Sept. 25—Missouri Mines, here, 8:15 p. m.

Oct. 2—De Paul, here, 8:15 p. m.

Oct. 10—Marquette at Soldiers' Field, Chicago.

Oct. 17—North Dakota at Grand Forks.

Oct. 23—South Dakota, here, 8:15 p. m.

Oct. 31—Wichita U. at Wichita.

Nov. 7—Missouri, here, 2 p. m.

Nov. 13—Creighton, here, 8:15 p. m.

Nov. 20—Grinnell, here, 8:15 p. m.

Nov. 26 (Thanksgiving) — Washington U. at Walsh Stadium, 2 p. m.

WASHINGTON U.

Sept. 26—Bradley Tech., here, 2:30 p. m.

Oct. 3—Illinois at Champaign.

Oct. 10—Notre Dame at South Bend.

Oct. 17—Boston U. at Boston.

Oct. 24—Drake, here, 2:30 p. m.

Oct. 31—Oklahoma Aggies, here, 2:30 p. m.

Nov. 6—Duquesne, here, 8:15 p. m.

Nov. 14—McKendree, here, 2 p. m.

Nov. 21—Missouri at Columbia.

Nov. 26—St. Louis U. at Walsh Stadium, 2 p. m.

The newcomers on the Billikens' schedule, that is, new since last year, are South Dakota, Wichita, Grinnell and Missouri. The Bills won five of their 11 games in 1935, defeating the Missouri Mines and De Paul and losing to Creighton, Marquette, North Dakota and Washington, all of which are on the '36 program. Against the teams dropped, they won from Sewanee, Kirksville Teachers and Arkansas State and lost to Mississippi U. and Xavier of Cincinnati.

In 1934, the last time that the Billikens played Missouri, they won from the Tigers, 7 to 0. However, this year Missouri should be better than then or last year, when they won three games, tied three and lost three, for Don Faurot has had a year of experimentation and is about ready to open up.

The Billikens will begin their informal work this Thursday when Capt. Dick Fitzgerald, will supervise the squad. It is expected that 23 lettermen will be on the Bills' roster this fall. Although St. Louis U. has not been admitted to the Missouri Valley Conference so far, the school lives up to the conference regulation which prohibits formal practice under the jurisdiction of a coach before Sept. 10.

Line Just About Set.

Coach Cecil Muellerleile has stated that the forward line shapes up pretty well—even before the beginning of the season. Capt. Fitzgerald and Tom Mitchell probably will be the regular ends; Bernard Diffley and Gus Cianciolo or Martin Rossini, the tackles; Ben Putnam and Ike Vollmer, guards and John Hartman or Len Gorman, the center.

Norman "Mule" Kloepper and Les Cagle, former end, will divide the fullback duties and Woody Herrmany, former fullback, probably will become a regular half. Bob Shea, ex-quarterback, may become the other half and may also share the job with Mel McGonnigle, Randolph (Miss.) freshman last year.

The Billikens' new line coach, Dr. G. Titus Cornell, probably will arrive here from Priest River, Idaho, within the next few days. All three coaches—Muellerliele, Carl Pike backfield coach and Dr. Cornell, are graduates of St. Louis University.

Big Job for Little Men.

Topping Washington's new opponents for the fall, of course, is Notre Dame, nearly always considered one of the ten best teams in the country. Others which were not on the 1935 card are Bradley and Boston University. They, together with the Irish, supplant Southern Methodist,' Michigan State and Creighton.

After a bad October last year, during which the Bears lost to their opponents—Illinois, S. M. U., Duquesne and Michigan State — Washington won its next five games, which with its opening victory against McKendree gave the Bears six decisions and four losses for the campaign. The teams which they defeated in November were Creighton, Drake, Missouri, Oklahoma Aggies and St. Louis.

When Washington travels to Boston Oct. 17, it will be the longest trip that the Bears have made in many years.

Football fans will get their first taste of the 1936 variety, Sept. 1, when the College "All-Stars" oppose the Detroit Lions at Chicago. A week later the "All-Stars" will move to New York to oppose the Giants in a benefit game.

The first college game is set for Sept. 9, when Virginia State is host to Bluefield Institute.

There have been no startling changes in the rules since last year. One amendment has been made governing kicks from scrimmage which says "a ball kicked from scrimmage, which for any reason does not cross the line of scrimmage, may now be recovered and advanced by any player of either team." Formerly players of the kicking team were allowed to recover, but not to advance the ball.

Belleville Coach Inspects Gyms for New High School

COACH FRITZ FRIEDLI athletic director at Belleville High School, has spent the summer inspecting gymnasiums in Illinois in order to get ideas for gym construction. Belleville is building a new $200,000 high school this year.

Friedli spent considerable time at the new Pekin (Ill.) gymnasium, which is considered to be among the best in Illinois.

A new assistant will be at Belleville this fall. He is Ted Harpstreite of Lebanon, former James Millikin University athlete, who holds the State College conference record in the javelin. Harpstreite will be assistant coach in football and basketball and will handle the tennis team.

$45,000 Worth of Shells Were Shot at One Million Targets During Trapshooting Tourney

By the Associated Press.

VANDALIA, O., Aug. 29. — The 300 residents of this Montgomery county village pulled the cotton out of their ears today and prepared to get a bit of rest as the nation's marksmen after firing a million shotgun shells over the traps this week in the Grand American program, started for home.

Joe Hiestand of Hillsboro, O., rated the outstanding sharpshooter in the clay target realm, dominated the shoot from start to finish, winning four championships, three of them for the second time in a row, but the classic of the tourney went to 59-year-old B. F. Cheek of Clinton, Ind.

Cheek, using a $20 second-hand gun, captured the grand American Handicap, despite the fact he has been shooting clays less than a year and this was his first trip to the big tourney. The $20 investment on the gun which he bought to shoot quail, paid big dividends as Cheek took down the $1000 first prize and plenty of other prizes.

Admits He's Good on Quail.

The new champion who replaces J. B. Royall of Tallahassee, Fla., a railroad conductor, is a garage owner and auto mechanic in Clinton, but admits he is a better quail shooter than anything else. He and his son, H. L. Cheek, winner of the champion of champions title in 1933, make up, with Tony Marietta, the entire membership of the Clinton Gun Club.

During the week Joe Hiestand repeated as North American clay target champion, doubles winner and all around champion, setting a new record for the event by breaking 881 of 900 targets. Mrs. Lela Hall of Strasburg, Mo., repeated as the feminine champion of the country, while Homer Clark Jr., of Alton, Ill., won the junior crown for the second time in a row, and Charley (Sparrow) Young of Springfield, O., copped the veterans laurels again after winning in 1935.

The blazing shotguns tossed more than 30 tons of lead pellets over the traps, about 1,000,000 targets being thrown. The shells alone cost in the neighborhood of $45,000, entrance fees for the events were close to $400,000, and the prize list ran high into the thousands.

Champions crowned during the week were:

Grand American Handicap—B. F. Cheek, Clinton, Ind.

Professional Clay Target—Capt. J. B. Grier, Rockland, Del.

Motorcycle Fire Crash Event on East Side Today

A "flaming board wall crash" will be one of the features of motorcycle races at the East Side Club grounds on Triple Lakes road between Centreville and Parks airport, East St. Louis, this afternoon. The program is to start at 2 o'clock.

The crash will be made by Tony Butch, a local rider who has competed in races and hill climbs in this area before.

There will be three "tourist trophy" races. These are different from flat track races. They are run on hill courses with sharp turns and bumps in the road, so that a driver's skill is an important factor.

Odessa Allen of St. Louis is defending title holder. He likely will have keen competition from riders of Springfield, Ill., and East side towns.

Other events include a handicap race, two consolation races and comedy acts and stunt riding between races.

zThe entries:

St. Louis—Ben Chesney, Odessa Allen, Merril Kemp, Emmet Oleany, Harry Lee.

Madison — Frank Syniski, Ray Syniski, Steve Dragovich, Bill Saunders, John Krismanich.

Belleville—Cy Goss.

East St. Louis—Carol Anderson, Bob Skriver, Bud McGrew, Eddie Price, Marshall Klemme, Tony Butch.

Trolley League Clubs in First Playoff Battle

Beginning this afternoon at Belleville and East St. Louis, the Trolley League will inaugurate the Shaughnessy play-off system to decide the 1936 championship, with the first four teams participating.

At Athletic Field, Belleville, the Stags, in first place at the end of the regular season, meet the Huffschmidts of East St. Louis, while at State Street Park, East St. Louis, the Alpen Braus of Granite City face the Edgemont A. C. The contests get under way at 3 o'clock.

Prior to this year the split season was used in deciding the title winner, but with the first four teams in the running the league voted to use the new system.

The winners of today's game will meet in a two-out-of-three series starting Sept. 6, for the championship.

Eddie Bryan, rated one of the best pitchers in the semi-pro circuit, will go to the hill for the Stags. He will be opposed by Dick Casey or George Martin.

With "Smokey" Clarence Smith setting a fast pace to keep Edgemont in the running, Manager Ray Besse has decided to use his pitching ace against the Alpen Braus. Lloyd Farley, Alpen Brau righthander, who prior to last Sunday turned in four straight victories will be Manager Morris' starter.

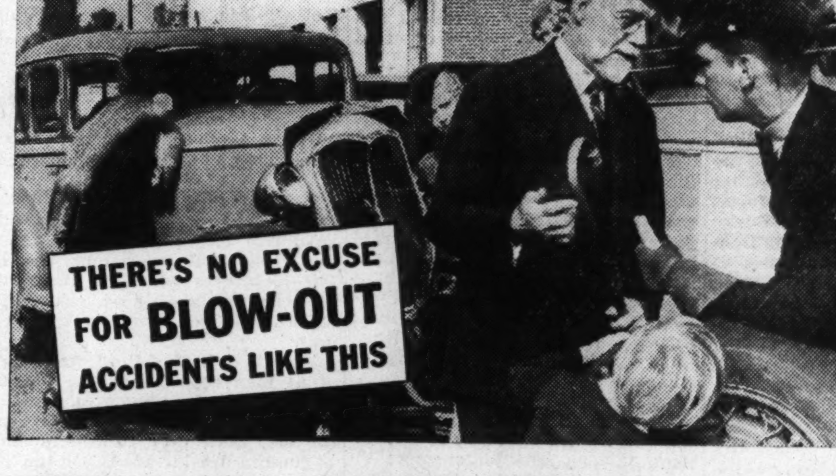
NO ALIBIS



THERE'S NO EXCUSE FOR BLOW-OUT ACCIDENTS LIKE THIS

RIDE ON GOODRICH SILVERTOWNS

. . . the ONLY tires with the Life-Saver Golden Ply

Officer: "I guess you're responsible for this accident."

Driver: "I'm sorry, Officer, I couldn't help it. My left front tire blew out. The next thing I knew we crashed into this bus."

It's useless to try to alibi yourself out of a blow-out accident. The thing to do is to put safe tires on your car before the damage has been done. That's why thousands of motorists who refuse to gamble with their family's safety have switched to Goodrich Silvertown Tires. They want real protection against today's high-speed blowouts—not regrets.

Why are Goodrich Silvertowns extra safe? Here's the answer: They're the only tires built with the Life-Saver Golden Ply, a layer of special rubber and full-floating cords, scientifically treated to resist the blowout-causing heat generated inside all tires by today's high speeds. By resisting this heat the Golden Ply keeps rubber and fabric from separating—keeps blisters from forming. And when you prevent the blister, you prevent the high-speed blowout.

Goodrich Silvertowns also have a specially-designed tread. Big center ribs, that act like the windshield wiper on your car, sweep away water at the first sign of a skid, giving the big double outer rows of husky Silvertown cleats a drier surface to grip. That's why Silvertowns also make you safer on wet, slippery roads.

Months of extra mileage

Extra protection against high speed blow-outs and dangerous "tail-spin" skids is not all you get either when you ride on Goodrich Silvertowns. They give you months of extra, trouble-free mileage and greater riding comfort in the bargain. Let "the other fellow" gamble on tires if he wants to take the risk. You play safe. Equip your car with Golden Ply Silvertowns. And buy them right now because they cost much less than other super-quality tires!

HEAT CAUSES BLOW-OUTS. PREVENT THOSE BLOW-OUTS WITH THIS HEAT-RESISTING GOLDEN PLY
Goodrich Silvertown

FREE! A million more motorists pledged to safe driving is the Goodrich goal for 1936. Prove that you want accidents prevented. Join the Silvertown Safety League at your Goodrich dealer and receive—free—a handsome emblem to protect you if your tail light fails.

WEEK SEES TWO PURCHASES OF GROUND VALUES

Flats on Site Bought at Twelfth and Lafayette, Washington-Grand Piece Parking Lot.

By BERRY MOORE.

Jack Dubinsky & Sons, real estate operators, have concluded negotiations through Cornet & Zeibig for the southwest corner of Twelfth boulevard and Lafayette avenue, occupied by a series of flat structures. The price involved was not disclosed.

The value of the property lies primarily in the site which has a frontage of 150 feet on Twelfth, which is available for business purposes. The frontage on Lafayette is 105 feet. Values of property in this vicinity have been enhanced appreciably by the widening of Twelfth boulevard.

Dubinsky & Sons recently purchased the Leonardo, a nine-story apartment building, at 4146 Lindell boulevard, and the Carleton apartments at 4616 Lindell. Both buildings were formerly owned by bondholders, who acquired them through foreclosure actions.

Washington Avenue Sale.

Another noteworthy sale was that of 65 by 150 feet of vacant ground on the south side of Washington avenue, east of Grand boulevard. The purchaser was F. J. Sommer, who is operating a parking lot on the premises. The transaction was handled by the Jefferson-Gravois Bank of St. Louis, representing the sellers.

The ground has attracted attention because of its proximity to the Grand-Washington center. Sommer has no plans in connection with the purchase.

Predicated on the business possibilities of Washington avenue, Eugene D. Nims, formerly president of the Southwestern Bell Telephone Co., recently purchased 125 by 150 feet of ground on the south side of the street, 100 feet west of Twenty-second street, from W. L. Gourley, director of sales of the Lake Forest Development Corporation. Gourley had just previously acquired the ground from the Gay estate and its resale to Nims was at a substantial profit, according to real estate operators.

Site Has Second Frontage.

The site has a second frontage of 150 feet on St. Charles street. Improvements are of negligible value. The ground adjoins the southwest corner of Twenty-second and Washington avenue, occupied as a service station, but pointed to as an eligible site for a large business building.

The Catalan, a three-story apartment building at 5541 Delmar boulevard has been acquired by Otto L. Spaeth. F. C. Jobs and William Schminke were the grantors to the title. Edward L. Bakewell handled the transaction.

The building consists of six suites, each with seven rooms and two baths. Porches are attractive features. There is a seven car garage, with a side drive. The building, one of the most substantial on Delmar, west of Belt, is being reconditioned by the purchaser.

An apartment building at 6012 McPherson avenue has been purchased by Mrs. Bertha Ackerman, through the Glick Real Estate Co. It has six suites, each containing five rooms and two baths. The purchase was made as an investment.

The prediction was ventured by Rudolph Buermann of the Anderson-Stocke-Buermann Real Estate Co., that negotiations for apartments would be on an aggressive basis, following the vacation season. Several deals involving large apartments and which give promise of successful issue, are in abeyance, owing to the absence of operators and investors from the city. The hot weather has been another deterrent.

Cass Avenue Corner Acquired.

The southeast corner of Grand boulevard and Cass avenue, a holding of the Tyler estate, was acquired by Mrs. Carl M. Stuever. The transaction was handled by Cornet & Zeibig, in conjunction with the St. Louis Trust Co. The site has a frontage of 75 feet on Grand and 128 feet on Cass. It is improved with a two-story building occupied by the Goodyear Tire Co., under a lease. The corner was the only remaining real estate holding of the estate, which formerly owned 50 or more parcels in North St. Louis.

The two-story building at the southwest corner of La Salle and Josephine streets has been acquired by the Windler Wholesale Florist Co. for a warehouse. Comprising 17,500 square feet of floor space, the building has a frontage of 88 feet on La Salle and 110 feet on Josephine. The transaction was handled by the Hauschulte Real Estate Co. and the George J. Wanstrath Real Estate Co. George J. Geers was the grantor to the title.

The tract, which overlooks the Mississippi River, is approximately a mile north of the Water Works. It was owned by an estate of which the Mercantile-Commerce Bank & Trust Co. is executor. The transaction was handled by the real estate department of the bank, through Robert Maginn.

RESIDENCE RESTRICTIONS IN UPPER LAY ROAD TRACT

Howard Goodwin has completed plons for a new subdivision to be known as Upper Lay road. The tract comprises 16 acres lying south of Fair Oaks at the junction of McKnight and Lay roads. It will be restricted to high-class residences.

Lying on the west ridge of old Lay road, the tract commands a view of the surrounding country.

Goodwin recently completed an extensive building program on 26 acres in Oakleigh Lane.

Redecorates Dining Room.

The redecoration of the Gatesworth Hotel dining room has just been completed. The embossed decorative part of the center columns are white harmonized with a wedgewood blue background. Those two colors are supported by a border and base of cinnamon pink. The ceiling which is an off white color help the new chrome crystal electric fixtures to brighten the room. The walls have a cinnamon pink base with the partially extended columns running parallel in color scheme to the center columns. The long flowing deep blue drapes are trimmed with a cinnamon pink leaf border.

ST. LOUIS AVENUE CORNER PURCHASED BY BANK'S CLIENT

The southeast corner of St. Louis avenue and Sarah street, has been purchased by a client of the Mercantile-Commerce Bank & Trust Co. It is occupied by a two-story building comprising stores and flats. The site has 54 feet on St. Louis and 142 feet 6 inches on Sarah.

The Mercantile-Commerce also reports that negotiations are pending for the southeast corner of Laclede avenue and Sarah street.

REPORTS SALE OF FIVE SITES ON LITZSINGER LANE TRACT

Arnold H. Maremont, representing the syndicate developing Litzsinger lane on Litzsinger road west of the Lay road in Deer Creek, announces the sale of five home sites to various individuals. A house is being erected by the Fairfax Construction Co. in accordance with plans drawn by Ralph Cole Hall. It will contain nine rooms and is to be in the style reminiscent of the French-Louisiana period.

WEIL CLOTHING HOUSE EXPANDS ON WASHINGTON

Takes Over Basement, First, Second and Third Floors of Adjoining Building at 809.

The Weil Clothing Co., a men's retail clothing concern, has taken over the basement, first, second and third floors of the six-story building, 27 by 135 feet, at 809 Washington avenue, to provide for the expansion of its store, occupying the adjoining six-story building, 95 by 135 feet, at the northwest corner of Eighth street and Washington avenue. The enlarged store will comprise a total of 60,000 square feet.

The two buildings have an aggregate frontage on Washington avenue of 132 feet, with a depth of 135 on Eighth. Both buildings are held by the Weil company under long leases, acquired through the St. Louis Union Trust Co.

Contracts have been let for the modernization of the Washington avenue and Eighth street facades of the buildings. A new entrance is to be constructed at the extreme west of the premises, with elevators to the upper floors. The design for the exterior was executed by Marritz, Young & Dusard, Inc., architects. The interior alterations are being made by Nat Abrams, Inc. The three upper floors of the building at 809 Washington avenue will be converted into lofts, suitable for sales rooms for manufacturing plants.

Fifth Expansion.

The additional space will enable the Weil company to enlarge several of its departments, including its recently installed shoe department, which will be twice its present size. This is the fifth time the concern perforce has enlarged its quarters since it moved to Washington avenue 25 years ago.

The building at 809 Washington avenue was formerly occupied in its entirety by the Leppert-Roos Fur Co., now occupying the five-story building at 919 Locust street under a 15-year lease, negotiated by the Breitt & Naumer Realty Co.

This is the third major expansion in the retail clothing line on Washington avenue this year.

Werner & Hilton, Inc., recently renewed the lease on its quarters on the ground floor of the eight-

Values of Residential Construction, However, Increased 14 Per Cent, Exclusive of Additions.

Building activity in July, as measured by building permits issued, fell slightly below the June level, according to a report made to the Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins today (Saturday) by Commissioner Lubin of the Bureau of Labor Statistics. "The value of residential construction, however, increased 14 per cent and the value of additions, alterations, and repairs advanced slightly more than 1 per cent," the report stated. "The gain in residential buildings is especially significant as ordinarily building activity declines at this season of the year.

"The decrease in the value of all permits issued (residential and non-residential) amounted to less than 2 per cent. Although reports for the country as a whole showed a small decrease, seven of the nine geographic divisions recorded increases.

"Compared with the corresponding month of 1935, building activity in 759 cities in July shows a decided increase. Residential building as measured by the value of permits issued shows a gain of 182 per cent. Indicated expenditures for new non-residential buildings increased more than 38 per cent, and the permit valuation of additions, alterations and repairs to existing structures increased more than 30 per cent. The increase in the value of all building construction over the year exceeded 89 per cent.

"During the first seven months of 1936 permits were issued for

REGIONAL MEETING AT SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

First New England Conference of Real Estate Boards Scheduled for Oct. 8-9.

Changing conditions and changing opportunities that are entering the real estate field by reason of improved real estate conditions, will be reflected in the whole program for the first New England regional convention of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, to be held in Springfield, Mass., on Oct. 8 and 9.

William H. Ballard, Boston, vice-president of the National Association for the New England region, is in charge of convention arrangements and will preside at the general sessions. Maurice F. Reidy, Worcester, Mass., president of the American Institute of Real Estate Appraisers, and Stephen W. Sleeper, Boston, former president of the Boston Real Estate Exchange, a director of the National Association and a former member of its Executive Committee, will assist Mr. Ballard as vice-chairmen of the General Convention Committee. The program will center on the work plans of the individual real estate office.

New England anticipates an attendance of over 400 realtors and real estate owners at her first interstate convention under the association's plan of regional conference nationally sponsored where the regions may want this kind of meeting.

Two states, Massachusetts, through the Massachusetts' Association of Real Estate Boards, and Connecticut, through the Connecticut Association of Real Estate Boards, are expected to hold business meetings in connection with the regional convention, and there will be round tables for delegations from each of the other states.

Realtors and real estate owners from Northern New Jersey, Eastern New York and Eastern Pennsylvania are invited to attend the convention.

Walter W. Rose, Orlando, Fla., president of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, will head the list of convention speakers, taking as his subject, "What We Can Do to Help the Real Estate Market."

With a revaluation of the whole real estate outlook now going on in the financial community, Charles G. Edwards, president of the Central Savings Bank, New York City, and former president of the Real Estate Board of New York, which office he held for three years, will address the general sessions of the convention in a talk expected to have interest for both real estate and banking groups over the country. Mr. Edwards, president of the National Association of Real Estate Boards during 1925, will analyze real estate from today's point of view of the mortgage financing institution of which savings banks in the New England region, and in New York and New Jersey have an important place.

Alfred H. Wagg, West Palm Beach, Fla., vice-president of the National Association of Real Estate Boards for the Southeast region, former president of the Real Estate Association of the State of New York aid of the Florida Association of Real Estate Boards, will speak about "Modern Merchandising of Real Estate."

Herbert U. Nelson, Chicago, national executive secretary for the National Association of Real Estate Boards, at present studying housing conditions in Europe, who is expected to return early in September, is scheduled to bring before the New England regional convention some of his observations, of European practices and methods. Mr. Nelson's talk will center on ideas and methods, in planning, and financing, of special interest to real estate leaders in the United States in the present period when new home building is re-opening, and when the entire building and real estate industry is searching everywhere for cost reduction methods. His Springfield convention talk is his first scheduled address to a real estate group following his present visit to some of the leading new housing developments in England, Germany, Austria, Sweden, Denmark, Holland, Italy and France.

At the special group meeting for brokers, Robert B. Whitaker, Konosha, Wis., chairman of the brokers' division of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, will preside. E. G. Hacker, Lansing, Mich., president of the association's Institute of Real Estate Management, will conduct the group meeting for those interested in real estate management problems. Home building discussions will be led by Charles S. Wanless, Springfield, Ill., vice-chairman of the association's Land Developers and Home Builders' division. Maurice F. Reidy, Worcester, Mass., as president of the American Institute of Real Estate Appraisers of the National Association, will also be one of the convention speakers.

FHA MORTGAGES SALES TOTAL $23,000,000

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29. — More than $23,000,000 of insured home mortgages have been sold to institutional purchasers of mortgage securities up to and including July 31, according to a statement made here today by Stewart McDonald, Federal Housing Administrator.

As of that date, he said, 48 insurance companies had recorded transfer to themselves of approximately $12,000,000 in mortgages insured under Title II of the National Housing Act, or more than one-half of the total purchased. National banks, savings banks and trust companies account for the purchase of the balance.

"These institutions," Mr. McDonald said, "have gone into markets beyond their own State boundaries for a great bulk of these insured mortgages, thereby contributing toward a freer flow of mortgage money from areas where it is abundant to areas where itis scarce.

story building at the southwest corner of Washington avenue and Eighth street, and added two store rooms on Eighth, including the northwest corner of St. Charles street. The concern, which handles men's clothing, etc., has occupied the Washington avenue corner for the last 17 years. The enlarged quarters embrace the entire Eighth street side of the block, extending from Washington avenue to St. Charles, with a floor area of 45x150 feet. Pretentious store fronts and modern fixtures, together with a cooling system, have been installed.

A Lease Recently Renewed.

Bond's Stores, Inc., a men's clothing concern, recently acquired a lease on the first floor of the building at the northeast corner of Eighth and St. Charles streets, thus providing for the expansion of its store at the southeast corner of Washington avenue and Eighth street. The enlarged store extends the full depth of the block of 150 feet on Eighth, with a frontage of 54 feet on both Washington avenue and St. Charles street. New store fronts have been installed. Negotiations for this lease were handled by Arthur S. Martin & Son.

The Bee Hat & Cap Co. has leased the entire fourth and fifth floors of the building at 1107-09 Washington avenue. This concern, which is in the wholesale field, has occupied the fifth floor of this building for several years. It is composed of Morris and Charles Benowitz. Cornet & Zeibig arranged the lease.

A Dream Come True

Have you ever dreamed of a Colonial home with true colonial simplicity? Have you ever wanted a home with a log-burning fireplace surrounded by an old-fashioned white wood mantel? Have you ever considered the sheer comfort of having an all-automatic air-conditioned gas heating system?

Of course you have—we all have. It may have been your dream once, but now the dream's come true. For today in the 7900 block of Delmar Blvd. there is a colonial home that has everything in it you've wanted. Three spacious bedrooms (the master is 24 feet long with connecting bath). This home is finished throughout with attractive fixtures and decorations in keeping with its true colonial style of architecture and a cheerful kitchen with a color scheme of crimson and white. There are 6 such homes nearing completion now. Each distinctively different in design. Priced as low as $11,500 on terms that are more than reasonable.

Why not come out today? We are so convenient to everything — transportation, stores, schools, churches, and yet retaining the true suburban atmosphere the 7900 block of Delmar Blvd. affords. Drive out Delmar Blvd. to 2 blocks west of North and South Road.

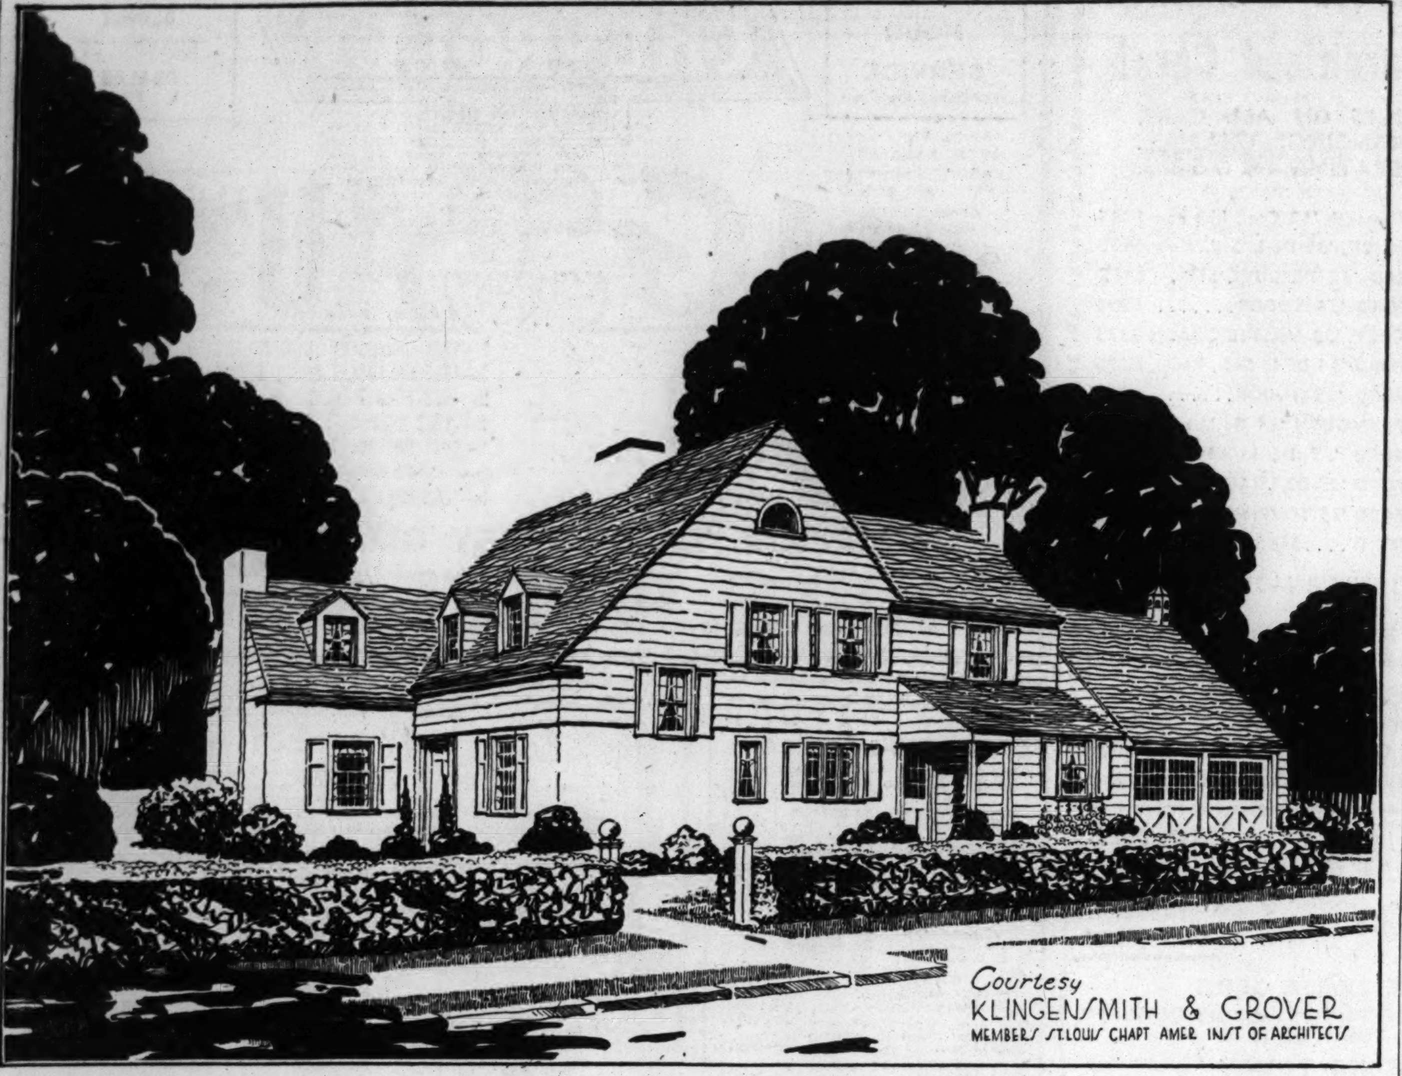
Rambling Colonial House in Brick Without Basement

Heater Room, Laundry and Storage Are Above Ground Which Makes a Rambling and Spacious House That Has Much Interest.



Courtesy
KLINGENSMITH & GROVER
MEMBERS ST. LOUIS CHAPT AMER INST OF ARCHITECTS

THE plan to build houses without basements is one that has been growing during the last few years. Basement-less houses originated in the Southwest where the winters are rarely cold enough to demand central heating. Any heating that is necessary is usually furnished by a fireplace, the laundry is done on a screened porch or leanto and, the way it seems to this writer our neighbors of the Southwest do little or no storing.

However that may be, basement-less houses have become a definite part of the living scheme here in the Middlewest and a great many prospective home owners are contemplating a house of this kind.

A house without a basement means that space for heater room, laundry and storage must naturally be found above ground. This, according to the architects who planned the house illustrated here, means that a house cannot be planned as compactly as the house that is built over a basement. It is necessary to spread a house of this kind.

The first problem which the architect encounters is the position of the heater or machine room in relation to the rest of the house. These architects have found that a centrally located heater room simplifies the heating problem whether the heating system be warm air, hot water or steam. Where summer air conditioning is contemplated a room located as this one is would also be a decided advantage.

THERE are distinct advantages about an above the ground laundry of light, air and step-saving. In this plan the laundry has been tied in with the service area of the house. It is a large light room with stationary washtubs and leaves enough room for built-in cabinets in which linen may be stored. The laundry in this case may also become a sewing room where the mending is done and a sewing machine installed.

Few people realize just how much goes into a basement until they find they must dispense with it. The architects planned ahead, however, and provided a storage room and a tool room. The tool room is adjacent to the garage and opens on a terrace, thus tying in with the garden. Here the lawnmower and various garden equipment may be stored. If additional storage space is required, the upper portion of the garage may be connected to the house by means of a disappearing stairway.

The entrance hall is a spacious one with stairway to the second floor and roomy coat closet. The downstairs lavatory is accessible to all parts of the first floor. The living room is a typical colonial living room, the house having been planned as a rambling New England type. Cases for books have been planned for either side of the fireplace which is also typically colonial. There is enough wall space for larger pieces of furniture and yet there is sufficient fenestration. The dining room has two built-in cases for china and glass, a good sized bay window, and opens on the porch or living terrace. There is a small breakfast room between the dining room and kitchen with built-in cases. A modern family which entertains much might prefer to use this breakfast room as a bar.

THE second floor has a beautifully planned suite for the master consisting of bedroom, dressing room and bath. The bedroom has three exposures and the dressing room may easily be converted into a charming boudoir. The second bath is accessible to the two remaining bedrooms. Where the family is large an additional bedroom may be built over the garage thus providing a suite consisting of nursery and nurse's bedroom. The duct shaft is a very important part of the second floor, being an upward continuation of the heater room.

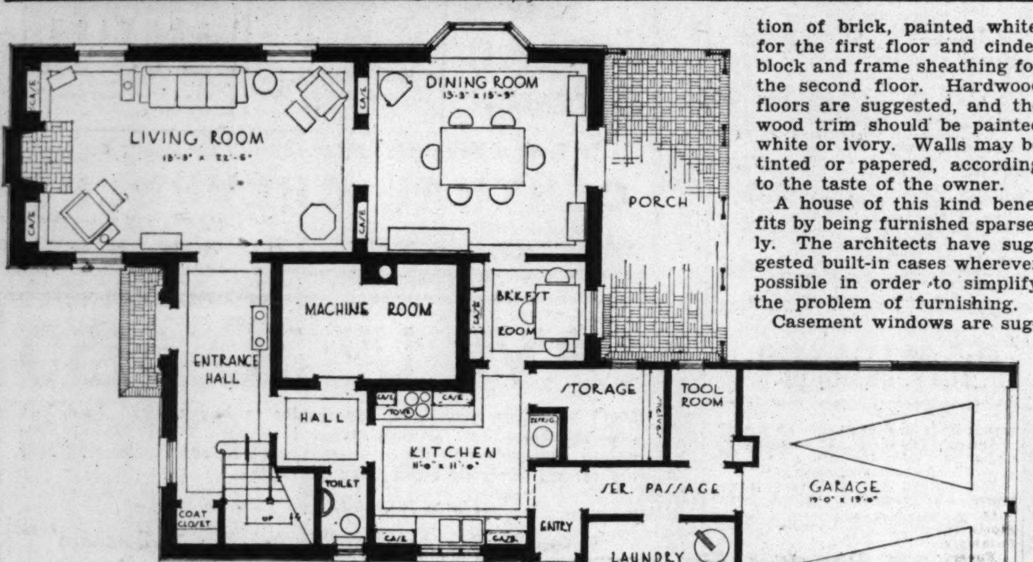
A house of this kind is ideally located on a corner lot. In such a case the garage doors open on the street as shown in the elevation. If an inside lot is selected they must of necessity open at the back, as shown in the plan.

Construction suggested is a combination of brick and frame siding, with an asbestos shingle roof in colors to harmonize with the shutters, which are working shutters. Brick may be used or a combination of brick, painted white, for the first floor and cinder block and frame sheathing for the second floor. Hardwood floors are suggested, and the wood trim should be painted white or ivory. Walls may be tinted or papered, according to the taste of the owner.

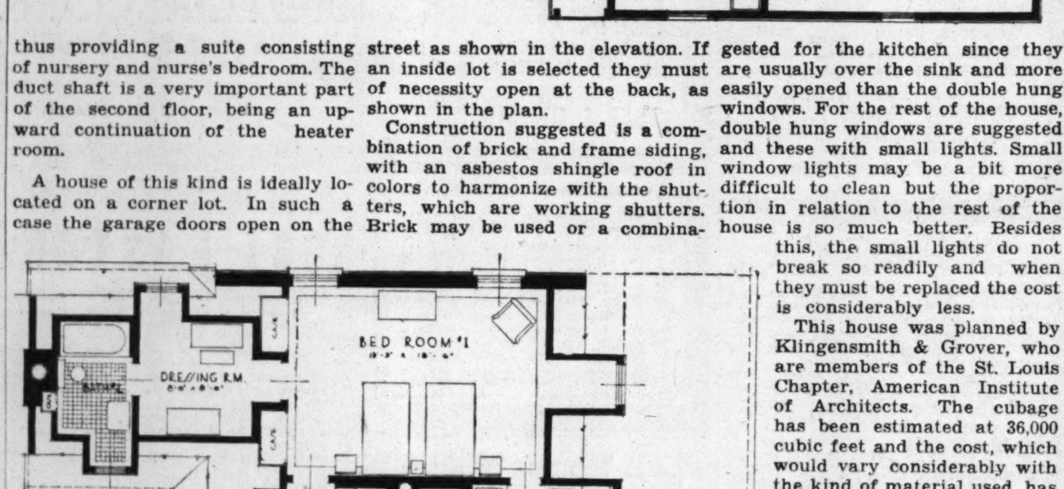
A house of this kind benefits by being furnished sparsely. The architects have suggested built-in cases wherever possible in order to simplify the problem of furnishing.

Casement windows are suggested for the kitchen since they are usually over the sink and more easily opened than the double hung windows. For the rest of the house, double hung windows are suggested and these with small lights. Small window lights may be a bit more difficult to clean but the proportion in relation to the rest of the house is so much better. Besides this, the small lights do not break so readily and when they must be replaced the cost is considerably less.

This house was planned by Klingensmith & Grover, who are members of the St. Louis Chapter, American Institute of Architects. The cubage has been estimated at 36,000 cubic feet and the cost, which would vary considerably with the kind of material used, has been figured at 40 cents per cubic foot.



FIRST FLOOR PLAN



SECOND FLOOR PLAN

Door for Dignity

Many living, dining, and other principal rooms of the home are given additional dignity by having double doors at the entrance. Double doors also allow a wider opening and require only half the width of floor space necessary to swing them. Folded back against the wall, they make a symmetrical group.

The bathroom is the one room that distinguishes an American home of today from the homes of all other lands and all other times.

QUESTIONS BEFORE THE HOUSE

Q. My barn is infested with rats. I am planning to make some repairs to it and would like to ratproof it if the cost is not too great. The flooring is of plank. What is the most effective course?

A. R., Chesterfield, Mo.

A. Write to the Superintendent of Documents, Washington, D. C., for Bulletine, 1533, "Rat Control," and Bulletin 1938, "Rat-Proofing Buildings and Premises." They are available at five cents each. Send cash or a money order, not stamps.

Q. I heard someone say that one could make putty at home? Is this possible? GRATEFUL.

A. Yes, it is possible to mix putty at home. Mix powdered whiting with linseed oil and blend the mixture with one-fifth as much white lead paste.

Q. The qarquet floors in our home are quite thin and we are afraid to use the scrapers on them. Is there any way that varnish can be removed without damaging the floor? B.

A. A light weight sanding machine will take off the finish but if you are afraid of using this you might use a commercial varnish remover. There are a number of them on the market which are quite satisfactory. Be sure to follow the directions on the container.

Q. I have an old maple rocker that I want to do over and I want to get back that lovely color that the old pieces have. The present finish is very badly stained and marred. ANTIQUE.

A. Remove all the old finish with varnish remover or with a solution of caustic soap cleansing powder in very hot water and with a stiff brush. Where the wood is very old and soft an application of linseed oil should produce the desired tone and a thin coat of shellac for a varnish base. Be sure to use the best grade of white shellac for this purpose. Then put on one coat of thin varnish. For a finish use pure white shellac thinned with an equal quantity of denatured alcohol. Apply thinly and in three coats. A penetrating wax makes a fine finish if you prefer this instead of the shellac.

Q. I noticed that the metal around my chimney where it goes through the roof is rusted through, and I am getting leaks from it. Must I pull down the chimney to replace it? HOME OWNER.

A. No; not necessarily. You can rake the joints where the flashing enters the brickwork and insert new flashing. The deeper in the joint you can get it the better. Be sure you use a noncorrosive metal.

A Few Brush Tips

To paint narrow lines successfully when decorating painted furniture, draw two parallel lines with a pencil as far apart as the proposed width of the painted line. Then, using a small brush, fill in with color. A small card held close to the line will help to confine the paint to its proper limits.

If you wish a stippled finish for furniture you're decorating, apply a thin coat of glaze color after the painted coat has been rubbed dull with pulverized pumice stone and oil. Stipple the glaze while it is still wet with a bristled, stiff brush. The brush is applied rapidly in a straight up and down fashion. Wipe the bristles often. When this coat is dry, apply a flat coat of varnish or shellac.

First use a coat of vermilion flat paint. Then a coat of black paint that has already been mixed with a small amount of Chinese blue. Finish with a coat of rubbing varnish.

Wooden Platforms.

Laundry trays, or tubs as they are commonly called, that are set on a concrete floor should have a small wooden slab platform in front of them so that the laundress need not stand on the wet floor. These platforms should be movable so the floor may be cleaned and the platform aired.

Home Insulation Requires Planning

When thinking of insulating a home, the average home owner immediately attempts to reach a decision on which commercial materials now on the market will give him the best results for the least expenditure.

Before selecting insulation materials, the home owner should give very careful attention to the weatherstripping of his doors and windows. Research has shown that a major part of the heat loss of a house is through the cracks around windows and doors.

For houses already erected, a number of types of weatherstripping are available, usually of either a metallic or a felted form. For new houses, several manufacturers are now building fabricated windows complete with frames into which are built efficient metallic weatherstripping, or similar metallic or felted weatherstripping may be applied at the time of erection of the house when ordinary windows are used. Tests show that by providing weatherstripping only, without any other form of insulation, fuel savings will amount to from 15 per cent to 20 per cent. If storm sash are used in addition to the weatherstripping, the fuel savings may run as high as 30 per cent.

SALESMEN WANTED

MEN

The majority of men who read this advertisement have no doubt scanned numerous advertisements hundreds of times, seeking something in their particular line or perhaps hoping that they will get "something for nothing."

Men, there is no such thing as "something for nothing" these days, and if we continue to center our thoughts on doing nothing but the things we are accustomed to, isn't it the truth that we get very little out of life? This is no time for a man to want to do the same old thing when there is no chance for him to progress. If you are not making $40.00, $50.00, $75.00, or more per week, and you have been in that business any length of time, and have diligently and honestly applied yourself, ask yourself whether that job affords you any opportunity. Then I suggest that you come in and talk with me. It costs you nothing to do this.

I have had the pleasure in the last few months of employing dozens of men all through Missouri, Iowa and Southern Illinois who today are making real money every week.

We are in the finest business in the world, doing business with the finest people. Our company is the largest of its kind in the world. This company has been established here a number of years, and when this unique product of ours was introduced, these men welcomed it with overwhelming joy and enthusiasm, and they are today making more money than ever before in St. Louis and vicinity.

These men are happy and contented, not because they have to work hard, but because, while they have to and do work hard, they get well paid—also a number of men in our organizations in nearby cities, in Springfield, Kansas City, Jefferson City, Davenport, Des Moines, E. St. Louis, St. Joseph, etc.

We have something that is unique in construction, marvelous in performance and was never heard of until recently manufactured and introduced by our company. Our men are making $40.00 to as high as $125.00 per week and up, and I want 12 good men, who can furnish good references, to come and talk with me, also talk with our men. Let them tell you about our business—if you have the qualifications they have, meet them; watch them do their work. See them make money every day, and the kind of money you would be happy to make. Go to their homes and meet their families, if you care to, and find out for yourself the real truth and opportunity of our business. It costs you nothing.

If you are sincere of purpose, interested in permanent success, willing to work hard, can furnish good references, I welcome you to call between the hours of 9:15 a. m. and 1:15 p. m., Monday, Suite 512, Paul Brown Bldg., 9th and Olive sts.—no other time.

Wedding Reception Follows at Bixby Estate at Bolton Landing, Lake George, N. Y.—Large Number of St. Louisans Attend Ceremony.

BOLTON LANDING, N. Y., Aug. 29.

THE historic ivy-covered Episcopal Church of the Saint Sacrament at Bolton Landing on Lake George, was the scene late this afternoon of the wedding of Miss Ruth Bixby Stevens and Hugh Hourston Craigie Weed Jr. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ir A. Stevens, 26 Portland place, St. Louis, and Mr. Weed is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh H. C. Weed of the Edgewood road, St. Louis.

The service was read by candle light at 6 p. m. by the Rev. Hugh C. Crosby. The altar and the chancel were decorated with lilies and white gladioli. More of the white blossoms combined with greenery framed the windows of the church.

Mr. Stevens gave his daughter in marriage. The bride's sister, Miss Virginia Stevens, was maid of honor. Another sister, Miss Elizabeth, and Mr. Weed's sisters, Miss Phoebe and Miss Catharine Weed, were bridesmaids. Samuel E. Badger Jr., East Orange, N. J., was best man. The ushers were Philip Potter, Schnectady, N. Y., a cousin of the bridegroom; Luther Ely Smith Jr., St. Louis; Walter J. Murphy Jr., Brookline, Mass.; Duncan Ballentine, Hempstead, L. The bride wore a gown of ivory tinted satin made on long clinging lines. The gown was designed with a deep square neckline and long sleeves of the satin that tapered to a point over the hand. The skirt, fitted to the figure, fell into a train. The only trimmings were bands of box pleated satin that edged the neck, the sleeves and the skirt. A veil of old rosepoint lace over tulle was held in place by a wreath of orange blossoms. The bride carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley and white gladioli.

The bride's attendants wore gowns of chiffon and large leghorn hats. Their gowns were fashioned with short capes fastened at the throat by small bows. The skirts, long and flaring, swept the floor. They carried large bouquets of white daisies. The maid of honor wore pale green and the bridesmaids yellow chiffon. Miss Virginia Stevens' hat was banded with green chiffon and the hats of the bridesmaids were trimmed with yellow chiffon.

After the ceremony a reception was held at Mohican Point, the estate of the late Mr. and Mrs. W. K. Bixby, grandparents of the bride. The wedding supper was served at the summer home of Mr. and Mrs. Stevens. Three branches of the Bixby family have adjoining summer homes here.

Bixby, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Church Bixby, Mrs. Frank Rice Sheldon, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Foster Bixby and their children were present for the wedding, except Mr. and Mrs. Harold M. WASHINGTON SCENE

By the POE SISTERS

(Copyright, 1936.)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29.

DISSAPOINTMENT was felt in Washington when the Right Rev. and Right Honorable Arthur Foley Winnington-Ingram, Lord Bishop of London, who recently arrived on this continent, went on a pilgrimage to Nova Scotia and did not include the capital in his itinerary.

The Lord Bishop, known as "Chuckles" to all his friends, because of his quick, infectious laugh, has visited Washington twice, first in 1907 and then 20 years later. He quickly won popularity here, for his is a genial personality. He is an adherent of the old French philosopher in following the precept: "Nothing that is human is foreign to me." And he has an abiding love for his fellow man.

On his first visit, in 1907, he was interviewed by a newspaper woman who was a southpaw and wrote somewhat upsidedown after the fashion of left-handers. As she was taking a few notes from his lordship on his impressions of America he noticed her manner of writing.

"My, how you do write!" he exclaimed with his distinguishing laugh.

Twenty years later, when he returned for his second visit to Washington, the same newspaperwoman approached him for a repeat interview. As he saw her, he reached out his hand and exclaimed: "How are you? And do you still write upsidedown?"

There is a little seaside mission in Massachusetts where the sailors journey back and forth from England to the United States with their cargo of fish, which has good cause to remember the first visit to America of the Lord Bishop.

A great magazine was trying to persuade him to write a signed story of his American impressions. He refused steadily, having made up his mind to do no such thing. Finally, in despair, the editor had a compilation made of the Bishop's addresses in this country, selecting certain phrases and putting them together in a readable story.

This was sent to the Lord Bishop at his stately palace in London, Fulham Palace, which, by the way, he fills with non-paying guests all the time with the idea of giving them a little holiday from daily cares.

With the manuscript went a note that if the Lord Bishop would permit its publication, the seaside mission in Massachusetts would be paid a considerable sum of money That won the Lord Bishop. Forthwith came his consent and the magazine and the mission both were highly gratified.

The Lord Bishop is a globe-trotter. He went around the world several times as in the days when the Bishop of London was a missionary leader and among his missions were the Episcopal churches in the United States. Once, on returning to England after a 10,000-mile trip overseas, a woman friend said to him: "My dear Lord Bishop, you should get out of London for a little change of scenery! You need a rest."

The Lord Bishop tells that story with a chuckle.

"Woman's place is in the home" used to be the slogan of the antisuffragists who feared that woman's entrance into the world of affairs might mean negelct of or a lessening of her interest in things that affect the home.

Little did they know women. There are a host of them in official life in Washington who discredit this theory. "Home" is still the primary interest with these women and often, when their callers think they seem a bit distracted with some knotty government problems they are, most likely, thinking of what new colors to use in the new curtains for the sitting room windows or whether the maid will forget to make the pet mousse for tonight's dinner.

Labor cares are put behind her by Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins when she retires to her charming Georgetown residence after the day's work. There Secretary Perkins is far more interested in a new combination of petunias for a garden plot or a new dish with which to surprise awaited guests than in problems she has left behind her in her big office in the Department of Labor.

Secretary Perkins is not unique among the women executives of the department in this regard, however.

Built under their personal inspection and suggestions is the Colonial house occupied by Dr. Martha Eliot, assistant chief of the Children's Bureau of the Department of Labor, and Dr. Ethel Dunham, director of research of the same bureau, on Reservoir road. Old colonial furniture the result of many little journeys into nearby Virginia and Maryland enrich its atmosphere and the walls are covered with landscapes painted by Dr. Dunham, and charming portraits of Indian children she has made on trips to the Southwest.

Nor is there anything statistical about the quaint Georgetown house occupied by Dr. Elizabeth Tandy, who made the statistical report on maternity in this country and was elected the first woman delegate to a recent conference in Europe dealing with such matters of figures and facts. When Dr. Tandy found her Georgetown home it was in somewhat dilapidated condition. Now it is a dwelling of charm and beauty. Not one piece of the furniture or even a cover for a bed is permitted in this house which does not conform to its antiquity. Dr. Tandy also loves to experiment with colonial dishes from recipes which she has gathered together.

The first thing Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt did when she was appointed Assistant Attorney General was to procure a home in Georgetown for herself and her adopted daughter. There she has a garden in which she works many hours when the cares of her law practice are put aside. As is well known, she was in charge of the prohibition enforcement unit while in the Department of Justice. So some of her neighbors in Georgetown amused themselves by parking all their empty liquor bottles in Mrs. Willebrandt's back yard. She only laughed at their jokes, however, and the practice soon stopped.

Miss Katherine Lenroot, chief of the Children's Bureau, who lives in the same apartment building with her parents, Judge and Mrs. Irvin L. Lenroot, has an apartment of her own, where her friends enjoy her hospitality. From her summer pilgrimages to her old home in Northern Wisconsin, she comes laden with the good things of the region to share among her friends here.

Two women big game hunters who appeared in recent news stories are well known in Washington. They are Mrs. Ernest Thompson-Seton, once national president of the League of American Pen Women and a temporary resident of Washington, and Mrs. Armand Denis, formerly Miss Leila Roosevent, second cousin of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt and Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, and, of course, a great-niece of that big game hunter, Theodore Roosevelt.

Mrs. Denis recently arrived in this country with her husband after a year and a half in the Belgian Congo. Washingtonians who know this energetic woman still smile at a story told of her. When her husband refused to take her with him on an expedition on which he went with Frank Buck some years ago, nothing daunted, she obtained a truck and a woman companion and set out to beat his record. The next time her husband went on an expedition he took her along.

Social Activities In Washington

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29.

DR. S. T. WANG is to succeed the popular Dr. Sao-ke Alfred Sze as Ambassador of China. The resignation of Dr. Sze will remove one of the most erudite figures in the capital's foreign colony. A graduate of Cornell, Dr. Sze combined the ancient traditions of the Orient with the qualities of the well-bred American.

Dr. Wang, former Chinese Foreign Minister, was graduated from Yale, was a former student at the University of Michigan and is a veteran diplomat. He resigned the Foreign Ministry in 1931 after a three-year term tour of duty, and now is a member of the ruling Kuomintang party's central executive committee.

Another change in diplomatic circles here is that Vladmir Hurban has been named to succeed Dr. Ferdinand Veverka as Minister from Czechoslovakia. Dr. Veverka will be transferred to Austria. Hurban was former Military Attache at the legation here, and is now Minister to Sweden.

Dr. Veverka, who was popular during his eight years in the capital, left last week for New York, and will sail on the Italian liner, Vulcania, Dr. Veverka and his wife are accompanied by their son Ferdinand Jr., who will follow the traditions of aristocratic Czech families by entering a military school shortly after he sets foot on his native soil.

Several weddings will take place next month after Labor day. A small but important wedding will be that of Senorita Amelita Alfaro, daughter of the former Minister of Panama and Senora de Alfaro, when she becomes the bride of Frank R. Weller, on Wednesday, Sept. 23.

The wedding will take place in St. Matthew's church in the afternoon and will be followed by a small reception at the home of the bride's parents. Senorita Alfaro made her debut last winter when her parents gave a reception and dance for her at the Pan-American Union. The wedding will be as informal as possible.

Miss Barbara Dunn, of Washington, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Y. Dunn, of Lee, Mass., will be married to Frederick S. Johnson, of Stone, Staffordshire, England, on Saturday Sept. 12. Miss Dunn's brother, Henderson Dunn, married Miss Peyton Hawes, daughter of the former Senator and Mrs. Harry M. Hawes in July.

Golden Wedding of The Edward Rodiers

THE wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Rodier, 4406 Laclede avenue, which took place 50 years ago yesterday at Plainsville, Kan., was repeated yesterday morning at 9 o'clock at the St. Louis Cathedral. The Rev. Nicholas W. Brinkman officiated.

The chancel was banked with palms and the altar decorated with gold roses and tall cathedral tapers. Preceding the ceremony the organist played "The Lohrengrin Wedding March" and Gounod's "Ave Maria." The bride entered on the arm of the bridegroom. She was dressed in a white sheer costume and carried a colonial bouquet of gold roses and lilies of the valley. Both Mr. and Mrs. Rodier wore gold medallions, gifts of the bride's sister, Mother St. Raymond, who is Mother Superior of Jesus Mary Convent, Quebec, Canada.

CHILDREN TAUGHT TRAFFIC SAFETY IN NURSERY RHYMES

None of Words of United Charities Homes Hit by Automobiles This Year.

A campaign to educate the children in United Charities settlement houses and community centers in traffic safety has succeeded so well that not one of the hundreds of children at the houses and centers has been struck by an automobile this year, it was announced yesterday.

Nursery rhymes that start out in Mother Goose fashion and end with safety warnings, songs dealing with safety methods, and gay posters are used to impress them with the necessity of crossing streets carefully.

The children are taught to respect the traffic policeman and look on him as a friend. Traffic drills are set up, with the children taking turns at being "policemen," "pedestrians" and "motorists."

FEDERAL SCHOOL CAMP FOR GIRLS NEAR ANNA, ILL.

Youth Administration to House 100 From Needy Families in Dormitories.

CHICAGO, Aug. 29.—Plans for establishment of a resident school camp for girls at Wolf Lake, 15 miles north and west of Anna, Ill., in the Shawnee National Forest, were announced today by William J. Campbell, director of the National Youth Administration in Illinois.

Dormitories will accommodate 100 girls from needy families in some 20 counties in Southern Illinois, Campbell said. The new school probably will be opened within a month.

Girls will be picked from outstanding leaders in youth activities and will receive $5 a month each from the NYA while taking a four-month course in health and physical education, home economics, handicraft, home beautification, music and dramatics.

A staff of 20 teachers, headed by Miss Marguerite E. Gilmore, director of the project, will be in charge of the school. The site was provided without cost by the United States Forestry Department.

POET BUYS BIG BELL TO MAKE "SWEET SOUND AT EVENTIDE"

Wallace H. Robb Says He Will Ring It Only When in the Mood.

By the Associated Press.

KINGSTON, Ontario, Aug. 29.—Poet Wallace Havelock Robb has bought a big bell with the tone of D—natural — for the purpose of making "a sweet sound over the countryside at eventide."

The bell, Robb says, cost him $1000. "I have denied myself things for years to get it," he said, and it hasn't the slightest utilitarian purpose. Robb said he didn't want a fire bell, a church bell or a school bell or a bell to be rung for some good reason. "I shall ring it," he explained, "when I am in the mood for it. Perhaps at twilight, in summer, the people near my home may hear a pastoral sound like beauty enchanting them."

The bell, cast in England, weighs nearly a ton in its frame. Robb has given it the name of "Gitchi Magamo", a phrase from the Algonquin tongue, meaning "a beautiful song." Impressed upon the bell are two lines of Robb's own poetry:

"I give my soul to the silent dawn,
And it goes where the song of the birds has gone."

Robb says the bell is "melodious and with a minor note of sadness, like poetry"—and that it "speaks when spoken to." "I mean," he added, "that if you speak to it, it will murmur."

MISSOURI HEAT SLOWS TRADE

St. Louis Department Store Sales 7 Pct. Below Previous Week.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29.—The Department of Commerce said today continued excessive heat during the week ended Wednesday retarded retail trade in Missouri.

St. Louis department stores reported sales 7 per cent below the previous week and 16 per cent under the corresponding 1935 week, while unimproved drouth conditions resulting in virtually complete crop failure over a wide area reduced Kansas City sales below the previous and corresponding 1935 weeks. Wholesale activity in St. Louis was reported holding to the level of the previous week. The report estimated three-fourths of the Missouri corn crop had been cut for fodder.

Political Talks May Jam Air Through Fall

Favorite Programs Likely to Be Crowded Off Frequently Because of Parties' Demand for Time.

ALTHOUGH definite time allotments have not been made, indications are that throughout the fall many popular radio programs will be crowded off the air because of demands of political parties for time, both to feature their candidates and to make reply to speeches by representatives of other parties.

President Roosevelt has indicated that he will not open up politically until early in October. Gov. Landon's speeches at Middlesex, Pa.; Chautauqua and Albany, were broadcast on the networks at the regular commercial price. Also in the radio running will be the presidential candidates of the minor parties—Norman Thomas, Socialist; William Lemke, Union party; John W. Aiken, Socialist-Labor; D. Leigh Colvin, Prohibition party, and Earl Browder, Communist. Each presumably will buy as much network time as his party chest can afford. The Communists already have bought eight weekly 15-minute periods on the WEAF and WJZ networks.

Considering the money available to the Democrats and Republicans, who have stated they will spend much of it for radio time, and considering the fact that five other candidates for the presidency must be given equal opportunity on the radio under equal conditions, which means an equivalent right to purchase time, limited only by their pocketbooks, it is surprising that such a small amount of time on the air is being consumed for politics as yet. Add to the presidential candidates an equal number of vice-presidential candidates, not to forget the party chairmen, who will speak or are already speaking, and add to these the various other quasi-political organizations which want to broadcast their messages—and one has some idea of the brainstorms ahead for those who handle radio time clearances.

Whether the networks and stations will sell liberal amounts of time to these other groups has not been decided, but in several instances their central figures will undoubtedly speak under regular party auspices. Thus Dr. Townsend's Old-Age Revolving Fund, Father Coughlin's National Union for Social Justice, Rev. Gerald Smith's Share-the-Wealth organization, the Liberty League and the recently formed Jeffersonian Democrats may all seek time on the air. At least, most of these have "radio directors" whose duty is to get their principals on the air as often and as widely as possible.

So September and October will be difficult ones for radio, to say the least. For the most part, the party leaders seem quite willing to take open time for their broadcasts. Already the Republicans and Democrats have purchased fixed periods on the networks, but when the campaign waxes hot, the various partisans will want to answer one another and will demand that other programs go off to clear the way for their speeches. This has been the case in previous national campaigns, and there is no reason to believe that it will not be the case this year.

Correspondents covering Gov. Alfred Landon's speaking tour remarked upon the presence of the Republican presidential candidate's "radio coach" on the platforms with him, always within his ready view and frequently signaling him to slow down or otherwise watch his forensic manner. At Middlesex, Pa., at Chautauqua and at Buffalo this week, Gov. Landon's tutor was always with him—a young man assigned to the task by Hill Blackett, the Chicago advertising man who is G. O. P. radio director and originated the idea of coaching his candidate in the tricks and nuances of radio.

While Republican radio headquarters in Chicago appear inclined to soft-pedal any information about this phase of their activities, it is commonly known that even before the nominating convention Landon men were at work developing their candidate as a "rario personality," knowing that his microphone voice compared poorly with that of President Roosevelt. That he has improved is generally conceded, due largely to his coaching by the teacher in radio technique who was first sent to Topeka to work on Landon's radio voice and manner.

Both Gov. Landon and Col. Frank Knox, his vice-presidential running mate, carry their own microphone stands and their own control operators with them on their speechmaking tours

A dance concert in Columbus, O., by Guy Lombardo's orchestra will be picked by the CBS chain at 10:30 tonight.

Gossip From the Studios

GRACE MOORE, the opera and movie singer, will play in "Trilby" in the Monday Night Radio Theater the night of Sept. 21. . . . Henry Busse and his orchestra will begin Sept. 9 a series on KSD at 2 p. m. Wednesday. . . . Better shows on many of the smaller radio stations are expected as a result of the jam in programs and entertainers on the networks. Lack of available time for sponsors on the big stations leaves hundreds of widely known singers, musicians, comedians and actors out of work. As a result, sponsors are having no difficulty in engaging them for broadcast and transcription series . . . Bess Johnson, who plays "Fran" in Today's Children and is to direct a Sunday afternoon show on the CBS net soon, is one of the few women executives in radio. She runs the radio department of a big Chicago advertising agency. . .

Latest reports from Detroit are that Father Charles Coughlin will open a series of Saturday evening half-hour broadcasts Sept. 12 on the Mutual network and other stations from coast to coast, a total of 31. It was stated that his programs would continue to feature talks on economics on the same lines as in his previous Sunday series. . . .

Helen Hayes, who was starred in Edith Meiser's "The New Penny" serial on the WJZ chain last season, has decided to use another serial for her Monday night series on the same chain that will start Sept. 28. . . . In addition to Milton Berle as leader, the extra Community Sing series set for 8 p. m. Sunday on the CBS network and KMOX, starting Sept. 6, will star Wendell Hall, "The Red-Headed Music Maker," and Billy Jones and Ernie Hare, the original Happiness Boys. . . . Hal Kemp and his orchestra and Ed Smalle's Seven G's novelty singers have been added to the cast for Phil Baker's new Sunday evening programs on the CBS net and KMOX, beginning Sept. 27. Ken Carpenter has been selected as the announcer for Fred Astaire's programs on KSD Tuesday evenings. As was told last Sunday, Jack Benny will open Astaire's series the night of Sept. 8 and Astaire will be back from England in time for the second program, Sept. 15. . . . Joan Blaine, the Chicago NBC actress who has played in many network serials, is in New York with a chance on Broadway in the offing. . . . Igor Gorin will postpone his concert tour until late fall or, at least, until he has completed his part in "The Big Broadcast of 1937." Meantime he will continue on the Hollywood Hotel period. . . . So successful has Peter Van Steeden, the orchestra leader, been as an extra comedian handling lines with Stoopnagle and Budd, that he has been offered a place as a clowning master of ceremonies in a new fall radio show. . . . Stoopnagle and Budd are the only radio comedy team who use a single script. They say that using separate scripts slows their funmaking.

The opening of Jerry Belcher's programs, for which he plans to take microphones into typical homes, has been postponed from Sept. 6 to October. . . . Henry King's orchestra will replace that of Eddie Duchin on the George Burns and Gracie Allen program Wednesday. Duchin is expected back on the programs when the two comedians, who have been given a 52-week extension of their radio contract, return to New York from Hollywood some time in the fall. . . . Andre Kostelanetz will be one of the guest conductors for the Grant Park Symphony concert tonight, directing the second half of the program, which will include Tschaikowsky's "Francesa di Rimini" music and Gershwin's "An American in Paris." . . . Morton Downey, back from four months in Europe, is singing this week in Chicago, and soon will go to the Pacific Coast for radio and stage work. . . .

Al Jolson is in New York talking radio engagements with two possible sponsors. . . . Mark Warnow's orchestra has been signed for Helen Hayes' new radio serial. Kenny Baker, the tenor, will be with Jack Benny when the comedian opens his series on KSD in October, and Agnes Moorhead, the comedienne has been re-engaged for the Phil Baker programs. . . . Bob Trendler's orchestra, the Grenadiers Quartet and several soloists are billed for a mutual network show starting at 4:30 p. m. Sunday, Sept. 27. Because of movie "retakes" and prospects that he will play in two more films, Benny Fields will remain in Hollywood until late next month. As a result, his twice-a-week programs on the CBS net, which were to have been resumed last Wednesday, have been postponed, probably until Sept. 25 . . . Experiences of a young physician as he tries to get a start in his profession will be dramatized in a serial entitled "Young Hickory," set for 2 p. m. Monday through Friday on the CBS net, starting Monday, Sept. 7. The serial is being written by William J. Murphy, author of "Flying Time," and the American Medical Association's Your Heath broadcasts . . .

Several breaks in the transmission of Floyd Gibbons' talk on the Spanish Civil War, coming through from EAQ, Madrid, on the WJZ network last Sunday, and scheduled to be repeated again this Sunday on the same program, gave American listeners only a slight idea of the difficulties facing a war correspondent attempting to relay a verbal description via radio. Even more significant were the carefully guarded words of Gibbons, who obviously could not tell all since the censor was standing by to check every word. EAQ is in the hands of the Government forces. Presumably, Gibbons will later go to England or France and broadcast a full description of what he saw.

Jessie Best Is Bride Of Stephen L. St. Jean

MISS JESSIE ELIZABETH BEST, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse L. Best, 4527 Magnolia avenue, was married yesterday afternoon to Stephen Louis St Jean, 4221 Flora place. The wedding was informal and took place at the home of the bride's parents and only a few relatives and close friends were invited. The Rev. R. C. Milliaman of Tyler Presbyterian Church officiated.

The bride wore the wedding dress worn by her sister, Mrs. W. C Crenshaw, Jr. at her wedding last June. The dress was made of satin, on princess lines, over which was a lace jacket to which was attached a lace train. The veil was tulle with a braided satin halo. She carried a bouquet of gladioli and lilies of the valley.

The bride's only attendant was her sister, Mrs. Crenshaw. Her gown was pale pink and she carried an old-fashioned bouquet of asters in shades of lavender and pink.

Roger Johansen, 4386 West Pine boulevard, was best man.

Mrs. Best wore a turquoise lace dress and a shoulder of deep pink roses. The bridegroom's mother was gowned in black and white chiffon, and wore a corsage of cream colored roses.

The wedding was followed by a small reception after which the pair departed on a short motor trip.

98,000 ST. LOUIS PUPILS GO BACK TO SCHOOL SEPT. 8

More to Report Later in Year — 3000 Principals and Teachers to Take Classroom Posts.

150 BUILDINGS WILL BE OCCUPIED

Classes in Portable Structure for Younger Children of St. Louis Hills District.

Board of Education officials and employes have been busy preparing for the opening of the school year Sept. 8—a week from Tuesday—when a first-day enrollment of about 98,000 public school pupils is anticipated.

However, enrollment during the course of the year will be much larger, having been 120,078 in the school year ended last June. Average daily attendance in the last year was 96,856. First-day enrollment last year was 98,075. New records for initial registration and attendance were set last year.

There will be more than 3000 principals and teachers on duty in the 150 schools to be in service. Some increase may be made in the teaching corps by the time the schools are well under way again.

Schools in use will include 115 of elementary grade, seven high schools, Hadley Vocational School and Harris Teachers' College, for whites, and 22 elementary schools, two high schools, Booker T. Washington Vocational School and Stowe Teachers' College for Negroes.

New Portable School.

A new portable school will be opened on board property at Donovan and Nottingham avenues, for children of kindergarten and primary grade age, to accommodate the increasing population of the St. Louis Hills district.

The new Herzog School, 5831 Pamplin avenue, opened May 4, will be put to service for its first full year. The high school, under construction at Kingshighway and Arsenal street will not be ready.

Pupils of the kindergarten and first six grades of the Garfield School, 2612 Wyoming street, will continue attending classes in an old building, while a new structure is being erected elsewhere on the site. Ten rooms of elementary grade pupils will be transferred to neighboring schools and the Garfield ninth-grade center will be abandoned.

Rooms for Ninth Graders.

The remaining 20 ninth-grade centers, conducted in otherwise vacant rooms of large elementary schools, will continue in service, keeping up a plan initiated several years ago. They have served to reduce congestion in the enrollment of first-year high school pupils, avoiding necessity for erection of high school space for which the board has lacked funds.

Kindergarten classes will be open to children who have reached the age of 5. Persons under 21, who have finished the eighth grade or taken high school work, may enroll in the vocational schools.

Superintendent of Instruction Henry J. Gerling announced that needy pupils again would be given lunches, clothing, carfare and such miscellaneous things as spectacles, through the Public School Relief Fund, contributed by teachers and other board employes. More than 3000 children received such assistance in the last year at an expense of more than $20,000. Careful investigations of need are made.

ALL BUT FOUR MISSOURI COUNTIES IN DROUTH AREA

110 Units Designated by Government as Entitled to Emergency Relief.

Only four of the 114 counties of Missouri remained outside the drouth area officially designated by the Federal Government, following announcement yesterday of the addition of three counties. Those not yet included but, according to Robert K. Ryland, State director of the National Emergency Council, in danger of the necessity of being added, were Mississippi, New Madrid, Pemiscot and Dunklin Counties.

This group, constituting the southeastern tip of Missouri, had more rain earlier in the summer than the rest of the State. The counties added yesterday, at the northwestern corner of the State, were Buchanan (St. Joseph), Holt and Atchison.

On July 17 there were only 55 of the State's 114 counties in the drouth area, but additions have been ordered by the Federal Drouth Committee almost weekly. Territory in the nation's officially designated drouth area is entitled to special assistance from the Resettlement Agricultural Adjustment and Works Progress Administrations.

Gravois Taxpayers' Meeting.

A meeting of the Gravois District Taxpayers' Association will be held at 8 p. m. Sept. 8 at the Edward Long School, Morganford road and Gravois avenue. Paul O. Peters, director of the Citizens' Non-Partisan League, and Charles A. Welsch, building commissioner, will be the speakers.

BIDS ON FINAL WORK OF WIDENING NO. 61

Low Offer on 3.68 Miles Between Herculaneum and Festus Is $132,497.

Bids for the last work in widening U. S. Highway No. 61-67 for 27 miles from the southern limits of St. Louis to the junction of State Highway No. 25, south of Festus-Crystal City, were received by the State Highway Commission Friday.

The low bidder for the job, covering 3.68 miles between Herculaneum and Festus, Jefferson County, was Deering & Davidson, Inc., of St. Louis, with an offer of $132,497.

Work will consist of widening the concrete pavement from 18 to 40 feet, providing four traffic lanes, except for stretches already having three lanes, where only the fourth will be added. It also will include .14 of a mile of pavement of a spur in the main street of Festus.

Lemay Ferry Road Contract.

A contract was awarded by the State recenty for about three blocks of 40-foot concrete paving, with underlying sewer, in Lemay Ferry road (U. S. No. 67), between the southern city limits and Fannie avenue. This will replace black-top surfacing. The remainder of this important outlet to Arkansas, Memphis and New Orleans is concreted across St. Louis and Jefferson counties and beyond.

From Fannie avenue to Imperial, Jefferson County, there is a 40-foot roadway. A similar widening is being carried out already between Imperial and Herculaneum. For a mile south from the Festus-Crystal City crossing there also is a 40-foot road, extending to the junction of No. 25.

More Direct Route.

When improvements are completed on No. 25, there will be a more direct route, saving about 10 miles, as well as avoiding some troublesome curves and rural traffic congestion, from St. Louis to Cape Girardeau, Mo.; Memphis and the South. No. 25 has an 18-foot black-top surface for 31 miles, from No. 61-67 to Ste. Genevieve, but has recently been provided with a 20-foot concrete surface from Ste. Genevieve to the Perry-Cape Girardeau county line. Extension of that pavement across Cape Girardeau County to Jackson, on No. 61, is under way.

Another low bid received by the State Friday, amounting to $76,701, was for widening North and South road, Brentwood, St. Louis County, from two lanes to four lanes, or 40 feet, for 1.18 miles, between Manchester and Eager roads. The bidder was the Flinn Paving Co. of St. Louis. This stretch carries passenger traffic of U. S. Highway No. 50. Manchester has four lanes and so does North and South road, north of Eager road, in Richmond heights. The section includes an S-curve on a hill, once notorious as a scene of bad motor accidents until earlier improvements were made.

"It was a desirable corner—and I bought it," said the man who tells of profits from the sale of well-selected real estate advertised in the Real Estate Columns of the Post-Dispatch.

DENIES ASKING JUSTICE TO DROP RELIEF CHARGE

Illinois Investigator Reopens Inquiry Into Case of East Side Coal Dealer.

Michael Milligan, an investigator for the Illinois Emergency Relief Commission, yesterday said to a Post-Dispatch reporter that he had not requested Justice of the Peace Louis Wangelin of Belleville to dismiss a charge against Carl Helfrich, president of the Helfrich Coal Co. of East St. Louis, of obtaining money from the Relief Commission by means of a confidence game. Milligan has reopened his investigation of the case.

Justice Wangelin had explained that he dismissed the case last Monday because Milligan, on whose complaint the warrant was issued, asked him to. Told of Milligan's denial, the Justice said: "Yes, I heard he denied it. I've asked him to deny it to me, face to face, and he hasn't done it so far. He came out to my house Monday with Helfrich, when I was home sick, and told me to drop the charge. He gave no reason."

While admitting he went to the Justice' home with Helfrich, Milligan said that they were met at the door by Wangelin's wife, and were told Wangelin was too sick to see them. They left, and at no time did Milligan tell the Justice to dismiss the case, he asserted.

"A Lot of Pressure."

"I had no authority to do so," the investigator said, "although a lot of pressure had been brought to bear on me to withdraw the charge." He would not say by whom the pressure was exerted.

'I went to Wangelin's home with Helfrich because Helfrich heard that deputy sheriffs were seeking to serve the warrant on him and came to me about it. At the time the warrant was issued a week before, I had asked Wangelin not to serve it until I had a chance to talk to Helfrich about the case. I told Helfrich that, and he asked me to go with him to Wangelin's home to see Wangelin about it. I am not satisfied with the disposition of the case, and I'm getting more complete information on it to give to the Relief Commission."

In his complaint, Milligan had charged that Helfrich had failed to deliver coal to recipients of relief, although paid for it by the commission. He told a Post-Dispatch reporter that from June 19 to June 26 about $4000 in relief coal orders had been issued to the Helfrich company, on which the company has been paid $2500, and that an investigation showed the coal company failed to fill some of the orders in the amount specified and failed to fill others entirely.

$5000 for Coal in June.

Milligan said that on Friday in his reinvestigation he questioned George M. Curry, former St. Clair County Relief Administrator, as to why coal orders totaling $5000 had been distributed by Curry the last half of June, when the weather was hot. Curry explained, Milligan said, that the coal was for cooking, and that each family on relief had been given an order for a ton, a two-months' supply.

At that time, Curry explained, the St. Clair County Relief Commission was liquidating its affairs, as it was to be supplanted in relief administration by the townships on July 1, and the $5000 was left in the treasury. It was put into coal instead of food, Curry said, because the relief recipients had enough food to last them several weeks, and the money could be distributed "more rapidly and easily" through coal.

State's Attorney Louis Zerweck of St. Clair County said his office had no information on the case.

BOY SCOUTS CIRCUS COMMITTEE NAMED

Clarence H. Howard Jr., Chairman—Show to Be Given in December.

The appointment of the St. Louis Boy Scout Circus Committee was announced yesterday by Clarence H. Howard Jr., chairman of the committee. Howard stated that the circus will be held early in December and that it will be the first circus since the St. Louis Council decided to present the Merit Badge Show and the circus in alternate years.

The committee, which will make final decisions on proposed plans for the circus this week, is composed of A. W. Lantz, chairman of the program committee; Joseph Metzger, Dr. L. H. Renfro, Charles Hertenstein, Dr. Forest H. Stanley, Joseph Kelly, R. T. Shepherd, Louis Sherwood, Roy Birkhead, Dr. C. E. Colgate, Carl Bauman and L. John Lewis.

Lantz explained that the foundation for this year's circus would be based on a study by the committee of programs offered by Boy Scout circuses in the 20 largest cities over a period of the last decade.

Sea Scout activities at Lake Creve were suspended last week due to low water caused by general drouth. Most of the boats were taken out of the lake and placed in storage until fall rains relieve the situation.

Gene J. Schaefer and Louis H. Helsher Jr. will receive Star Scout awards this week at a Court of Honor of their troop, No. 63. Elmer C. Hasse and Glan W. Smith will be advanced to first-class scout at the same meeting.

Fall and winter activities of the 300 St. Louis scout troops and the 65 Cub packs affiliated with the Council will begin this week and next as the public schools open. Already plans for Courts of Honor have been planned with several Scouts advancing to Eagle Scout rank.

Those scouts who will receive the rank of Eagle Scout this week at Courts of Honors held by their respective troops include Charles P. Malone, of Troop 63; Anselmo Geraci and Gerald Geraci, both of Troop 32.

Dick Anderson of Kirkwood 1 left yesterday for Minneapolis, where he will live with his parents. Before he left, his troop held a special Court of Honor and advanced him to Life scout.

A program in Girl Scout training was announced yesterday by Miss Eleanor Stevens, chairman of the Training and Personnel Committee of St. Louis Girl Scouts.

Elementary leadership training courses are scheduled for the week of Sept. 21, when courses designed for anyone interested in organizing a Girl Scout troop will be taught.

Advanced courses in leadership will be taught the week of Sept. 14. Extensive training in outdoor cooking and activities will be presented for Girl Scout leaders in these courses.

Plans on three meetings a month during the year on instruction on constructing poncho shelters, tent pitching, mapping and judging were also announced by Miss Stevens from Girl Scout Headquarters.

The MOVIE WHIRL

By Margaret Niemeyer

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 29.

GOODNESS but how this summer has swished by. It was the middle of last April when I started writing these articles to give the folks back home in St. Louis a sketchy sort of an idea about how the movie stars live and breathe and play and dress. Now it is September—well, nearly September—and a lot of bridge has flowed over the tables in the meantime. I've seen almost as many stars as are on view at the nearby Planetarium. Seen them in slacks and party dresses, at clubs and theaters and at their lovely homes and found that I have little more than scratched the surface of the Hollywood high spots. You see there are so very very many of them, real biggies whose names you know as well as you do your next door neighbor's. And, too, there are so many coming and going all the time that you never have heard of and probably never will. They look tremendously promising when they arrive but most of them just fade away after a screen test—or stay here to work in drive-in restaurants or anywhere else they can get a job.

● THE NAME Della Lind certainly means nothing in your young life nor did it in mine until yesterday when quite by accident I met this young Viennese beauty at MGM where she has been under contract less than three weeks. But if looks, personality, and background count for anything in the movie game I am pretty sure you will hear more of her.

Della was the daughter of Leopold Natzler, who was one of the most widely known stage comedians in Vienna before the war and who directed the first production of Franz Lehar's operetta "The Merry Widow," as well as playing the leading comedy role in it. From her mother she inherited a splendid soprano voice and great beauty. But her personality is her own and it is probably her greatest asset.

When we were introduced Greta Natzler—whose name had for obvious reasons to be changed but why to "Della Lind" I can't imagine—was just on the point of leaving for our most exclusive and most expensive shop to pose in some of their newest frocks and suits and was gracious enough to ask if I would like to go along. The store she was headed for always has the loveliest things and to see them on such a splendid model would be a treat, I knew.

● DRIVING DOWN Hollywood Boulevard Miss Lind told me much about her early days in Vienna and of the school days spent with her two younger sisters in Switzerland; of the havoc caused to her father's theatrical enterprises by the war; his loss of fortune and health, and the unexpected embarking of the three girls on professional careers (though the youngest was only 11 and Della herself only about 17) in order to help take care of the hospital bills. Then had come the supreme tragedy, her father's death. Since then Miss Lind has been a success on the London stage where she appeared in "Casonova" and several other productions.

At this point in her life's history we arrived at Magnin's where Miss Lind was expected and were led into a dressing room followed by the manager who trailed along with several gowns over one arm and holding a stunning sports dress on the other. It was this outfit which she wanted Della to try on first.

I stepped out into the main salesroom while Miss Lind made her change and soon she came out wearing a Hattie Carnegie sports model of olive green. The plain narrow skirt looked especially well on her tall slim figure and the blouse of orange, tan, and brown hemp-cloth was a knockout for dash and style. So much so in fact that a customer who was in the room, mistaking Miss Lind for a model as she walked out of the dressing room, rushed up to her and said, "Oh, I simply must have that suit, how much is it, and do turn so I may see it all around!"

● DELLA PROVED that she is an actress for, without batting an eye she said "Certainly, Madam," and with all of the airs of a trained mannequin, paraded back and forth, turning this way and that, before returning to the dressing room to have a good laugh and receive the apologies of the management.

I really must stop or you will think that I am perhaps too enthusiastic or something. But I don't think so. I am simply a fan for a newcomer who seems to have something to give and if she has I am only a well wisher.

I think you have already been told by the rest of our family that

Women's Thoughts Turn to Smart Autumn Outfits; Princess Lines Will Prevail

By Sylvia Stiles

THE first day of September, which will be with us Tuesday, is a red-letter day in fashion circles. It marks the date when a woman who prides herself on her smart appearance discards her bedraggled light apparel and proclaims with new attire that summer has given place to autumn.

The weather man may not be friendly to this fashionable venture but there are ways that a skillful deceiver can dodge a high temperature. She can select the type of costume which looks like autumn but feels like summer, adding accessories that obviously were created to be worn in late 1936. The swing and length of the skirt, the fitting of the waistline, the shirring of shoulders and sleeves, the height of a hat, and the flash of a new color are the sort of accents to consider.

Several different types of costumes to greet the new season are suggested by the shops of St. Louis, but each of these ensembles has the same basic silhouette. Princess lines prevail, for old as well as for young and there are modifications to meet the requirements of slenderness and stoutness. A hemline is exceedingly wide and appears only a few inches below the knees. Hips are again in vogue while waistlines are dwindling. Rich fabrics usually have a bumpy surface and are very light of weight although they look the opposite. Black is preferred to colors but it is more effective when a gold belt, a bright velveteen scarf or a vivid banding supplies a certain vivacity.

Since wool materials have been created with a sheerness that rivals chiffon there's no reason why the first fall costume cannot be of a woolen fabric. In fact, all of the fabrics whether of silk, wool or synthetic are designed to look like wool so that it is difficult to tell the texture of one from another. They have a quality which assures deft draping and gives that swing to the silhouette which is so essential to the season's chic.

A simple type of frock, beautifully designed and excellently executed, is the ideal garment with which to start the autumn in St. Louis. If it has the simplicity of line and the dignity of tailoring that an urban dress should have, it may be worn quite satisfactorily without a wrap on warm days and then serve its owner under a coat when the weather becomes colder. These points are points of charm and should be considered in the selection of an initial purchase.

THE costume which has been illustrated has the qualifications for early success and for a long career. First of all, it is black. Second, it is made of a beautiful sheer crepe with the nubby surface. Third, it has lines that stamp it emphatically as "last-minute style."

Skirts are very important for autumn and the skirt of this frock proclaims that importance. It is gored so that the fullness starts rather high on the hips and becomes greater until the hemline flares extremely. This flare is more evident because of a band of cloud blue velveteen ribbon which outlines the hemline. The blouse has the draped features which several Parisian designerrs have made

Velvets to Be Popular With College Girls

Dignity and Formal Tailoring Are Replacing "Collegiate" Fashions.

PRE-VIEWS of campus styles for 1936-37 indicate that dignity and formal tailoring are replacing swagger "collegiate" fashions. The college miss is demanding a touch of sophistication in her campus costumes, a note of luxury in her evening gowns. Pearls are required to add a formal note to the casual sweater and boyish bobs and back-to-nature fingertips are definitely out. The young collegiate will be up on her curled pompadours and her smoky shades of polish.

Velvets and velveteens are prominent—velvet for the Big Game, velveteen for the classroom. Velvet is seen in bonnet toques and matching velvet bags. The bonnets are worn off-the-face or high-in-the air, and carry tiny veils. The color contrast with the suit: brick or capucine with black, copper with brown, wine with dark green, smoke-blue with gray.

NO COLLEGE wardrobe is complete without its velveteen frock. It may be slate gray, neon blue or autumn leaf, in a two-piece model with swing skirt, or cut on princess lines. Hair styles follow the new much-dressed and curled-back theme, and nail polish in old rose or a light rust shade is carefully tuned to the costume. The college miss no longer lets her hair fly with the wind, or her fingernails glow with health by day and a crimson splash on special evenings. She keeps them softly tinted, even in the classroom.

Suits for football week-ends will be fur-trimmed and well on the dressy side. Fur jacket costumes are also important. Blouses are formal, in crepe or shiny lacquered satin. For tea-dancing after the game, the blouse is changed to a tunic of rich satin or metal. A metal tunic which opens down the front does double duty as an evening wrap on early fall nights.

Moleskin Theme

THE humble mole has become of fashion importance. Designers have brought this little animal into the limelight and perishable as the skin is, there's none more effective in portraying the costume theme.

Dyed moleskin in tones of wine and deep green is being used effectively for trimming on costume suits. It appears as boleros, Ascot scarfs, belts, collars and cuffs. Short jackets made of the skin also are effective to complete wool frocks. These appear in the natural shade as well as black.

Muff-like bags of mole are said to be coming into popularity later in the season, while the cuffs of gloves and the crowns of hats also will employ the same sort of trimming.

This New York

by Lucius Beebe

NEW YORK, Aug. 29.

AFTER 20 years of upheaval throughout wartime, prohibition, depression and the confusion of repeal, the restaurant scene in Manhattan is beginning to achieve something like stability, and by this fall a diner-around should be able to know in advance pretty well what to expect for table fare and for his money. For one thing, at least, prohibition is responsible: it changed New York from a town of enormous and rococo lobster places to a more civilized community where the small restaurant is a gastronomic unit of consequence.

The modest, individually owned establishment came into being during what was known with a guffaw as the dry era simply because, to survive at all a restaurant had to deal in liquor, while the risk to the investment prevented proprietors from maintaining expansive and gaudy premises. Frequently enough the restaurateur attracted a loyal following and, once the emphasis on drinking had abated, he had to brush up his cuisine in order to retain their patronage.

Now that the dust has settled and people are circulating once more, a reasonably permanent ratio between small cafes and the more pretentious establishments seems to have been achieved. With a few exceptions, dining de grand luxe in the Continental manner is still a monopoly of the older restaurants and hotel dining rooms: the Ritz Carlton, Colony, Plaza, Madison, Lafayette, Marguery, St. Regis, Sherry's and the Waldorf.

They have the advantage of larger cellars and more celebrated chefs de cuisine, maitres d'hotel and wine stewards, but their laurels are constantly menaced by a considerable number of smaller houses under the proprietorship of individual owners or a partnership. Jack and Charlie's "21," Leon and Gregory's Apertif, Mr. Titze's Theodore's, the Caviar, Frank's Coq Rouge, Jean's in Sixtieth street, the Meadowbrook, La Cremaillere, the Passy, Mascotte and a score or so of others that are jammed for lunch and have a substantial if leisurely dinner following.

Where New Yorkers dine is a mystery, anyway, since only "21" and the Colony ever seem reasonably full before the theater. Hit or miss feeding the face is, happily, a thing of the past, as Manhattanites are coming to know what their restaurants stand for and what may be expected of them.

DESPITE the removal of City Hall to the cooler reaches of Pelham Bay, the silly season got in its licks at Mayor LaGuardia, who gave every one a good midsummer laugh when he refused to be a party to a ricksha race, on the grounds that it smacked of human slavery. The spectacle of the Mayor in a William Lloyd Garrison pose and the possibility that the next municipal election may be fought over an abolitionist platform gave every one a titter and it was suggested that an underground railway for fugitive ricksha boys might be established, with the back room of Tony's as its starting point.

The possibilities for humorous endeavor seemed endless, with the ultimate possibility that the administration may be recalled to posterity by a statue erected to replace "Civic Virtue" and depicting Mr. LaGuardia striking the manacles from the wrists of a manumitted coolie wearing a Cornell '26 track shirt. As was pointed out by any number of Manhattanites who have the gayety of the community at heart, the introduction of rickshas to the town's boulevards would contribute no little to the horse cab and bicycle era spirit which sensible folk are attempting to recapture in defiance of a harassing mechanical civilization. The embattled motor car dealers and the taxi drivers (of whom there are just three times as many as are required in Manhattan) would probably join the Mayor on the abolitionist side, but it should be pointed out that at the World's Fair in Chicago, at Cleveland's Great Lakes Exposition and at Asbusy Park this summer rickshas have been a great success, and Central Park could do worse than have a rank of them for the leisurely minded.

"THE New Yorker's" paragraph about the old lady aboard the Hindenburg who brought her own lunch from Germany set us wondering whatever has become of the oldtime traveler who distrusted dining car fare and always brought a shoebox meal aboard the train with him. Even within our memory he was a familiar figure on the Pullmans. Usually he was the type that changed his Homburg or derby to a checked cloth cap as soon as the train got under way.

Sometimes he wore gloves, as this was in the days when air-conditioning was not and the draft through the window screen was accompanied by a cloud of soot and cinders

by

Martha Carr

Dear Mrs. Carr:

I AM WRITING this hoping that "J. M." will find added encouragement to properly adjust her difficulty.

From the time I was 16 until 22 I, too, was very much in love with a boy. We wanted so much to be married but couldn't find within ourselves the courage to settle our religious differences. Finally, deciding it was too important to forget, we parted and I married someone of my own religion whom I was sure would give me just the kind of religious security I wanted. Only it wasn't enough. Six months later we were forced to separate and now I am a divorcee, and should I ever marry again I will be an outcast in the church I loved above all else.

It would have been far better had I married long ago and gone to church and left him follow his own dictates as well. Going to the same church together won't make a happy married life—you need real companionship and unselfish love, and above all else faith and trust in one another. So, "J. M." don't ruin your lives by making such an issue of religion. Sit down and figure it out sensibly and don't steer shy of the subject because you think it is too big to handle.

EXPERIENCE.

Dear Martha Carr:

● I HAVE BEEN reading your column at every possible chance, and have always found it very interesting. It contains decidedly good advice for the needy and good suggestions to all readers in general.

Not to criticise your column, but rather as a suggestion, I want to answer in behalf of the letter signed "Bud" in the Aug. 11 issue, concerning the family of five adults, all working and making over $100 per month each, and the three male members relying on the two girls for all the general housework and cooking, and yard work and the replenishing and replacing things in the home. I would suggest they get a maid or housekeeper, for the rate of $25 per month it would require $5 a month from each member. Surely health, convenience and freedom are worth something. And (during this depression) do you not feel that since they are fortunate to have work, they would be willing to hire help and thereby help some less fortunate human in need of work?

As for keeping the lawn and yard in condition, I would say that is a man's job and if the boys do not attend to it, let it grow up in weeds. Surely the neighbors would berate the boys as much for letting the girls take care of it as if it were left to grow in weeds.

Sincerely. M. C, E.

My Dear Mrs. Carr:

We had an argument about the length of the great rivers of the world, especially the Mississippi, Missouri, the Amazon and the Nile. "MISSISSIPPI-AMAZON."

The Amazon River in Brazil is the largest river in the world; 3500 miles long from the Andes to the Atlantic. The Mississippi is 2406 miles long and the Missouri 2900 miles long, from the Rocky Mountains to the Mississippi River near St. Louis. The Nile, in East Africa, is known as the White Nile as far as Khartum, where it is joined by the Blue Nile. The total length to the Mediterranean Sea (or total length from source to estuary) is about 4000 miles.

My Dear Mrs. Carr:

● I HAVE BEEN married 14 years and have two daughters. For the past year, every time we go out, my husband spends his time staring at young girls. And if we go on an outing where there are girls with shorts on, my husband neglects the children and me terribly. When we are at home I tell him about it, he says it's my imagination and that I am jealous and quarrelsome. I try to overlook it, but it is getting worse all the time. We are both 35 and otherwise he is a good husband. Now Mrs. Carr, can you please tell me what I can do to cure him? DISGUSTED WIFE.

Perhaps he is just a little bit skittish and needs blinders, as the horses sometimes do. Perfectly normal husbands otherwise, sometimes do have these periods when they make themselves ridiculous. But I do not think quarreling is a very good remedy; probably it only makes the quarry seem all the more rare and eye-compelling.

If you can make him see how silly he appears to these young girls and to your friends, perhaps that will help. Do a little laughing about it, as no doubt your friends and the young girls are doing.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

● I HAVE JUST BEEN to a health institute, and a masseur has advised me that I would be wasting my money trying to have my hips reduced, as she states I am built that way and there is nothing to be done about it.

As there is no way to correct this other than wearing proper clothes, could you tell me the sort of clothes to buy? Are two-piece dresses the best to buy; must every dress have pleats in the skirt; must I avoid wearing blouses and skirts, and must I wear dark clothes?

There must be other women having this same problem and I am sure there will be many interested.

Thank you for any advice you may give. ANN.

I believe exercises do help, even though the bone structure of the hips is definitely fixed. At least by this method you can prevent the prominent bones from adding a cushion covering of flesh. I can send these exercises, if you will mail me self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Long lines from the waist to the hem are a help, though in doing this it is not well to make the length from the waist to the hem out of proportion to that from the shoulder to the waistline. Sometimes the two-piece frocks disguise the broad hip line if the waistline is not pulled in too tight.

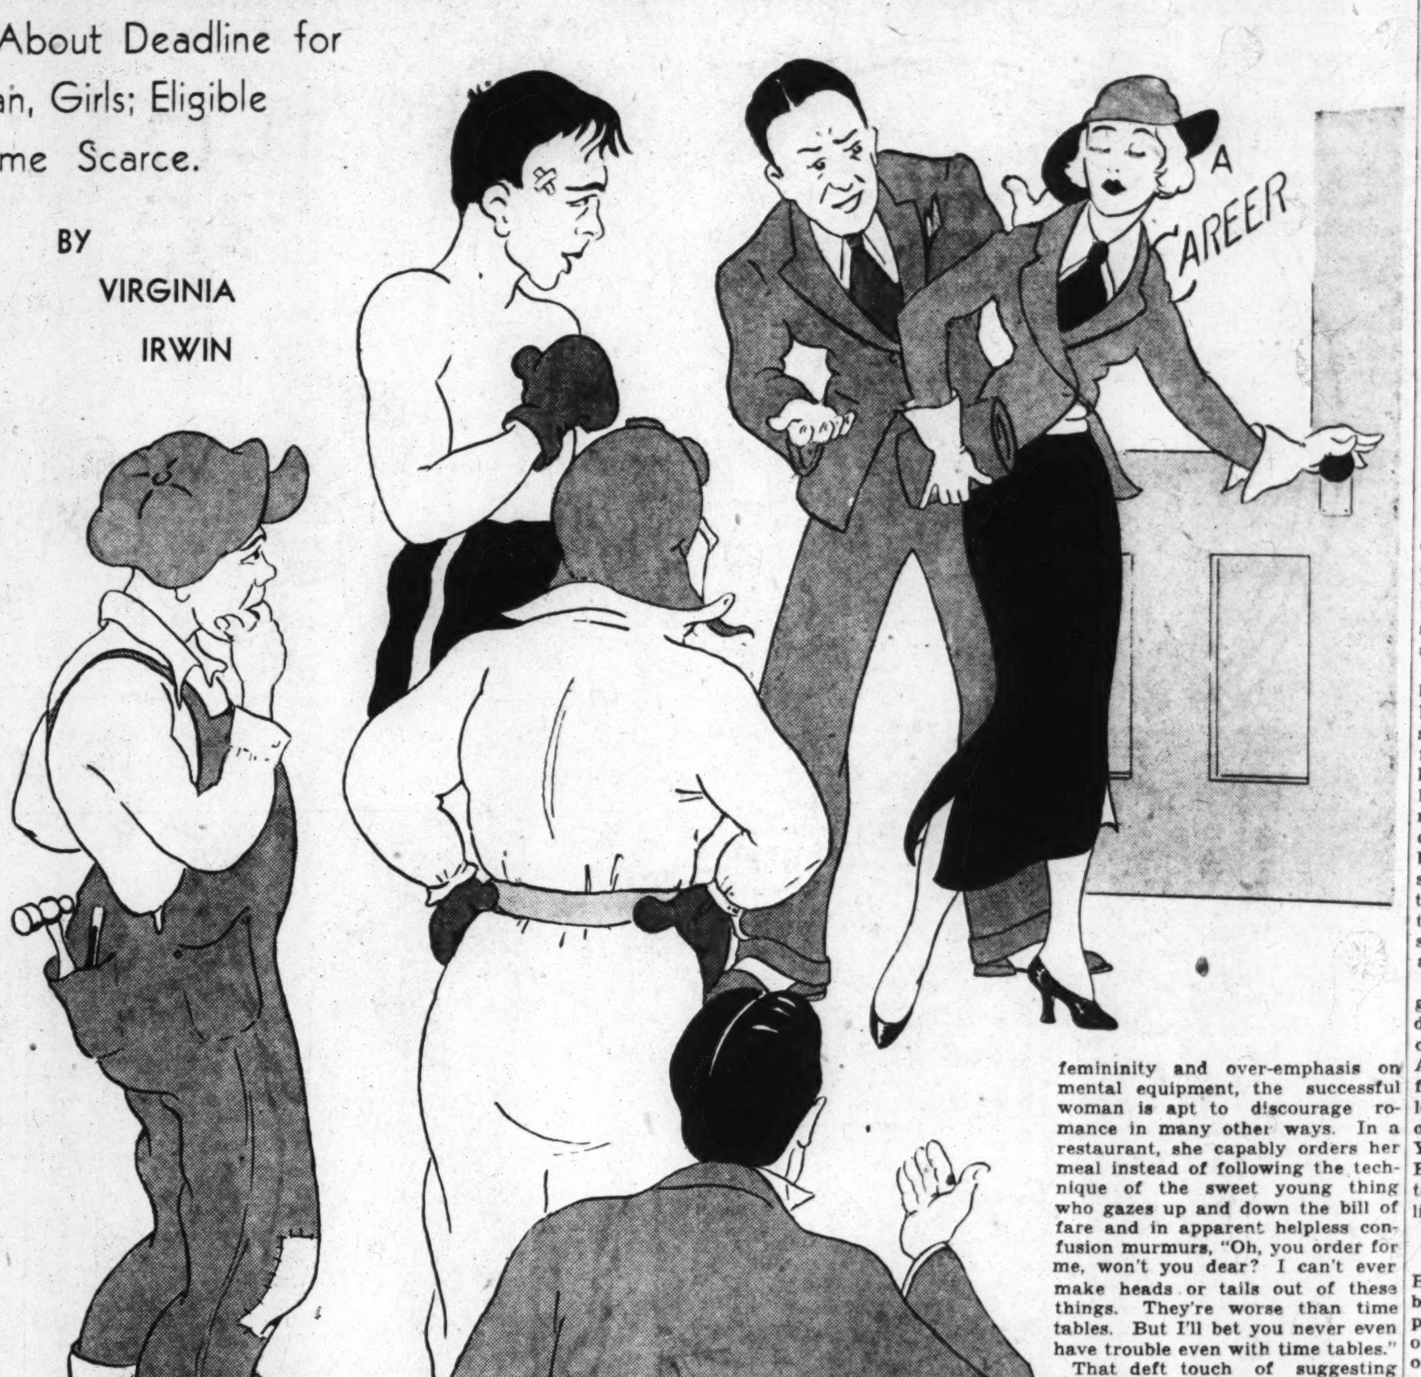
Dark skirts, with lighter blouses have a tendency to minimize hips, if belts are not worn too tight. But the one-piece dress, without any but straight up and down lines or figures help out best.

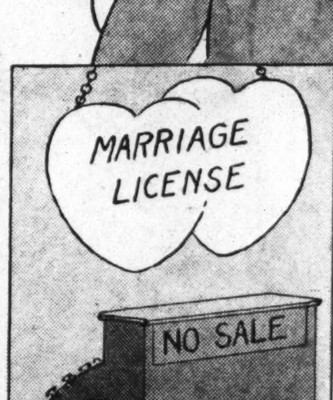
THE WORLD AS WOMEN SEE IT

WHEN MARRIAGE HOPES begin to FADE

Age of 30 Is Just About Deadline for Getting Your Man, Girls; Eligible Males Become Scarce.

BY VIRGINIA IRWIN





ANY girl who ever reached her thirtieth birthday without a wedding band on the third finger of her left hand will tell you that hope wears rather thin along about that time. She will also tell you that there is a shortage of good husbands and that the chances of finding a 10-dollar gold piece in a sidewalk grating are considerably better than finding a good, first-class, marriageable man who isn't looking for something much younger and more tender than a gal who admits to three decades.

Of course, there are some women who are single by choice and wouldn't exchange a career for the privilege of sharing bed and board with some member of the opposite sex at any price. But there are also a goodly few who awake in their late twenties and early thirties to the fact that those few years that they intended to work are beginning to show signs of lengthening into a permanent arrangement. And this is particularly true of the ladies of learning, who, in their youth, thought more of getting an education than getting a husband.

Records of colleges and universities show that from one-fourth to one-half of all women graduates never marry. Men, it seems, aren't particularly attrected to a girl with a string of degrees; they'd much rather lead a young woman to the altar who has mastered the art of fixing the male of the species with that incandescent gaze that says so eloquently, "Oh, you great, big, wonderful man!"

Men have always preferred their women less intelligent than themselves, and most men, when looking for a wife, prefer one young enough to get away with wearing a hat that makes her look stylish but ridiculous. He doesn't care if she can't bake a cake without writing the Department of Interior for a Government leaflet on cake baking, or uses black thread to sew a button on his white shirt, if she is young and still believes in the superiority of the male sex, he's satisfied.

LIFE insurance statistics show that the average girl of 20 "has a two-to-one chance of marrying within the next 10 years." But for the girl of 30, it's a different story—"her chance is only one in two." And it's not only the 10 additional years themselves that have reduced her chances, it's the attitude toward life that she has developed in the meantime.

We'll take, for instance, the girl just out of college. She feels that, even if she is not going to dedicate her life to a career, she must work a few years to collect dividends on the time, money and energy spent getting her college education. She goes into social service or library work or some similar occupation in which there is small chance of meeting eligible single men. Or perhaps she goes into business and emerges after a very few years with an executive attitude toward life and men and other women, and with a wholly new set of ideals. The beaux that would have—and did—interest her in her early twenties now seem like poor substitutes for the man she wants. Somehow the knowledge that she can be, and has been, self-supporting makes her choosy to the point where anything short of a combination of Franchot Tone, Albert Einstein, Col. Lindbergh and Henry Ford would never satisfy her.

Of course, paragons of this sort are as scarce as unicorn's horns at any age, but for a woman of 30 to expect to find one running around loose and looking for a 30-year-old wife is about as stupid as trying to ride over Niagara in a hand basket and stay right-side up. But instead of reasoning that any man even approaching her specifications must, by all that's right and reasonable, have been led up the church aisles years ago, the successful woman only becomes more choosy as the years go on and instead of facing the facts, complains that "there's a scarcity of good husbands," and a let-down in the quality of men that the world is producing today. The result: she stays single rather than marry a man she thinks her inferior.

STATISTICS show that the average man of 25 marries a girl three years younger than himself, but add 10 years to the man's age and he looks for a girl six or seven years younger. This means that the woman who awakes at 30 to discover that she doesn't want to be a career-woman all her life, has been left out in the cold by the law of diminishing returns. Nearly all the men she would consider eligible are already married, which perhaps gave rise to that trite remark, "All nice men are married." There are, of course, some men who remain unshackeled by the bonds of holy matrimony to the ripe old age of 35, but the woman who has had a certain amount of success rarely knows the technique of landing one when she meets him.

Instead of wearing bows, and frills and whatnots and letting herself go feminine, she hangs fast to the tailored severity of the frocks that made her look the part of the successful business woman. Even her mind is tailored to talk of business and instead of letting him do the explaining of politics and government and foreign policies, she pitches in and ends up by letting the cat out of the bag. After 10 years or so of earning a bigger salary than the man in question, she probably feels that he, or any other man for that matter, knows very little about running the country or anything else. Result: she is not booked for a return engagement and he goes to look for a younger woman who doesn't make him feel like an idiot.

Besides lack of emphasis on femininity and over-emphasis on mental equipment, the successful woman is apt to discourage romance in many other ways. In a restaurant, she capably orders her meal instead of following the technique of the sweet young thing who gazes up and down the bill of fare and in apparent helpless confusion murmurs, "Oh, you order for me, won't you dear? I can't ever make heads or tails out of these things. They're worse than time tables. But I'll bet you never even have trouble even with time tables."

That deft touch of suggesting that she thinks anybody who can read a time table is "just, too, too wonderful," gives him the exact opening every man falls for. He will then prove his superiority by explaining the intricacies of time tables and end up by feeling that at last he has found one woman who appreciates him.

THE sweet young thing also lets the man do the choosing of the evening's entertainment. If he wants to dance, she "just loves to dance." If he prefers a movie, she "just adores shows." But the successful woman who has lone-wolfed it more or less for years and has gone where and when she pleased, is apt to say, "Oh, we can go to a movie any night, but this is the last week of the opera, and we really shouldn't miss it." And the poor guy, who possibly doesn't give a hang for opera, has his ardor dampened by being ordered around—in a nice way, of course—by a woman who's so used to ordering people around that she doesn't even know she's doing it.

Result: Next evening he calls up the cute little number who thinks he's grand because he can read a time table.

And the successful woman does Mr. So-and-so's next lecture with one of her successful women friends and together they complain about the "scarcity of good husbands."

A Woman's New York

By

Alice Hughes

NEW YORK, Aug. 29.

THIS is the week when Broadway in the Forties and Fifties shakes itself, opens one eye to the blinding sun and dimly realizes that another theatrical season will be upon it before you can say Daniel Frohman.

All of a sudden I find the sleazy, sodden highway alive with girls carrying over-night bags, all seeming to be in a hurry to get somewhere. Girls tall and short, girls dark and fair, but all shapely, and swinging their hips as they scurry through the sunshine, with their blatantly pretty faces as heavily shellacked as though it were the shank of the evening.

They are the Ladies of the Ensemble, bustling off to rehearsals or to look for jobs in the few musical shows and cafe entertainments the fall promises to afford. I don't know where the little dimpled darlings spring from so quickly. One minute Broadway has a few male drifters, the next it is alive with bustling chorus girls. I catch snatches of conversation. "I hear the 'Follies' is full" and "Yah been to the Shuberts yet about th' Lahr show? Well, I'll be seen yah"—and away they go.

There'll be few jobs for chorus girls this fall, according to the dope. Broadway says that the successful musical films, such as the Astaire-Rogers opera, have whipped flesh-and-blood girl shows. Our loveliest chorines are in Hollywood, or at the big, flashy night clubs. Yet the residue rushes up and down Broadway, all painted up and rarin' to go—for ladies, as usual, must live!

THE OTHER night I heard Mario Braggiotti play the piano out at our beautiful Jones Beach before 6000 people, accompanied by a symphony orchestra—play a composition of his own—and as I watched that clear-cut profile bending over the keyboard I thought of the trio of young Braggiottis and what handsome youngsters they are—three long-limbed, extraordinarily good-looking kids, all making their way in the world.

The young Mario has for some years been a well-known pianist about town. His brother, Stiano, one of those Greek gods we used to read about but never see, is an actor and has been playing in the summer theater at Newport, and no doubt agitating the dowagers no end. Gloria, the sister, writes fashions for an afternoon newspaper. I'd like to see these three youthful Italians together sometime, preferably on a beach. It would be a sight for an artist.

A STRANGE international food-swap looms between ourselves and Britain, if I can believe certain news sources which whisper to me now and then.

As is well known to all, what the succulent hot-dog is to the American snack-snatcher, fish-and-chips are to our brothers in the old country. I learn that no fewer than 30,000 shops there specialize in fish-and-chips, or fried fish and potatoes. It has always been the prime favorite tidbit of folk in the old country. And now a firm has ferried over here from Albion with the avowed purpose of selling this snack to America.

At the very same moment two bustling New Yorkers—Promoter A. C. Blumenthal and restaurateur Sid Solomon—are reported to be planning a vast and elaborate chain of hamburger stands in the British Isles—and strike me cerise if the two taken together don't make something pretty comical. Suppose the day should come when Britishers would have to scull 3000 miles to stuff themselves with fish-and-chips, and we should have to do the same when gripped by that old craving for a hambuger-on-bun.

Speaking of American snacks, the famous old-time boniface, George Rector, says that the lowly hot dog is a much maligned article of food among our purists—that it is not only good eating but that it can't do us a speck of harm when taken in moderation. Oh, well, George, maybe it was the mustard that ruined me that day at Coney Island—I wouldn't know!

Sunday Night Frock to Have Shorter Skirt

THE Sunday night frock for the coming season will have a shorter skirt than last winter's models and will be distinguished chiefly from the daytime dress by the richness of fabric and the elaborate method of trimming.

At least this is the decision of several noted Paris designers whose word is important so far as many American women are concerned. Metallic fabrics in rather flashy colors such as vivid blue or bright copper have cellophane trimmings to add to their brilliance. Other street length frocks are completely covered with beads, the jet type being in greatest favor.

Besides these glistening themes to wear on nights and occasions when the hostess says not to dress formally there are luxurious lace and velvet frocks. Black and wine colored wool lace are being used by one designer while another indorses rich velvets which have yokes, vestees and cuffs of white lace, usually of the duchess type.

The princesse line lends its aristocratic emphasis to the dressy quality of these informal dinner and Sunday night supper frocks, so every girl will be wanting at least one of them in her new wardrobe.

Sprinkle your candied sweet potatoes with a little cinnamon for additional flavor. Tiny pinch of ground ginger, well mixed with the candied sauce is good.

NEW INTERESTS x x x By Elsie Robinson

A MAN said to me, angrily—"Young people should be disciplined!

"We were taught implicit obedience when I was a boy in the old country. Even at 19 or 20, we jumped when our parents spoke. We respected our parents. We never dreamed of taking an important step without asking their consent.

"The modern young people are no good. They are impudent—self-willed. They boss their own lives. They laugh at their parents' opinions. They are going to the dogs!"

"But times have changed since you and I were young," said I to the man. "I, too, was taught implicit obedience. I, too, jumped when my parents spoke, and did not move without their consent. I called it 'respect' then. But now I know that I obeyed my parents not because their judgment was better than mine, nor because I was in awe of them, but simply because they controlled all the authority and cash.

"How can you make a young person bow to his parents' dictates and reverence his parents' conclusions when, chances are, he actually knows more about the world in which he lives than his parents do?

"How can you expect slavish homage from a young person who supports himself by his own efforts and his own intelligence? Times have changed. Once parents had the right to stone their children to death or sell them into slavery. Once parents were czars in little, private empires. Now times have changed. Parents must change with them."

—o-o—

A WOMAN said to me sadly—"We must bring back the old-fashioned home. We must save the children from the street and restore the dear old family circle. We had such a lovely time gathering around the sitting room table, when I was a girl. We were content with such simple pleasures!

"No one thought of going out at night then. No one wanted to chase off to a movie or a public dance. And as for a young girl being courted in a parked automobile—the very idea would have seemed preposterous!

"But nowadays, home means nothing. Just a place to eat and sleep. My boy and girl aren't home from work an hour before they're off again. They never dream of bringing their young friends home, as I did. They treat us—their own father and mother—as if we hardly existed."

"But how," said I to the sad mother, "can you bring back the old-fashioned home, when everything that made it has passed away? What family in moderate circumstances today can possibly afford the ample quarters which even the poorest people enjoyed in 1886?

"How can you have a family circle around the sitting room table when the whole family of five lives in a three-room furnished apartment? How can your girl be courted at home when she cannot claim a square foot of privacy?

—o-o—

"YOU DID NOT want to go to the movies and public dances, because there were none. Your social interests centered in the home, because that was the only social center. But your children have a score of other social centers. They have interests which spread far beyond the family table—interests which you may not even understand.

"Do you not know that the old-fashioned home has gone for good?

"Can you not realize that The Family, as you knew it in the '80s, no longer exists . . . that it is impossible for your child to feel the security and simple contentment which you felt . . . or for parents to exercise the authority which yours exercised?

"Don't you see that the home has moved into the streets and show houses and, if you would hold your children, you must move with it—learn the new ways, speak the new language?"

But the sad mother turned from me with a pained glare. She would not admit that homes had changed, that families were different.

And how about YOU? DO YOU agree that the Good Old Days have gone . . . or do you think we can still make the home "stay put?"

Embroidery Fashion

A WOOLEN frock without at least one bright flower embroidered on it won't be very impressive when the fall fashion parade gets started. So the clever needlewoman should get busy with colorful floss and revive an old handicraft custom.

Various decorative ideas are being employed in emphasizing the vogue of embroidery. The large flowed placed where a breast pocket formerly appeared is sufficient decoration for a simple sports frock, although some interesting dresses have four embroidered pockets, two on the blouse and two on the skirt. Embroidered yokes, cuffs, belts and collars look sufficiently old-fashioned to be new and interesting.

The embroidery trend isn't content with daytime embellishment, but extends to evening fashions. Tiny bowknot and floral designs are effective whether they are used on taffeta or velvet. Moire also sets off the theme to advantage. One wine colored moire frock with embroidered hemline border and yoke design has the basque waistline and the puffy sleeves which are in keeping with the quaintness of the other features of the costume.

New glass cloths will be soft to use immediately if soaked in cold water to which two tablespoons of epsom salt have been added. This removes the dressing. Wring the cloths out after a while, and hang up to dry.

CLOSE-UP of ST. LOUIS FASHIONS

Fall to Bring Many Colorful Combinations

Women's Clothes Will Have Numerous Odd and Distinctive Shades.

THE coming autumn season will give women an opportunity to exercise their individuality in the mixing of costume colors. It is doubtful whether there ever has been a time when so many odd and distinctive shades were presented with such a wide range of alliances permissible in the mode. Here are a few to consider:

The combination of pink, gray and brown should be sufficiently subtle to appeal to those who like soft colors and may be achieved in some unusual ways. A long-coated suit of gray woolen, for example, has collar, cuffs and buttons of mink while the blouse and coat lining are of coral pink woolen. Another suit varies the theme by using gray squirrel on brown with blouse of pink crepe.

THE USE OF two shades of blue with wine or the popular plum tone is another that is being featured rather extensively. One of the blue shades is a bright navy and the other is of the slate hue. A frock which uses these shades is worn with wine colored coat, footwear and hat. Bands of the two shades of blue trim a dress of the wine tone or a slate blue woolen frock may be banded with bright blue and plum.

Another striking alliance consists of green, brown and wine. It suggests more casual attire and appears frequently in spectator sports types. A green felt hat, for example, has its high crushed crown banded with brown and red grosgrain so that it may be worn with a costume repeating any of the three tones. Red and green shades which are blended in Highland plaid woolens are advocated for sportswear and some designers think nothing of adding the popular gold tone.

Hints on Care Of Wash Frocks

● SEPTEMBER, which will soon be here, is a perfect holiday month and many vacationists ask for their holiday during that month. It isn't a difficult job to keep the summer wardrobe looking lovely and immaculate at all times, so there is really no reason, for those who do not care to do so, to hurry into dark clothes and give up their dainty wash things.

Many of the organdies now have a permanent finish. If it isn't, a light starching will restore the glossy surface. For those pretty collars, cuffs and jabots of embroidered fabrics, we use the iron on the other side of the fabric so that the embroidery stands out. It is a good idea to have an extra pad on the ironing board for this work.

Beware of very finely-pleated or frilled things. Bias folds are not easy, either, but the average hand can tackle them if the piece is ironed from the folded edge toward the neckline of the collar, doing just a small surface at a time. If you buy dresses that have removable collars, cuffs, vestees, jabots or ties, it is a good idea to put snaps on them. This makes them easy to detach and launder.

This isn't just a summer trick, however. It is a good plan to follow with dresses of all types, especially since touches of white and elaborate buckles, bows and ruffles are used so much. Ripping off and basting trimmings tends to shorten the life of the dress.

Even though bathing suits do spend much of their life in the water, they need efficient laundering. Many suits come complete with instructions for their care, especially since so many suits are fashioned of artificial fabrics. Other suits should be rinsed in lukewarm water and dried thoroughly after wearing.

Dress shields are a splendid aid to warm weather daintiness. These shields used to be heavy affairs, but now they are feather-weight, covered with fine silk or nainsook.

Picket Fence

If you live in the suburbs, and if there is a handy man about your house who can handle tools and wield a paint brush, you need not do without the benefits of a white picket fence. The unpainted pickets can be gotten reasonably from any lumber company with directions for setting up, and with very little effort can be put in place and painted. The neat, white picket fence covered with vines can be used so many ways in and around the garden, and you will be delighted with the effect.

Metallic Frocks

It isn't too early to invest in a metal dinner frock. One stunning dress is of raspberry colored material combined with silver. It has the tunic overskirt attached to the long sleeved blouse. Another of a mauve tone has a satin surface with silver threads intertwined so delicately with the glistening silk that the entire garment has a subtle shimmer. It also is of the tunic mode.

DRESSING UP for Dinner AT EIGHT

Prunella Wood Discusses Two Popular Frocks and Their Accessories

By PRUNELLA WOOD

TWO popular moods in dinner dressing are sketched here today—the type that has a rather high front neckline and a much revealing back decolletage, then the type that is almost shirtmaker in its tailored simplicity.

Either one will prove a knockout for the house to house dinner party, while the tunic line dress, sketched to the right, is a lovely model to wear with a pretty restaurant hat.

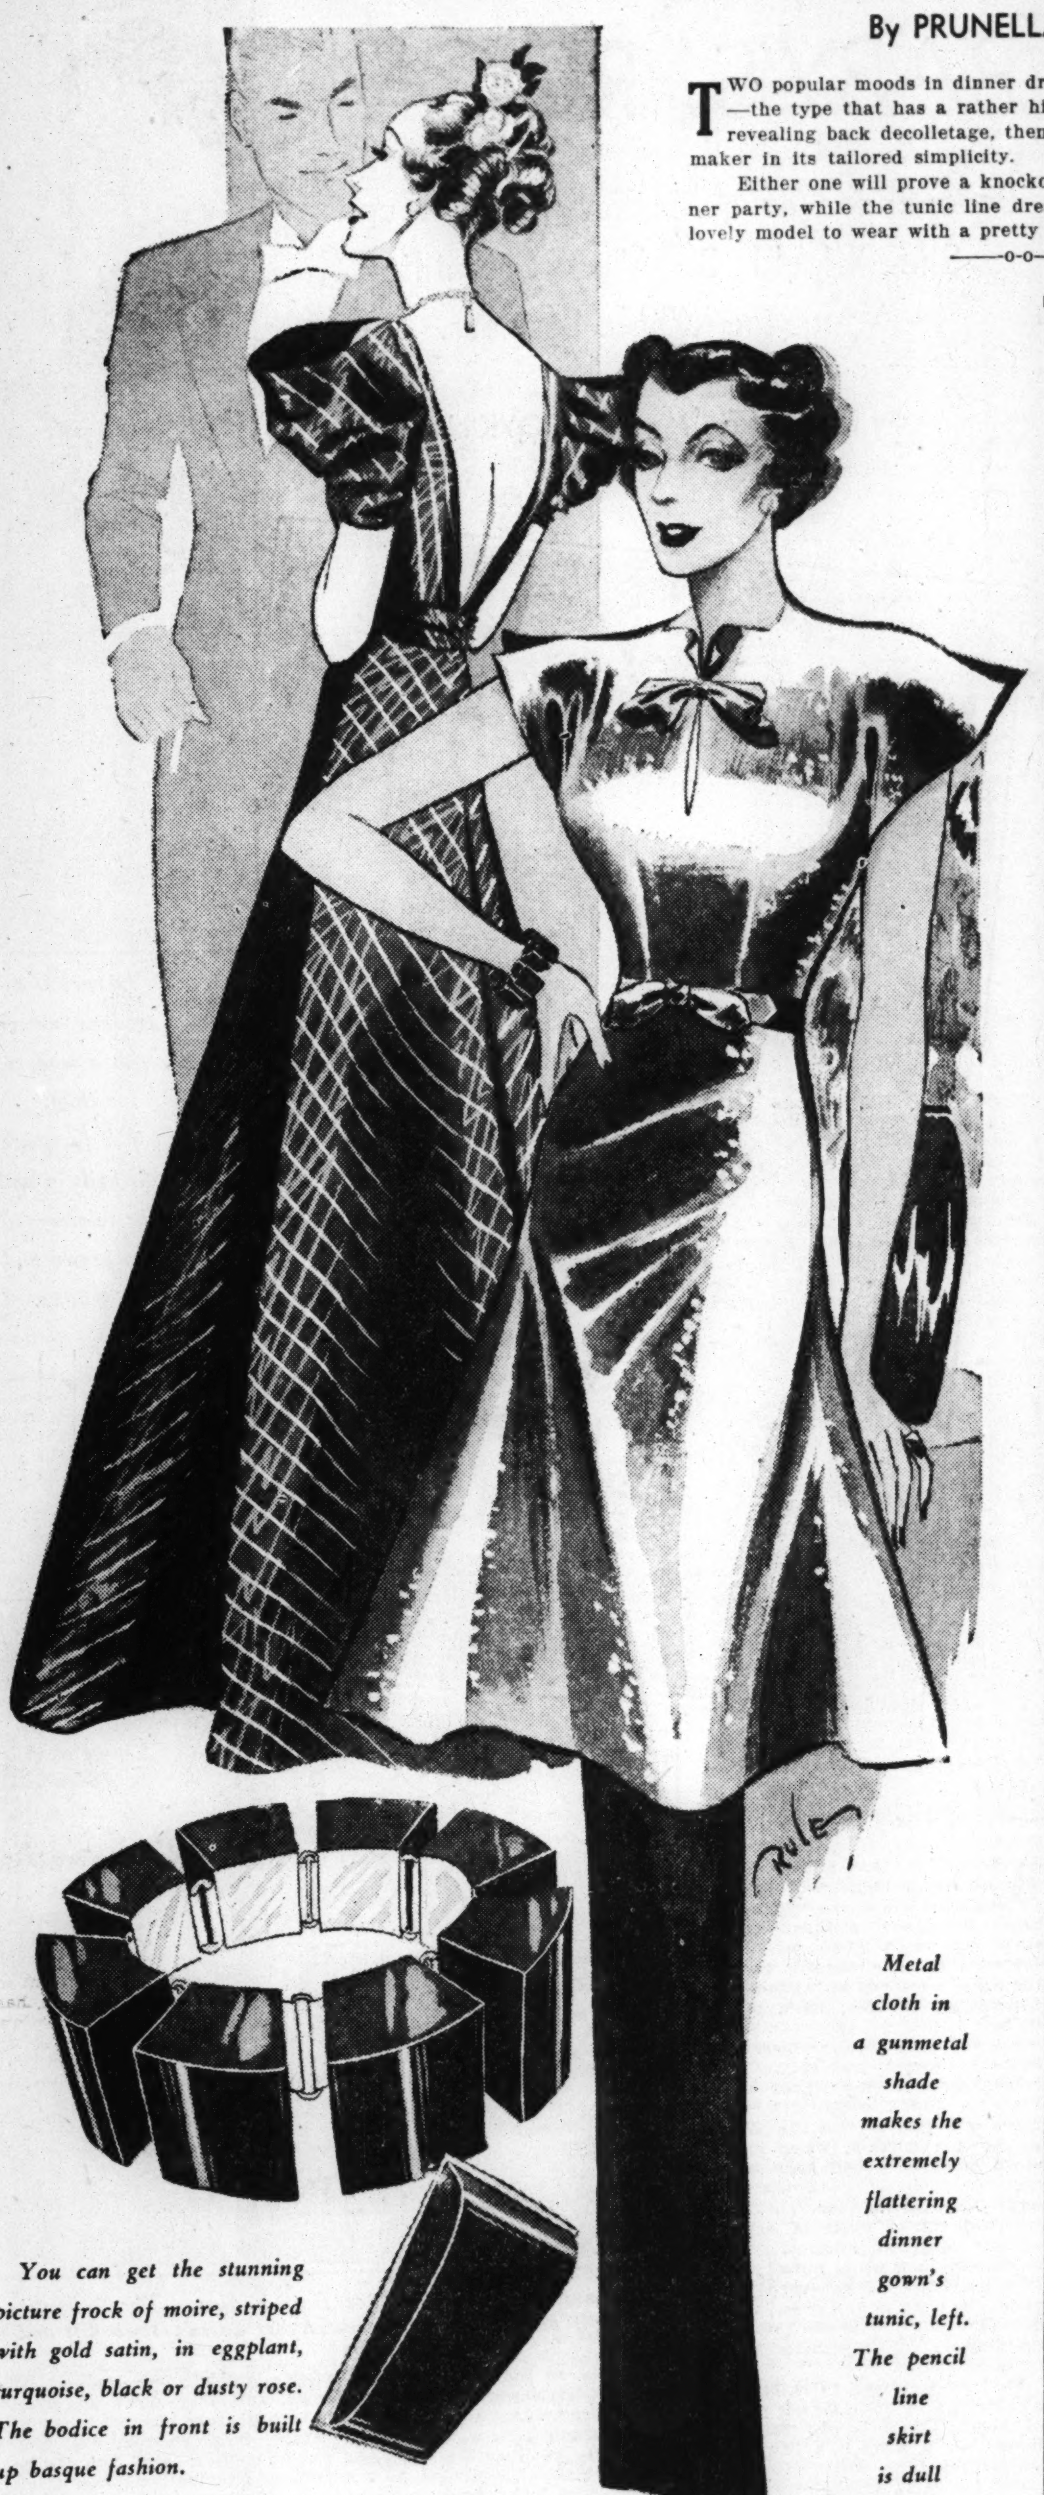
—o-o—

THERE are rumors that we are returning to a straight lined silhouette, but the message is but a tiny cloud on the horizon so far.

Loom as it may, this cloud, the fact remains that for the nonce the tunic is the answer to figures that may have a bulge here and there, and even when it comes in a lustered fabric such as lame, it still will provide a balanced figure to its wearer.

—o-o—

THE bracelet and clip sketched are something new in catalin; massive looking, but very light weight keystones of black composition are linked together flexibly for the bracelet, and the narrower ends of the keystones make for a flared fit about the wrist. The big clip may be used at belt or throat. The set would accent a tailored or a dress up ensemble equally well.



You can get the stunning picture frock of moire, striped with gold satin, in eggplant, turquoise, black or dusty rose. The bodice in front is built up basque fashion.

famous. The drapery is achieved by shirring, the gathers held by a blue velveteen ribbon tied in a bow at the neckline. There is a tiny turnover collar which is scarcely discernible. Sleeves are shirred at the shoulders and hang straight and tight where they end below the elbows. The skirt extends above the waistline at the front with a decided point at the center front. A wide belt has the velveteen ribbon on one side and the dress fabric on the other side.

To complete this costume a black felt hat trimmed with matching blue velveteen ribbon was selected. This has a brim which dips decidedly over the right eye and a crown which soars to a new high.

A black leather bag, pumps which are cut rather high over the instep and gloves which fit very snugly are suggested as accessories. Glace kid gloves have returned to fashion and are worn as tight on the hands as possible.

ANOTHER striking black frock seen in a St. Louis shop would make an equally flattering first-autumn costume. It also is of sheer crepe, very similar in texture to the one illustrated. The skirt is similar, being gored and very wide of hemline. It has a shirred pocket placed just below the waistline at the side front and a cluster of brilliant red and white flowers are tucked into it. The high round neckline is shirred in a drawstring effect and finished with a tiny turnover collar of white velvet. Sleeves are shirred on top of the arm, are full length and tight at the wrists.

A third black frock which would please those who are looking for style at low cost is trimmed with bands of cire braid that give it a very striking effect. There is a wide band at the circular hemline, another band around the bottom of the wide cape-like sleeves and a third band forming a yoke that fits quite high at the neckline. A gold belt provides the color accent.

Each of these three dresses, as noted, has a definite bright spot of color—the first one bands of velveteen ribbon, the second one the flowers at the waistline and the third one the metal belt. This is typical of almost every good-looking frock on display in St. Louis. Some have more color, such as a plaid tunic over a black skirt or a contrasting peplum blouse.

IF you prefer a first-fall frock that is completely colorful, the velveteen models are perhaps the most attractive. Some of these are designed in coat styling and others are of the two-piece mode, resembling suits so that they are quite appropriate for most daytime occasions. Their shades are very beautiful this season, the wine, copper and deep green tones being emphasized most.

Sheer woolen frocks that resemble suits because of their peplum blouses are being featured in some striking colors. Some are trimmed with fur or fur fabrics, others with fringe or braid. A striking color combination that is being much used allies rust with dull green, the contrasting shade being applied in the form of moss fringe trimming or velveteen scarf and belt.

There is a definite tie-up between accessories and costumes insofar as colors are concerned. The complete ensemble is emphasized for its unity and harmony, so in choosing a frock of a definite color it is wise to consider at the same time the important question of color on footwear, millinery, bag and gloves.

The inspired Molyneux has crashed forth with a belt that is marked in inches precisely like a tape measure, which may be a subtle hint to the customer to keep the waistline on the waspy side. Imagine letting the contraption out a notch after a particulalry good luncheon, and actually seeing the circumference go up an inch before our very eyes! Our only hope is that Molyneux, a smart dressmaker, has made these figured inches on the belt about an inch and a half!

PEACHES BROWNING has won the first round of legal skirmishing to get more than a pittance of the $8,000,000 estate of the late Daddy Browning, her lawful wedded, though estranged, spouse at the time of his death. Ten years ago around here Peaches was a bloated, overgrown blond minx in her mid-teens—and the last time I saw her she was a slender, poised and very handsome young woman, standing at the bar of the French Casino, happily married to a Denver theatrical man. One girl in a mess who wouldn't take a beating!

A TERRIBLE report of a huge herd of sharks in Long Island waters has lately been agitating the local citizens, but I haven't worried a mite. I know full well that not one of our haughty beauties goes near enough to the water to even see the sea, let alone get nipped by a shark. . . .

Jimmy Kelly, who runs the most popular night club in Greenwich Village, opened up a new line of thought to me the other evening. "A lot of my fan dancers are on a vacation," he told me. "Why, for heaven's sake?" I asked. "Say," said Kelly in a hurt tone, "those girls get mighty tired waving those feathers night in, night out!" And I suppose they do, at that.

Novelties

There are all sorts of novelties on the market that will dress up summer clothes and keep them looking fresh while in circulation until early autumn fashions are worn. Capes or ostrich give new charm to evening frocks, while for the younger generation there are enchanting capes of marabou. A white marabou cape can do wonders. Much more worldly but just as charming are jackets of colored sequins that are guaranteed to make a gala gown out of the simplest evening frock. Net capes are also good.

FACING the FACTS

By Helen Jameson

WITH all her beauty riches—lovely coiffure, charming attire, makeup aids—the modern woman seems to deliberately woo a senseless and unnecessary beauty defect. Yes, Rosemary, we are harking back to that dear old subject, posture. Especially the kind of slouchiness that creates an ugly roll of flesh below the waistline. Time was when only middle-aged women were guilty of developing embonpoint. Having settled down to a less active life, they were forgiven. At the present moment the old girls carry themselves better than the young ones, who all too often affect the debutante slouch, a horrid pose if ever there was one.

Let us experiment. Up out of your chair now. Let your shoulders drop forward, chest go inward, tummy out. There will be a cute little bay window south of the girdle and the waist will thicken.

Gradually, slowly, drink in great gulps of air, inflate the chest. Let the arms fall easily and naturally. Stretch the spinal column to its greatest possible height. Flatness will appear below the floating ribs, hips will retire toward the rear, the abdomen that has been a hill becomes flat prairie, the waistline is actually several inches less in measurement. This isn't just a fancy but an idea that works.

IF THE prominent tummy is adipose tissue, then diet must be restricted to non-fattening foods, and daily exercises must not be neglected. To carry the body with energy is to discourage fat cells. She who sits in a lump will collect lumps. Plenty of them! And the youthful silhouette will take on the outline of a meal bag.

There are all sorts of exercises recommended to improve posture, but the truth is that one must get into the habit of sitting pretty, walking correctly, standing splendidly. Posture is not only physical, it is also mental. Think of yourself as a lovely person, moving in a radiance of grace; into such a person you will develop.

Between the vertebrae are little cushions or pads. If the body stoops or slumps those pads harden, there is no agility of movement. It is only a question of time then until a woman drags out the old armchair, practically settles in it for the rest of her life. She has no interest in athletic pursuits, goes about her daily chores with lagging steps. She is lining up with the duds and that is her finish as a charmer.

Hats

Anyone who doesn't like those high hats which have taken the country by storm may be interested to know that there are some very low ones included in the St. Louis store collections. One jaunty pillbox, quite young and sophisticated, is of black velvet. It is made to fit quite flat on top of the head. A band of the velvet goes under the hair—or under the chin, in case the wearer is feeling coy!

Cottage Cheese

A good cottage cheese recipe calls for one quart of sour milk to be heated to lukewarm and poured into a cheesecloth bag. Pour one quart of water over this and after this has drained, repeat twice. Tie bag and let drip until the "whey is all," as the Pennsylvania Dutch says. Serve with either sweet or sour cream and seasoning to taste.

Home dressmakers should use a button hook for taking out tacking threads. It is much easier than the point of the scissors and avoids the risk of the material being cut.

The House You Live In

LET ME SUGGEST

by

Josephine Walter

WE sincerely hope you've had a nice summer. But we also hope you've come back from your vacation with more than just a good sunburn, four strokes off your golf score, and a lot of books that you had been intending to read for a long time, off your conscience. In other words, we'll be just a teeny bit disappointed in you if you haven't brought home a few ideas for your house from your summer's sojourn.

Not that we expected you to sit around and plan your fall building or decorating. Heaven forbid that you should do that before reading all the latest news is on what's up-to-the-minute in wallpapers, fabrics, rugs and all the other items that are subject to fashion changes in the decorating field. No matter where you have been, if you've kept your eyes open you have undoubtedly gotten a few ideas or bought a few objects that may be utilized at home.

But if, by chance, you so far forgot yourself as to be enticed into buying some Indian beadwork or some pillows adroitly painted with "Greetings from Lake Chichibunko" you might as well steel yourself and either blithely toss them out into the ashcan or save them for Aunt Tilly's Christmas package. And just on the chance that you neglected to do your duty by your home I have practically ruined my own vacation, trying to collect these little tidbits for you.

Of course, the seashore is the ideal spot for gathering ideas, for nautical notions may be used throughout the year in certain rooms in the house. Not startling or new but always practical and livable is a boy's room with its decorating fashioned after that of a ship's cabin. Particularly usable would be a built-in bunk with drawers below. It might even be effective in persuading little Oscar to put some of his own things away.

—o-o—

● ALSO ON THE starboard tack, or as you landlubbers would probably say, the right track, are the various items of fishing equipment which might readily be converted to other uses. Fishermen's nets have long been coveted by decorators as interesting and unusual window and bed draperies. In addition, these nets make very charming luncheon cloths, edged either with the round cork floats actually used by the fishermen or with deep cotton fringe. And, of course, after you've finished with your fishing rod, you may use it for a curtain pole—that is, if it's made of the ultra-smart bamboo.

—o-o—

SEA SHELLS, too, are back in style. Not the large, delicately tinted type that mother used to have on the parlor table and try to keep father from using for his cigar ashes, but the small ones that may be used on a valance or to trim the edge of a curtain. A charming little table I saw once, quite Victorian in feeling, had a design of small, colored sea shells set under glass in the center of the top. And getting down into the rowboat class, an ingenious window treatment might have the curtain pole finished off with boat-hook ends and oar locks used for tiebacks. Or, are we carrying the whole subject a little bit too far?

—o-o—

Getting away from the seashore theme and treading on dangerous ground, we arrived at the subject of golf trophies. If your husband has been skillful or lucky enough to win one, is there any chance of prying it loose from him? That is, if it is of the cup type that might be converted to other uses. I know husbands who have recovered from the shock of seeing their prized silver trophies used for cigarette or cigar containers, and even gravy boats, but one poor male I know is still trying to get over having his cup fashioned into a lamp base, even though it really made a very lovely lamp.

● I KNOW ONE clever soul who spends her odd moments during her vacation time in tracking down and buying the painted tin trays which were so much in vogue during the Victorian era. When she gets home, she has little tables of the stretcher type made with these trays used as the top and they make unusually attractive Christmas gifts.

—o-o—

AND ANOTHER friend became so enamored of the fine craftsmanship of the local carpenter in the little northern resort where she stayed that she had him make all the furniture for her baby's nursery. Knowing about the type of thing she desired, she drew very rough and amateurish sketches for him and he was able to carry out her ideas exactly. The thing that particularly pleased her about the pieces was their natural, waxed finish, so popular at the present time.

—o-o—

IN MY OWN cottage, I have a chair which was very simply and inexpensively constructed, which might be usable for a game room in town. Made out of a regular barrel, the back is left the full height, while the sides are cut down and fixed with flat, rounded boards for arms. The inside of the back and the seat are slightly padded and upholstered with a bright-colored glazed chintz.

How to Wage War Against Pesky Moths

First Move in Battle Is to Have Absolute Cleanliness in the Home.

By Eleanor Ross

LOTS of new gadgets have been put on the market to make house-cleaning an easier task. Dust and moths are well on the way to being routed. The pesky moths won't like a new porous substance that resembles plaster and is sprayed with a moth repellant. This is designed for any closet that can be closed properly.

Of course, the first thing in the battle against moths is to have absolute cleanliness. Before storing clothes see that they are clean, sweep dark corners where eggs may be laid and hatched, and see that furniture is cleaned regularly. Don't think that slip covers protect upholstery. The war waged against moths must be relentless. Blankets should be washed or dry cleaned before being put up, or placed in the hot sun for about half an hour and brushed or beaten thoroughly.

BLANKETS AND garments should be stored directly after cleaning. If there is doubt as to the moth-repelling properties of the storage closet, the articles should be wrapped in several lays of unbroken wrapping paper and gummed paper should be pasted over the edges. If closets are large there are steel chests that may be placed in them. There are several new moth-repelling formulae on the market and these together with a steel cupboard should prove ample protection against the pests. Moth-proof paper bags are not enough.

Rugs and carpets that are not taken up during the summer need constant care and cleaning. Moth larvae feed on woolen fabrics, feathers and cushions and won't disdain hair fillings. Linen and cotton are safe from them. Remove grease stains from furniture, for moths concentrate on soiled places. Use the vacuum as much as possible, with particular attention to the backs of chairs, the bindings, tufts and buttons and under the cushions.

WITH VENETIAN blinds gaining in popularity, draperies have suffered a slump. The new shades are much cooler, much nicer and certainly more conducive to summer comfort than glass curtains or drapes. In many homes, all curtains and shades have been banished with the advent of the Venetian blind into the ordinary decorating scheme.

The slats need constant dusting and we are pleased to report that there is a new gadget on the market to take care of this chore. It is a long-handled stick with wooden "fingers", covered with sheeps wool, and its best competitor is made of a heavy but flexible wire covered with felt and wound in spiral form to slip between several slats of the blind at the same time. Both aids will do a good job of keeping the Venetian blinds free from dust and grime. Another good aid is a mop designed for easy dust disposal. It contains a roll of soft absorbent paper which is discarded as it becomes soiled.

Something else that we enjoyed selecting is a zipper clothesline with wires that spring together as the zipper slides along, thus clamping the clothes securely without the aid of clothes pins, surely a long-awaited innovation. We are promised several new aids to better and easier housekeeping that are due for their debut this autumn.

Correct Watering

Water is more precious than ever during a dry summer such as this. Every drop should count, particularly in the garden where ineffectual sprinkling can waste gallons. Heavy clay soil will take no more than about one inch of water once a week, while loose rich soils will absorb as much as seven inches of water. Usual garden soil should be rich enough to absorb four inches of water easily, so that roots will be carried deep in the ground and away from the burning surface. Find out to what depth water seeps in your garden, and don't give it more than necessary.

White Blossoms

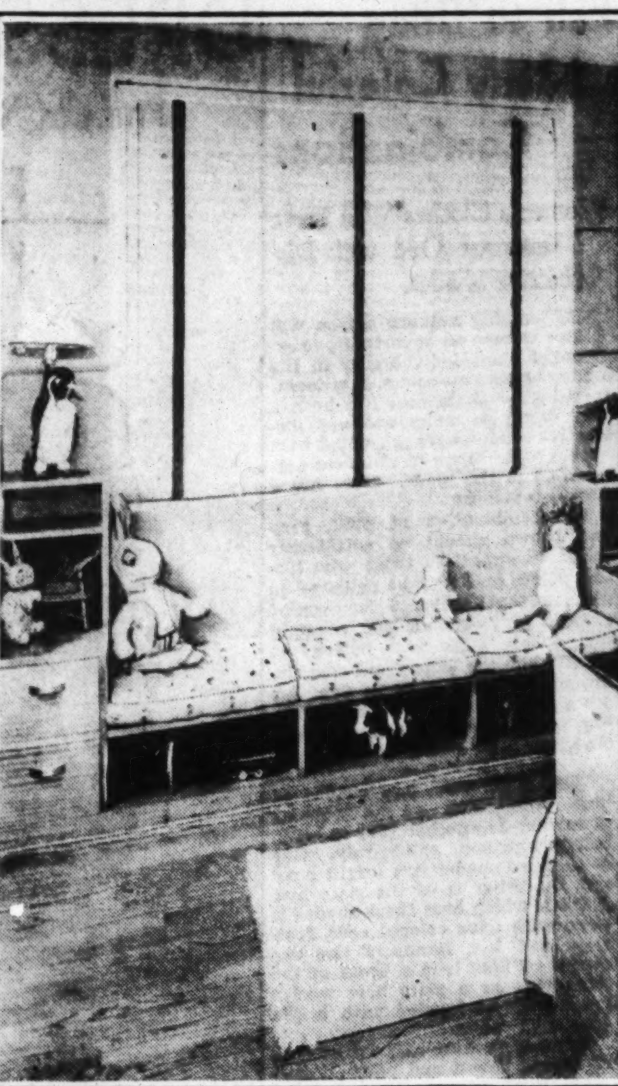
Have you noticed the effect of white blossoms in the garden? They are cool and refreshing on the most sultry days, and as they are the strongest carrying note in a garden composition, a few spots will be doubly effective. The whites include various phlox—Jeanne l'Arc, Apollo and Mrs. Jenkins are a few. The Elder daisy carries myriads of blossoms on stalks 30 inches tall. Shasta daisy and sweet alyssum are other whites to delight the heat-weary eye.

Have you a delicate lamp shade you wish to protect against coal smoke or dust? Tranparent covers of oiled silk in various sizes are available. They protect without detracting largely from the appearance of the shade.

FIXING UP BABY'S ROOM

Experiences of a Mother Who Thought She Would Be Very Scientific About the Whole Business.

By ELIZABETH MacRAE BOYKIN



Above is a modern nursery for a modern child. The furniture is built in and the colorings are in brown and yellows.

This nursery is designed for two children. The wallpaper is sprigged brightly and the floor covering is one of the new textures that doesn't show dirt and marks.

BEFORE we had a baby of our own we thought we'd be very scientific about the whole business. No fancy clothes because they just made extra work. No folderols in the nursery because they just cluttered up. Practically no gurgles or coos, as a matter of fact.

But, or dear me, we discovered how very sweet our young man looked with a blue ribbon under his chin and a crisp little white dress with lace around the bottom. As for his nursery, we've broken down completely and gone in for the whole works, even the bows and the ruffles for curtains—starched ruffles made of old-time cotton nightgown embroidery and so darling in a white nursery with stiff red bows. We're even worse about the gurgles and coos . . . one squeak sends the whole family to hang over him in wonder at his remarkableness.

So now we have to embark on a campaign to vindicate our change of heart. Here is our main defense . . . a baby is a baby such an awfully little while. He won't stand for being fussed over by his mamma very long—he'll have his own ideas then and we'll never again be able to get away with blue ribbons under his chin and starched ruffles in his nursery. We parents have to gather our rosebuds while we may.

Because, of course, nursery decorations are mainly for the pleasure of parents . . . a baby really doesn't care whether the walls are sky blue, pink or magenta. As for the cute little ducks, he doesn't pay them any mind. Oh, well, maybe he'll notice them a bit as he gets bigger if you're careful to select designs with an eye for the children's taste instead of your own. That eliminates too modernistic motifs—children are realistic little souls, and they don't approve of having flagrant liberties taken with nature. So no one-eyed dogs please, and no cubistic cats. You can have fanciful imaginative things though, such as gingham dogs and calico cats—there's a subtle difference there.

ONE compromise between what will interest the children as they become aware of things and at the same time amuse the parents would be designs of toys. These can be made very decorative indeed. If you're intent on a pink and blue nursery,—and nothing is sweeter for a pink and blue baby,—then make outline cut outs of your boby's own toys, trace them on the walls or furniture and paint them baby blue and pink. You can trace them in a straight row to make a low frieze around the wall about three feet above the floor, or you can run them like a wall paper border just above the baseboard and around under the moulding. Or you can use them in quite another fashion—put them on the wall here and there in a rather hit or miss way. If you don't care to paint up your walls, you can transfer the designs to the furniture. When you use them for furniture, they're more effective in the hit or miss style—about three or four on each drawer of the chest and one or two on the panels of the crib. It's nice to sprinkle the pink ones among the blue. Walls and furniture should be painted in white preferably, or in ivory. However, if you want the walls in a color, have the toys in white or in a pleasing contrast. Curtains in white with rows and rows of pink and blue bands of bias tape would be fresh and dainty looking.

A bright variation of this idea would be to have the furniture and walls all in white and the toys in bright red. Or have the toys in blue. Then have the white curtains finished with bands of blue and red bias tape.

Another nursery suggestion for parents who can't afford to spend much money and haven't a lot of artistic talent yet want a distinctive room,—is to write nursery rhymes around the walls in huge childish scrawls running up hill and down. Use a large size water color or brush dipped in oil paint to write with. These can be done in black. Have walls in a pastel color—or else have walls in white with woodwork in a very bright color.

OF COURSE, there are many perfectly darling wall papers for children's rooms but be sure to get the washable papers. To say nothing of the very young chintzes that bloom in baby patterns. There are many daintily decorated sets of nursery furniture that are nice indeed if the budget will allow—if not buy a crib, repaint it to suit yourself if the color isn't just what you had in mind. Then paint a chest of drawers and a set of book shelves to hang above them or hoist up on top of them. Add any other small odd pieces you need and decorate them to your own taste.

Now then about rugs—there's the gayest nursery linoleum now on the market that the baby will enjoy as he grows older. It has games and nursery rhymes in the pattern to say nothing of the ABC's and numerals. It is an ideal floor covering for a child's room because it can be kept so clean, and it's inexpensive, too. For a warmer surface, there is a new nursery rug with toys and animals to interest a child as he grows bigger. This is made of fine wool, and the purest of dyes, although over 50 per cent of the design is worked in undyed natural wool, which is incidentally quite effective.

We hope you'll have as much fun fixing up yuor baby's nursery as we have had with ours. Remember, a nursery isn't a luxury; it's a necessity if you are to bring your baby up in the detached, tranquil atmosphere prescribed by the books. Because he can then sleep and grow away from the excitement of the family, and that's important when a baby is tiny.

Creating Home On Small Income

● "My husband and I are vain as peacocks—of each other. I think I was pretty smart to get such a handsome man, and he thinks I'm very swell," too, said she modestly. The girl who said this has a right to feel that way . . . they're both such nice people, just starting out.

They've got their noses to the grindstone now, paying for their new home, on a small income, but it's delightful, and they think it's worth making an effort to pay off the mortgages as soon as possible. When that's done, they'll spend some money on furnishings, but in the meantime, she's created some awfully sweet effects on next to nothing.

The living-room walls are ivory, as usual, and the rug is a hand-me-down, from his married sister's house . . . rather brownish in coloring and nothing to write home about, although they figure it will do till the house is paid for. She's made slip covers in blue for the overstuffed sofa . . . the chairs and the draperies are in a very colorful cretonne on an ivory ground. She went on the theory that if she had bright enough patterns in the room, it would divert the eye from the rather commonplace furniture. Which is good logic and in this room it certainly works . . . her cretonne has reds and blues and yellows in a lovely bouquet design.

Their bedroom, which is also furnished out of pieces they will later discard, looks very pretty in the meantime, because she has painted the furniture gray . . . the walls are lavender and the spread and draperies are of flowered chintz on a light green ground.

The dining room has some old furniture, with the finish taken off and a coat of wax applied and rubbed well into the wood. Here there is a summer type rug in blue, the same cretonne for draperies as was used in the living room . . . then chair pads of yellow with ruffles all around. They have a yellow linen tablecloth and dishes of blue and white.

Oiled Paper Roller

Do you like to have oiled paper easily accessible to cabinet and work table? It is easy to make a roll on which to place it by using the roller of an old window shade. Cut the roller long enough to reach through the roll of paper. Place a roll of paper on it and roll on the regular hooks used for hanging shades at the window. With a slight pull on the paper you can unroll as large or as small a piece as desired. Suggested places for these rolls are on the inside of one of the cabinet doors over your work space, at the end of your work table or near the sink.

To remove grease stains from wicker furniture, rub with a cloth dipped in methylated spirit.

SINCE architecture concerns itself largely with straight lines and sharp angles, especially in the most modern developments, it behooves us to soften the planes of a house with planting. This is particularly true of the hard line formed by the facade and the ground in homes of simple architecture. It is not necessary to collar the house completely in a solid mass of green, but some planting at the corners and along flat walls will accentuate the good points of the architecture and soften the sharp features.

If this foundation planting is carefully handled the face of the house will be enhanced and mellowed. It is an individual problem that requires some ingenuity in considering and allowing for all the needs and variables of the situation. The exposure and type of plant material that will be hardiest. The treatment most appropriate for the style of the house. What areas and corners need planting.

First, there is the exposure to consider. A house facing due north will be limited to plants that stand shade. This difficulty can be eased a bit by bringing the planting groups out from the house to allow either the morning or afternoon sun to strike them. Here are plants to use either in dense or partial shade:

EVERGREENS: Hemlock, Japanese yew (upright or spreading), boxwood, various holly, mahonia, and evergreen barberry. White pine and pflitzers will live with just a few hours of sun a day, but their color will not be as silvery as usual.

SHRUBS: Choke berry, Japanese barberry, coral dogwood, flowering dogwood, forsythia, hydrangea, privets, high honeysuckle, sumachs, snowberry and the many viburnums.

Heavily shaded walls with never a wink from the great orb can be softened with ivies—Boston, English, Engelman's, Euonymous, or Virginia Creeper.

—o-o—

ALL OTHER exposures allow you to choose from a great mass of plant material, where your good taste must be your guide. In selecting plants check these points; hardiness, eventual height and width, color and texture. If evergreen: Does it hold its green or blue color through the most severe winters, is it fast or slow growing; are there berries? If deciduous, what colored flowers or fruit has it, and what time of the year do they bloom? You will want to know this for planning a successive bloom and for shearing or pruning it. Will the bare branches in winter make a pleasing pattern against the house? Is the foliage coarse or fine? Enlist the aid of a reliable nurseryman if you have no landscape designer to help in making these decisions.

The treatment of the planting must be governed by the style of the house. A symmetrical house with a center entrance flanked evenly by windows calls for a symmetrical planting. The stiffness of this equalized treatment can be almost obliterated by using soft looking plants of arching habit and feathery foliage, and by varying the depth and heights of the plant groups.

Use a rubber scraper such as you can buy in any 5-and-10 cent store, for scraping your dishes. You won't scar or chip your dishes, and they will be easier to wash.

CLEVER PEOPLE these St. Louisans

Many St. Louisans have used a good deal of cleverness and ingenuity in remodeling their basements into useful, comfortable and attractive rooms. In most of these basements you'll find gas heating equipment, because gas heat is clean heat. It is absolutely free from smoke, soot, dust and grease, consequently the basement of a gas heated home is as clean as any other part of the house.

However, the addition of a clean and comfortable basement recreation room is only one of many reasons for installing gas heat. The even, healthful, temperature of gas heat appeals to many comfort lovers and also to people who give considerable thought to their health. Other folks prefer gas because they want a completely automatic heating system that doesn't get out of order, that requires no attention (even orders its own fuel) and eliminates all furnace tending troubles.

If any of these advantages appeal to you, why not give gas heat a trial and see for yourself how pleasant and satisfactory it is.

What can you lose? You make no down payment. You invest no money in equipment. You don't have to pay a penny for installation. You simply rent the burner during the heating months. (Average rental $2.50 per month.)

Get rid of your fuel worries and heating problems! Install a gas burner in your furnace now and be ready when the cold days come.

A Discussion Of American Grape Wines

There Are Two Main Types —"American" and California."

By Harold J. Grossman

WE Americans dislike pretenses and airs and prefer to be accepted as we are. Yet we are inclined to be very snobbish about our native wines, to give them titles borrowed from various European countries, and on the whole to be somewhat scornful of our own product. Either we do not know or we have forgotten that more than half of all the known varieties of grapes are to be found in the North American continent. And our American wines are good, sound, straightforward, pleasant wines that do not need to pretend to be anything but what they are.

The wines produced in this country are of two main types, those known as American wines and those always referred to as California wines. The line of division is as sharp as that which exists between European and American wines. The reason is that in California, where they can be successfully grown, European varieties of grapes are used almost exclusively. Consequently California wines have a strong resemblance to the European products. In fact, Californians resent having their wines called American and insist, instead, that the term California wine be used.

Of all the native grapewines found in America, only one has really shown any aversion to domestication and that is the Scuppernong (vitis rotundifolia). The Scuppernong refuses to produce unless it is permitted to run wild—to climb over hedge and tree—sometimes a hundred feet or more. This vine grows in a great many parts of the Southern Atlantic Seaboard from Virginia to Florida, as well as in the mountainous districts of Virginia, Kentucky and Tennessee. It has a characteristic untamable wildness that is distinctive to itself. Its grapes are large and green and produce a rich, sweet, white wine. Because of its sweetness, this is an ideal wine to serve with a rich dessert.

THE CATAWBA grapevine which is a native of this country has been successfully cultivated since the early 1820s. It was an earlier Nicholas Longworth who saw the advantages in this vine and planted it in vineyards near Cincinnati, from which the Longworth fortune had its origin. From the red Catawba grapes come excellent still and sparkling wines. Both are somewhat sweet and have a delicacy of bouquet, while still retaining a delightful wild raciness. Use the still wine with fowl or white meats and serve the sparkling as you would a champagne.

The finest variety of white wine grapes is probably the Delaware, named after the town of Delaware, O., where it first attracted attention. The grapes from this vine also are red, very small in size, and suitable for winemaking only. The vines are grown extensively in the Finger Lake region, where most of our American "champagne" is made, and quite generally throughout the Eastern States where most of the white wines are made.

The Delaware produces a light flowery, delicate, clean wine. Whether still or sparkling, the wine is dry and will be appreciated by all wine-lovers. Because it is often blended with grapes of other varities, it is generally sold under a brand name, unlike the Scuppernong and Catawba, which are marketed under their own names. Wines made from the Delaware grapes are perfect as wines for luncheon, and they go well with fish and seafood.

Other varieties of grapes that produce white wines are the Iona, Elvira, Ontario, Diamond, Portland, etc., which are cultivated in most of the Eastern wine districts.

MOST OF OUR Eastern red wine is made from the Ives—probably the best red-wine producer among our native grapes. In addition there are the Norton, Clinton, Clevener, Bacchus, Lenoir, etc. Our American red wines, like their white brothers, are good, sound, clean wines of abundant character, possessing a free wildness that they have never lost, in spite of all domestication. They are dry and may be served with meats, roasts, fowl or game.

While our Eastern wines are more typically American than those produced on the Western coast, we can hardly overlook the fact that 85 per cent of all the grapes grown in this country, for whatever purpose, come from California. For every wine district of Europe there is a counterpart in California. In other words. California bottles and sells Sherry, Madeira, Port, Tokay, Champagne, Claret, Burgundy, Chianti, Sauternes, Chablis, Rhine, Moselle, etc.

We have been led to believe in many ways that it is imperative to know a great deal about the intricacies of serving wines. This may, perhaps, be important at dinners of state or great formality. But for every day use, it is unimportant. There is no great mystery about wine. One wine is all that is necessary, be it a red or a white table wine that you prefer.

The glass you use is of secondary importance, although you can appreciate the color better if the wine is served in clear white glass. As for the ritual of serving—there should be just as much as you usually observe when you serve tea or coffee.

LABOR DAY HOSTESSING

Make This Last Big Day of Summer Entertaining Pure Pleasure for Yourself as Well as Your Guests. Here Are Food Plans to Help You.

By MARGARET N. PIERCE

OFFICIALLY designated as a holiday for one and all, Labor day almost arranges itself for a homemaker, if she does advance planning. With Labor day a week from tomorrow, it is not too early to start making your plans. Menus are offered here in their simplest form. Usually, as at all summer holidays, only one main meal is served. The others are incidental.

Plan to serve the substantial meal early in the afternoon or later in the evening. The suggested menus in this article may be used at either time. To save time, temper and peace of mind, serve your dinner buffet style, perhaps on the porch or lawn, or picnic fashion. Make it a meal for everyone to enjoy at no cost of effort.

The idea of Labor day suggests all recommendations for modern kitchen equipment. Automatic refrigerators, with scientifically built and practically tested storage arrangements for food, offer quick and compact facilities for one of the easiest methods of food preparation. The new ice refrigerators, too, have their own virtues of this sort.

Up-to-the-minute ice cream freezers, automatic cookers and roasters, grills and casseroles are a positive boon to a homemaker who desires effortless meal service where the odds are against her. The modern automatic ranges do practically everything for you.

Perhaps you are planning to share the quietness and invigorating delight of a country Labor day away from heat and crowds and care. Then suit your menu to this tempo—prepare most of it well beforehand and enjoy a laborless Labor day with your guests.

If the day is fine, we suggest that you set the table out of doors and follow this menu.

Country Menu

Cranberry Juice Cocktail
Cold Broiled Parsley Chicken
*String Bean Salad
Potato Chips
Cottage Cheese and Pimiento Sandwiches
*Coffee Pecan Ice Cream—Cookies
Coffee or Milk

The cranberry cocktail is a ready-prepared product needing only to be chilled. If the day is unpleasant, and you serve a hot meal, have your chicken ready beforehand and cook it at the last moment. Otherwise, broil it early and serve it cold with potato chips and tasty string bean salad, which may also be reheated in its savory dressing for a delicious hot dish. Serve small sandwiches with this meal. Prepare them early and wrap them in a damp cloth or waxed paper. The coffee pecan ice cream you are certain to enjoy. Make it in the freezer—you're bound to have plenty of offers to turn it—and pack in well until you are ready to serve it.

Cold Broiled Parsley Chicken

Two frying chickens, cut up.

Two teaspoons salt

One-half teaspoon paprika

One-fourth cup butter, melted

One and one-half tablespoons parsley, minced

Two teaspoons lemon juice

Cook pieces of chicken in boiling water about 15 minutes. Drain. Rub with salt and dust with paprika. Place on broiler pan under mediuf flame and broil about 40 minutes, turning frequently and basting with combined melted butter, parsley and lemon juice. Serve cold. This recipe yields eight portions.

But if all your plans go suddenly haywire and you're unable to vacation away from the city, you'll probably find a few others among your friends who are in exactly the same boat. Here's a good chance to renew some of those lapsed friendships. Take time out, and do some of the things you've planned, but for which you haven't found time. Invite a few people in for a lazy, congenial dinner hour and serve this menu. It's surprisingly simple to prepare and refreshingly appetizing to serve.

City Menu

Jellied Madrilene Consomme
*Stuffed Meat Loaf
Pickled Beets
Apple, Corn and Cabbage Salad
Bread—Butter
*Peach Chiffon Pie with Brazil Nut Crust
Coffee

A ready-prepared jellied madrilene consomme may be adapted merely by opening the can, adding chopped hard-cooked egg and minced parsley and chilling in individual molds until ready to use. Serve it hot, if you will. An interesting and economical suggestion is the stuffed meat loaf, which may be baked in the morning, chilled and sliced for serving. This makes an exceedingly attractive dish with the pickled beet slices and colorful salad.

And for good measure, wherever your Labor day is spent, make up this fudge cake a day or two in advance.

Fudge Cake

Four square (four ounces) unsweetened chocolate

One and one-fourth cups milk

Three-fourths cup brown sugar

Two-thirds cup shortening

One cup granulated sugar

Three eggs

Two and one-fourth cups cake flour

One teaspoon baking soda

One-half teaspoon salt

One teaspoon vanilla

Melt chocolate in milk in top part of double boiler. Beat with rotary beater until well blended. Add brown sugar, stirring until smooth, Allow to cool. Cream shortening until soft. Gradually add granulated sugar, creaming until well blended. Add eggs, beating until mixture is light and fulffy. Sift together flour, baking soda and salt. Add to creamed mixture alternately with chocolate, mixing until well blended. Flavor with vanilla. Pour into greased loaf pan (10 inches square) or two (eight-inch) layer pans. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees Fahrenheit)—loaf cake about 55 minutes—layers, 25 to 30 minutes.

For the frosting, combine four squares (four ounce) unsweetened chocolate, cut in pieces, with one and one-third cups of milk. Cook slowly until smooth and well blended, stirring constantly. Stir in four cups granulated sugar, one-half teaspoon salt and two tablespoons light corn syrup. Cook to 236 degree Fahrenheit, or until a soft ball forms when tested in cold water. Remove from heat, add two tablespoons butter and one teaspoon vanilla. Cool to lukewarm (110 degrees Fahrenheit), then beat until mixture is thick enough to spread. Spread on cake and press walnut halves over entire top surface.

Mock Oysters

In cooking mock escalloped oysters, use sufficient boiling water to cover one eggplant, add a small pinch of soda and a whole medium-sized eggplant. Let cook for about 15 minutes, remove eggplant and wash in cold water thoroughly. Butter a casserole, chop up eggplant, putting in a layer of eggplant and a generous sprinkling of brown rice flakes, dot with butter, grated American cheese, salt and pepper and proceed until dish is filled, using half-pound cheese and three tablespoons butter. Place one tablespoon buttered bread crumbs on top of dish, pour a cup of whole milk over all and bake in moderate oven about 30 minutes.

Does the section over the oven of your table-top stove heat up more than you like, or need protection? There are decorative asbestos pads made large enough to cover a space approximately two feet square. They can be had with a top covering of washable material in colors to match your kitchen decorations.

Varied Recipes for Family Meals

FREQUENTLY, the average family gets tired of eating the same meals and hopes for a change. These receipes will satisfy jaded appetites.

STUFFED PEPPERS WITH SHRIMP.

Six cup-shaped medium green peppers.

Two cups cooked or canned shrimp.

One egg, beaten.

One-half cup canned tomato juice.

Three cups soft bread crumbs.

One tablespoon melted butter or margarine.

One-half teaspoon salt.

Speck pepper.

One teaspoon finely minced onion.

Cut off the tops at the stem end, and remove the seeds of the washed green peppers. Cover with hot water, and boil for 10 minutes. Drain. Remove the black vein from the back of each shrimp. Mix the egg and tomato juice and add to the bread crumbs with the butter, salt, pepper and onion. Add the shrimp, mix well, and place in the pepper cups. Place upright in a lightly greased casserole and bake in a hot oven of 400 degrees F. 30 minutes. Serves six. To serve two make one-third this recipe.

POTATOES AND LEEKS AU GRATIN.

Twelve leeks.

Four cups cooked potatoes.

Two cups medium white sauce.

Three-fourths cup grated cheese.

One-half cup buttered soft bread crumbs.

Cut the leeks crosswise into one-inch pieces, then wash in warm water. Cook, covered, in a small amount of boiling water until tender—about 15 minutes. Arrange alternate layers of potatoes, leeks, white sauce and cheese in a greased one and one-half quart casserole. Top with the buttered crumbs. Bake in a hot oven of 400 degrees F. for 30 minutes. Serves six. To serve two, make one-third this recipe.

HAMBURG AND TOMATO PIE.

One medium onion, peeled and thinly sliced.

Two tablespoons butter or margarine.

One pound chopped beef.

Two teaspoons salt.

One-fourth teaspoon pepper.

Four medium tomatoes.

One cup cooked or canned string beans.

One-half teaspoon granulated sugar.

Three cups seasoned mashed potatoes.

One egg, beaten.

Cook the onion in the butter until soft, then add the chopped beef, the salt and pepper, and cook slowly, stirring occasionally until the meat is lightly browned. Cover the tomatoes with boiling water, let stand a few minutes, then peel and cut in quarters. Add to the meat with the string beans and sugar, and mix well. Turn into a greased one and one-half quart casserole, and top with the mashed potatoes, to which the egg has been added. Bake in a hot oven of 450 degrees F. for 45 minutes. Serves six.

Sand Tart Recipe

FOR sand tarts in the real old German style, cream together two and one-half cups butter and two cups sugar. Slowly add four cups flour, working it in well. Add two well-beaten eggs and mix well. Chill over night. Roll out thin on a lightly-floured board. Brush cookies with white of one egg which has been slightly beaten, sprinkle with sugar and a little cinnamon and press half a pecan into center of cookie. Bake in moderate oven 10 minutes.

Nice to serve on puddings is a sauce made by combining two egg whites and two cups honey. Beat vigorously until mixture forms a light, fluffy sauce.

The fur which collects inside kettles can be removed by filling the kettle with water, adding two or three tablespoons of salammoniac, bring the water to a boil and boiling for five minues. The kettle should then be emptied and boiled out with clean water.

Peach Brandy

Pare: Clingstone peaches (albertas). Place them in quart jars. Cover them with sugar. Cover the jars loosely with lids. Continue to cover the peaches with sugar until the juice is drawn from them and the sugar is dissolved. When the peaches are covered with juice tighten the lids on the jars. Wrap the jars in heavy paper and place them in a cool dark place. The peaches are ready to be served in three months. Use them sliced over ice cream or pudding. Pour off the liquid and bottle it. This makes delicious brandy.

Tunic Coats

It takes at least a second look at some of the winter coats to determine whether they have tunic skirts or are merely fooling the public with excellent camouflage. The tunic theme has become so popular that designers of cloth coats aren't overlooking any bets.

One coat in a St. Louis store collection is of a soft gray woolen trimmed with matching gray fox. It has a tunnel collar edged with the fur and a flaring overskirt similarly trimmed. This circular skirt section is the tricky feature which suggests the tunic, the lower portion being straight of line.

A stiffly-beaten egg white will increase the quantity of your whipped cream. Whip egg and cream separately, and gently fold the egg-white into the cream.

Respberry Filling Cream

Jellied Bouillon

BROWN a shank of beef, a large knuckle of veal and a piece from the neck of lamb. Place in a large soup kettle and fill with cold water. Add a bunch of carrots, a stalk of celery, one large onion, a bunch of parsley and a large can of tomatoes. Let simmer four to five hours, adding salt, one dozen whole black peppers and a small piece of red pepper pod. Strain out meat and vegetables. Return to fire, add more seasoning, if necessary, one teaspoon of worcestershire sauce and enough kitchen bouquet to color. Simmer for one-half hour longer. Place over cold water to allow fat to rise. When cold remove all fat. Place in refrigerator to jell. Use as necessary as this will keep for several days.

Sweetbread Souffle

Rub three cups of cooked sweetbreads through a puree sieve. Scald one cup each of milk and cream with celery leaves, a slice of onion and a small bay leaf. Strain this over one-third cup of butter rubbed into two rounded teaspoons of flour and one-half cup of stale bread crumbs, one teaspoon of salt, one-third teaspoon of white pepper and a pinch of cayenne. When well blended and cooked until slightly thickened, add the sweetbreads, the beaten yolks of four eggs and lastly the beaten whites of three eggs. Pour into a buttered mold and set in a pan of hot water and bake in a slow oven for about an hour. Turn out on a heated platter and serve with a browned mushroom sauce.

Baked Tomatoes With Chicken Filling

Two cups of finely chopped chicken (canned chicken may be used.)

One-half pound of mushrooms.

Four tablespoons of melted butter.

Two tablespoons of chopped parsley.

Eight tablespoons of fine bread crumbs.

One small cup of chicken broth.

One and one-half teaspoons of flour.

Saute the finely sliced mushrooms and dredge with the flour, add the chicken stock and let cook for five minutes. Mix in the chopped chicken, bread crumbs and parsley and season to taste with salt, celery and onion salt. Select eight firm tomatoes, cut off a slice from the stem end and scoop out. Invert to drain. Salt and pepper and fill with mixture. Cover lightly with bread crumbs and dot with butter. Bake in a moderate oven from 15 to 20 minutes, basting with drippings in pan.

Horseshoe Salad

On individual plates arrange a flat bed of romaine lettuce. Cut a thick slice of avocado in horseshe shape. At intervals on the avocado place bits of ripe olives. In the center place sections of ripe pineapple and over all pour a highly seasoned French dressing made with lemon juice instead of vinegar.

Almond Cake Ring With Raspberry Cream

Three whole eggs

Three yolks

Three whites

One-fourth pound of almonds, grated with skins on

Four large soda crackers

One-half teaspoon of grated nutmeg

Pinch of salt

Grated rind of one lemon

One cup of sugar

Beat the three whole eggs and the three yolks with the sugar until light, then fold in the finely rolled crackers, nuts, salt, nutmeg and lemon rind. Beat the three egg whites stiff and fold into mixture. Pour into an unbuttered ring pan and bake in a slow oven from 35 to 40 minutes. You can tell when it is done when it shrinks from sides of pan. Invert to cool. Loosen sides with a knife and turn onto platter. Dust with powdered sugar and fill center with raspberry cream.

Raspberry Cream

Whip two cups of cream stiff, add eight tablespoons of sugar and one cup of mashed raspberries and one teaspoon of vanilla. If not sweet enough add more sugar. Fold in the raspberries just before serving.

Wash white paint, when only slightly soiled, with a little milk.

OFF the LEASH

by H. F. Owen

THIS week let us teach our dog to close the door after him when he comes into the house or when he is told to do so. It is easy to teach a dog to close the door from the inside.

Have several pieces of food to use in teaching him to "close the door" and allow him to eat a piece each time he succeeds.

Take the dog outside, and after a little while go in with him. Do not open the door too far, and when you are inside hold a piece of food up on the inside of the door just out of reach of the dog when he stands on his back feet. Say, "Close the door" in a natural and meaning tone. He will think you want him to take the food. In rising on his hind feet to get the food his front feet are placed against the door, thus pushing the door shut. Now let him have the food and show him that he has done what you wished him to do.

Repeat this several times, using the same words and tones, and if each time you call him into the house you will tell him to "close the door" it will not be long until it becomes a habit. You may now omit the food, but a pleasant word of praise is always appreciated by a dog.

● FROM THE numerous breeds of dogs produced in Ireland, the Kerry Blue Terrier is probably one of the best working terriers. His ancestry has been unclouded for more than 100 years. His intelligence and likeable disposition make him a good protector and pal for children, as well as an allround dog for all kinds of game. He is also a capable retriever in the water as well as on land. Adding to all these qualities, his ability as a cattle and sheep herder has made him a useful dog on the farm.

Although imported and shown in this country for a number of years, the Kerry Blue was not recognized by the American Kennel Club until 1924. The Kerry Blue Terrier Specialty Club was formed in 1926.

There is not a great deal of difference in the standard of this country and those of other countries.

Very game and always watchful, he seems to know at all times right from wrong and he will fight to the end for his own convictions. He is a hardy dog and if properly cared for he retains his puppy ways until he is seven or eight years old.

His head is long and his ears should not be too large and should hang close to the cheeks. His gums and the roof of his mouth should be dark. His teeth should be small and even. The nostrils should be large and black and his eyes dark and small. The Kerry Blue Terrier should have legs that are straight and heavy boned and strong, round feet with black toe-nails. His tail should not be too long and should be carried upright. It should never curl over his back. His hair should have a wave and should not be wiry. The color may be different shades of blue, and with the exception of light or dark places on the tail, head, ears, and feet, should be of the same shade of blue all over the body.

The male Kerry Blue Terrier stands about 17 to 20 inches high. The female is slightly smaller.

● CONTRARY to the general idea that all terriers are straight legged and have no curves, the Dandie Dinmont Terrier is in appearance all curves. Although more dignified than most terriers, he is nevertheless always ready for a good romp. He minds his own business and is an excellent hunter for underground game, but if provoked will stick to the finish to protect himself.

The Dandie of today is the same as shown in pictures made in 1770, proving that he is by no means a new type of terrier. Very fond of children, he is a good house dog. He has not been used much for hunting in recent years.

In looks he is the opposite of other terriers. His head is large with a round domed skull. His eyes are large and round and his back is long and slightly roached toward the tail. His feet turn out on his short legs, and the back legs are longer than the front ones. He has a short heavy tail, set low, and curved a little.

His coat is a combination of hard, wiry, and soft hair. There should be more of the soft hair than the hard. He has a top knot of soft hair on his head. His hair needs very little trimming or plucking. A bath and a good brushing will complete his toilette, which is not the case with most terriers. Weighing between 18 and 24 pounds, he is a nice sized dog for house or apartment and his winning personality makes him an ideal companion.

Vroni von Rosenbaum, St. Louis dachshund, took honors at the Springfield Dog Show last Sunday going best for her breed under Judge Alva Rosenberg of Brooklyn, N. Y. Twenty-two dachshunds were exhibited in the competition of two champions in the Special Class. The winning dachshund is owned by Mrs. Wallace Pflueger, who also took reserve winners with her Pfiueger's Porgy, a son of Vroni. The two dogs were sent from Springfield to the Milwaukee State Fair Show in Milwaukee.

LIFE HAS BEEN EXCITING - GRACE MOORE'S OWN STORY

Opera Star Discusses Experiences in Pictures; Tells of Romance That Led to Marriage With Valentin Parera.

By GRACE MOORE

● This is the last installment of a story by Grace Moore, opera, screen and radio star, in which she traces her career from a choir singer in the First Baptist Church at Jellico, Tenn., to her present high place in the musical and entertainment world.

PART THREE.

IN telling of the part Mary Garden played in my career, as I did in the previous chapter, allow me to observe that this militant world will never know what a great general it lost when Miss Garden became an opera star. I have never known another person with one-tenth of her energy, her independence or her aggressiveness. I love her with all my heart, both as a person and as an artist. I think that by her daring defiance of stilted tradition and by the sheer force of her personality, she has done more to popularize grand opera in America than has any other singer.

When I had been in Paris nearly 18 months, Otto Kahn came to Europe, and granted me, among others, an interview.

"Have you worked—or merely had fun?" he demanded.

"I couldn't work without having fun—and I couldn't have fun without working," I replied.

He was sufficiently impressed by my earnestness and persistence to arrange my third and final audition. This time, I was to sing for Gatti-Casazza, the managing director of the Metropolitan, who at the moment was visiting in Milan. From his verdict there could be no appeal. It was do or die—or, rather, it was sing or marry. There was a young man who thought he was in love with me, and I had promised that if again I failed to win, I would accept defeat, dismiss every thought of my career and be content with wifehood.

The great impresario heard me and then sat in silence, thinking for several age-long moments, while I, trembling like any culprit on trial for life, tried to anticipate the verdict:

Finally he spoke:

"Your voice, I believe, is ready now. But you—are you ready? Ready mentally, ready in temperament, ready in repertoire?"

"I've got to go now—now or not at all," I told him

—o-o—

I RECEIVED my first contract with the Metropolitan Grand Opera company the same day Gatti-Casazza said my voice was ready. I was to receive $50 a week—exactly one fiftieth of the salary paid me during my last musical comedy season. But, had it been possible, I would not have sold that precious piece of paper for all the gold on earth. There are some things which cannot be measured in terms of money.

Having spent several weeks in Milan, I had a host of acquaintances and friends in the student quarter, and that night we celebrated my good fortune with a party seldom seen by even that gay old city. We took over one of the largest restaurants on the galleria, shifted the tables until they formed a huge square, and barred the door to other patrons. We ate spaghetti by the yard, pledged one another in native wine, and sang until every music-loving Italian in the neighborhood stood just outside the restaurant shouting our choruses.

Even the waiters joined in our mad carnival. Someone hoisted me to the wine-stained table top and demanded "Ciribiribin." We sang it again and again—and, when in the Italian cafe scene in the picture, "One Night of Love," I sang it, how I was carried back in memory to that joyous night in Milan!

At midnight, reinforced by a large party of young Fascisti, we paraded through the streets to La Scala, the great opera house. En route, we rang doorbells and serenaded the sleepy householders, who leaned from their windows to protest. And at the opera house, everyone drank one last toast to the success of "La Signorina Americana."

I made my Metropolitan debut in "La Boheme" on the seventh of February, 1928. Just ten years had passed since the half-hearted praise of a Washington critic had induced me to run away from school "to be an opera star."

Only those who have actually undergone such an ordeal can appreciate the terrific nerve tension generated by an important debut. Musicians, as a class, are the most temperamental people on earth. An ordinary performance creates an emotional whirlpool; an event of such vast importance as a grand opera "first night" occasions a veritable maelstrom.

And, in my own case, the tension was even greater than usual, for, belatedly, I realized my lack of background. Most divas come to the Metropolitan only after a successful European tour; I never had stepped foot on an opera stage nor sung to the accompaniment of a large orchestra!

My memories of that debut, notwithstanding the fact that excepting my marriage, it was the most important event in my life, are fragmentary—a jumble of vivid emotional impressions rather than a well ordered record of facts.

I remember that I wanted desperately to see my parents, and was not permitted to do so for fear that they would excite me. I remember that many of the "great ones" of the music world and the theater came backstage before curtain call to wish me luck. My beloved Mary Garden, accompanied by Geraldine Farrar and Alma Gluck, was there to encourage me. And Otto Kahn managed to slack the tension by paying me, with mock pomp and solemnity, the $100 wager, which he had lost by a margin of ten days.

Then, suddenly, I was on the stage, facing a sea of misty faces, an uproar of applause. Maestro Bellezza raised his baton . . . I said a fervent little prayer . . . and I was singing. My dreams had come true. I was singing at the Metropolitan! Would I, after all these years, be a success?

ALTHOUGH several of the critics very justly condemned my nervousness during the first act, my debut at the Metropolitan in "La Boheme" was a triumph. I never shall forget the intoxication of the applause which swept the great opera house after each aria and each act. Nor will I forget the chivalry of Edward Johnson, Scotti and Rothier, who sang the leading male roles. They were established stars, but they refused curtain calls.

"This is your moment," they said, "and it is one of the greatest moments you will ever know as a singer. The applause is for you—go out and accept it!"

Miss Moore and her husband, Valentin Parena, Spanish actor.

Miss Moore as she appeared in "One Night of Love."

After the final curtain, a host of acquaintances and friends swarmed backstage to congratulate me. My mother and father were there, as wildly excited as I. And with them were many well-wishers from Tennessee. The notables of the Coffee House suppers were also there in force.

I cried as I thanked them for their good wishes and their flowers.

But of all the bouquets that filled my dressing room, I think I appreciated one the most. It was a little bunch of wild-flowers from the Tennessee mountains.

I was with the Metropolitan for three successive seasons, singing "La Boheme," "Faust," "Romeo and Juliet," "Manon," "Carmen," "Pagliacci" and "Tales of Hoffman." I also toured Europe. In Liege, I sang "Romeo and Juliet," in Bordeaux, "Manon," and in Paris, in the famous Opera Comique, I sang "Louise," "Manon" and "La Boheme." That first performance of "Louise"—my favorite opera—was a sensation. Gustave Charpentier, the composer, near the end of the first act, became so excited and so enthusiastic that he leaped from his box, seized the maestro's baton and personally conducted the last two acts of the opera—to the wild applause of the audience. All Paris loves him.

We became devoted friends. Charpentier, now in his seventies, is one of the most keenly alive human beings I ever have known. Dreamer, idealist, genius, he has the sweetness and sensitivity of a fine Stradivarius violin.

He took great delight in escorting me on long rambles through Paris—the Paris that casual tourists never see, or seeing, never appreciate. He pointed out to me the actual scenes of his immortal opera, and told me the dramatic incidents connected with them.

One evening, in particular, stands out in my memory. With Jascha Heifetz, we had gone to a little hilltop cafe near the Sacre Coeur. The tables were on an open air terrace and, sitting there, we looked down on the roofs of the city. Near us, an orchestra was playing softly and I, as usual, could not resist the temptation to sing. Suddenly, Jascha Heifetz, who had sat in meditative silence, regarding the beautiful crazy-quilt below us, took the orchestra leader's violin and began to play.

I have heard him in recitals before bejeweled audiences, but I have never before nor since heard such soul-stirring music as the melodies which poured from his violin that night. A crowd of people gathered on the steps of the cafe and sat there, spell-bound, while he played on and on for fully two hours. Such moments are priceless and unforgettable.

IT was shortly after I had returned from Europe that Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer offered me my first motion picture contract, and I embarked on one of the most hectic chapters of an already hectic career.

I made two pictures during that sojourn in Hollywood. Both were praised by the critics, and both were unsuccessful at the box-office. And, since "box office" is the Jove of the Hollywood pantheon, I was promptly adjudged a failure, and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer declined to renew my contract.

I left Hollywood vowing that some day I would return to vindicate myself and the public's musical taste.

It took me three years to fulfill my vows, and during that time, I conscientiously toiled to remedy faults of my own which had contributed to that first disaster. That I did, is shown in the instant success of "One Night of Love," which caused a swift right-about-face in Hollywood's attitude toward musical pictures. Studio scouts bombarded grand opera with a barrage of contracts, and the great musical cycle was under way.

The fact that I played a major part in pioneering a development of such importance makes me proud and happy. My faith in the musical intelligence of the American public has been vindicated. I am thrilled by the constantly increasing enthusiasm with which the average audience receives the better music now being offered by the radio and the screen.

Personally, of course, I have profited immensely by screen success. I never knew the meaning of fame until after the release of "One Night of Love" and "Love Me Forever." Before, I had been well-known in select musical circles; now, I am known to the far ends of the earth, for motion pictures have world-wide distribution. I hope I can be proud of that fame without being accused of egotism.

Last summer, I was invited to sing "La Boheme" in London's Covent Garden—a "command performance," at the request of the King and Queen. To me, that invitation was the most glorious of all accolades for my years of struggle. But it seemed strange that I should owe it, largely to the success of a motion picture.

That London debut, by the way, proved one of the most trying ordeals of my life.

To my surprise, I discovered that in London my sole claim to fame was my screen work. Apparently, the fact that I had come to motion pictures from the Metropolitan and the Opera Comique was entirely forgotten if, indeed, it had even been known in England. The multitudes were willing to accord me a triumph without waiting to hear me sing, but fashionable Mayfair was skeptical. And the leading critics, while unanimously giving Geoffrey Toye, the director of Covent Garden, credit for arranging a neat financial coup, frankly cast doubt on my alleged ability.

If their attitude was a stimulating challenge, it was also a further strain on my over-taut nerves, especially when combined with lack of time for rehearsal. Fortunately, I knew I was "in voice." I was also somewhat reassured by the fact that Bellezza, who had conducted at the Metropolitan debut, was to be the maestro.

Everything was hustle and bustle, and in the excitement, no one thought to warn me that Covent Garden tradition permits applause only after the curtain of each act.

—o-o—

THE night of my debut performance found every seat in the house sold. Offers of 10 guineas were being made for single seats in the gallery, and a crowd of several thousand persons, turned away at the box-office, stood in the street during the entire opera.

When I made my entrance, I instinctively sensed the mingled friendliness and skepticism of the audience and rose to meet the challenge. With the first notes of my initial aria, "My Name Is Mimi," I knew that my voice had never been better. Finishing it, I mentally braced myself for the burst of applause which surely would follow.

And Covent Garden was silent! There was not a single handclap!

I was stunned for a moment, and then I felt myself sinking. My heart turned to lead and my eyes filled with tears. I had failed—miserably—in the supreme moment of my career!

Luckily that aria is near the end of the first act, and, by a tremendous effort, I managed to carry on until the curtain fell. And then I rushed, blindly, to my dressing room, locked the door and cried as though my heart were broken. I thought it was.

Suddenly I became aware of someone pounding on the door and I heard the voice of my husband.

"Open the door," he demanded. "Don't you realize that prima donnas are supposed to take curtain calls?"

With that I lost my temper. I threw open the door and stormed:

"I'll never step foot on that stage again! I'd rather sing to the crowd out there in the street. I've never sung to stuffed shirts and I won't now . . ."

My husband and Geoffrey Toye regarded me with amazement, but wasted no time in argument. I was half-dragged, protesting every foot of the way, to the wings and pushed on the stage.

The opera house was a bedlam. Everyone in the audience was standing, throwing programs in the air and shouting my name. I have never heard such applause.

The sudden reaction was overwhelming. My knees trembled so that I managed to support myself only by leaning on a prop chair. Ever since, I've wondered that I did not completely disgrace myself by falling in a faint.

I took 13 curtain calls after that first act! It was the greatest triumph I had ever known, and, in all probability, the greatest I shall ever know.

TRIUMPHS—and defeats! Looking back on the years which have passed since that first day in New York when I stood outside the Metropolitan and vowed that some day I would star there, it seems to me that my life has been like a scenic railway, a continual series of ups and downs.

And, to my own amazement, the greatest happiness of my entire life has resulted, not from the realization of my consuming ambition for a "career," but from marriage—from something I had mistrusted, avoided, refused.

I met Valentin Parera, now my husband, aboard the Ile de France, en route to Europe, in 1931. It was strange that we had not met before, since, during the months I had worked for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer on my first picture, he had been employed in the same studio, starring in Spanish versions of Metro's films. He was then, and still is, one of the greatest stars of the screen in all Spanish-speaking countries.

It was "love at first sight"—and I, who had prided myself on my hard-won caution, was at least wise enough to recognize it as such. There was no question of calm analysis; there was simply the unthinking certainly that he, of all men on earth, was the one whose wife I would be.

Our meeting itself was a prank of fate. I had planned to sail a day earlier and only through the merest accident had been forced to take passage on the Ile de France. When I mentioned that circumstance to Mr. Parera, I was astonished to learn that he, too, had originally intended to sail on the earlier boat and had been similarly delayed.

After a short engagement, we were married in Cannes, where in emulation of my idol, Mary Garden, I had acquired a villa. The Mayor performed the ceremony and it is quite typical of my life story that our wedding guests represented every stratum of financial affluence and social position.

Marriage versus career—women everywhere enlist militantly in that ancient argument. But to me, there is no longer excuse for controversy. No one, I'm sure ever sought professional triumphs with more determination than I. During the years of my climb to recognition and success, I set myself apart from other, "average" women and assured myself that my goal was not to be, and must not be, confused with

THE STAMP REVIEW ××× By John Chamberlin

ANDORRA has two sets of stamps, one in Spanish and one in French currency. This tiny republic lies between the Spanish Catalonian Province of Lerida and the French Department of Ariege. Its area is 191 square miles and its total population does not exceed 6000. The principal industry is reported to be smuggling between France and Spain. It is inclosed by mountains on all sides and its inaccessibility fits in with its position of belonging neither to Spain nor to France.

Andorra is said to have been declared a free state by Charlemagne, and was for many years ruled with the King of Spain and the King of France as its governmental leaders. It pays a small annual tribute to each of these governments, or, rather, their successors. Andorra is governed by a council of 24 members who are elected to four-year terms by the heads of the famiilies in each of its six parishes. Since 1882 the rights of France have been held by a delegate appointed by the Government.

The Government has no monetary system, using both French and Spanish currency indiscriminately. Until 1928 it managed to get along quite nicely without individual stamps, using those of both France or Spain. The Spanish representative suggested to the Council that special stamps might bring revenue to the country, and in 1928 12 of the current stamps of Spain were overprinted "Correos-Andorra" in two lines for use in this republic.

These stamps were soon superseded by an issue of permanent nature showing local scenes. The French residents, not to be outdone, then suggested a series similar to the Spanish, and the 22 of the current French stamps were overprinted with the name "Andorre" in 1931. These were superseded the following year with another set showing the scenic wonders of the republic as well as monuments.

● ALVIN W. HALL director of the Bureau of Printing and Engraving has found the dies of the "lost" peace stamps of 1914 that were almost ready for public issue at the outbreak of the World War. The design of the two-cent red stamp-that-was-to-be shows the allegorical figures of Columbia and Brittania clasping hands across the world, one figure holding the United States flag, the other the British flag.

The blue five-cent stamp shows a dove flying before a winged figure representing the "Spirit of Peace." Each stamp was inscribed "Peace 1814-1914." These stamps were to have commemorated the hundredth anniversary of peace between the English-speaking peoples of the world.

The two-cent design was approved July 9, 1914, and the five-cent on July 27, one day before Austria declared war on Serbia. By fall, the Belgian city of Ghent, where the British-American Peace Centenary Committee intended holding its celebration, was occupied by German forces—and the United States Postmaster-General had rescinded his approval of the stamp designs.

THERE ARE many people who try to make money out of stamps. They wish to invest a few dollars in a current stamp that will be sure to go up. If one wishes to speculate in stamps, he must know the current market trend.

The standard United States catalogue gives the current selling price of the stamps, but the monthly supplement gives only the major changes, the complete revision coming out in the next issue, one year later.

In the catalogue, stamps are listed in much the abbreviated manner that stocks are, and the price, as in stocks, varies with the law of supply and demand.

If one is thinking of speculating in stamps, and doesn't know anything about them, he might just as well speculate in the stock market with the same knowledge, and probably with the same results.

THE "Federation Internationale de Philatelie" is holding its annual Congress in Luxemburg.

Luxemburg has issued a special set of official stamps for this occasion, showing the Town Hall in which the congress is taking place, the stamps bearing the inscription. "IIme Congress F. I. P. 1936." The stamps will all be of the same design and will be in the six current values—10, 35 and 70 centimes, and 1, 1.25 and 1.75 francs. The issue will be limited to about 50,000 sets.

Formal Trend Predicted for Men's Clothes

Cutaway Coats and Gray Striped Trousers May Gain Followers.

By Esquire

THIS year will usher in more formal clothes for town wear. Black worsteds bearing light stripes and very dark browns and grays with colored overstripes are being largely featured in two button peak lapel models and double-breasted models. It is very probable that white starched turn-over collars will be favored by well-dressed men. These look well when worn with solid color shirts having white starched fold cuffs. Solid color pleated bosom shirts with the same type of cuffs are also smart with white starched collars and dark ties of heavy silks such as Spitalfields or Macclesfield.

Bowler hats and Homburgs will be worn in a greater proportion and the snap brim hats will be reserved more for the country, though it is probable that many of them will still be worn in town. Black calf town shoes on the new square-toed custom last should prove popular.

More formal clothing, such as the cutaway coat and gray striped trousers or the oxford gray or black single or doublebreasted jacket should have a greater following. The cutaway is no longer an occasional garment to be worn once or twice a year at weddings and funerals. Few cocktail parties in metropolitan centers do not yield a quota of cutaways and the increase in the use of this smart coat is expected.

SINCE THE advent of town formality many men who are dressing more carefully for business will find it impossible to achieve especial distinction on Sunday without wearing either a cutaway or short black jacket with striped trousers.

The latter ensemble is also practical for business and has been worn by smart business men in London many years.

While a silk hat is the correct hat for the cutaway many men will probably prefer to wear a black Homburg or a bowler hat and a dark blue overcoat. This ensemble will not attract attention in public conveyances and is really quite suitable.

Many men feel that a cutaway calls for a wing collar, an Ascot, and while these are very smart and perfectly correct they are by no means the only proper accessories in that department. A smart widespread turn-over collar and a four-in-hand tie are equally correct. In fact this combination is preferred by the majority of Londoners.

Inevitably it contained tongue and chicken sandwiches, a chicken wing, salt and pepper mixed together in wax paper, as for a picnic, and vast quantities of frosted cake.

Box-lunch voyagers usually made a concession toward the railway commissariat by ordering a bottle of ginger ale. That, at least, was sure to be sanitary. Probably the shoebox luncher has been shamed out of existence by the magnificence of modern restaurant cars, where caviar is on the menu and stewards wear foreign office jackets and ledger-ruled trousers.

There isn't much excuse for him, really, what with trains for all the world like a Ritz hotel, but he was a valiant figure in the American tradition and we would like to see him once again with a bit of cocoanut frosting on the tip of his nose and the countryside rolling by outside, with the exhaust of the locomotive clearly audible, so that you knew you were really on a train.

Formal Trend Predicted for Men's Clothes

Cutaway Coats and Gray Striped Trousers May Gain Followers.

By Esquire

THIS year will usher in more formal clothes for town wear. Black worsteds bearing light stripes and very dark browns and grays with colored overstripes are being largely featured in two button peak lapel models and double-breasted models. It is very probable that white starched turn-over collars will be favored by well-dressed men. These look well when worn with solid color shirts having white starched fold cuffs. Solid color pleated bosom shirts with the same type of cuffs are also smart with white starched collars and dark ties of heavy silks such as Spitalfields or Macclesfield.

Bowler hats and Homburgs will be worn in a greater proportion and the snap brim hats will be reserved more for the country, though it is probable that many of them will still be worn in town. Black calf town shoes on the new square-toed custom last should prove popular.

More formal clothing, such as the cutaway coat and gray striped trousers or the oxford gray or black single or doublebreasted jacket should have a greater following. The cutaway is no longer an occasional garment to be worn once or twice a year at weddings and funerals. Few cocktail parties in metropolitan centers do not yield a quota of cutaways and the increase in the use of this smart coat is expected.

SINCE THE advent of town formality many men who are dressing more carefully for business will find it impossible to achieve especial distinction on Sunday without wearing either a cutaway or short black jacket with striped trousers.

The latter ensemble is also practical for business and has been worn by smart business men in London many years.

While a silk hat is the correct hat for the cutaway many men will probably prefer to wear a black Homburg or a bowler hat and a dark blue overcoat. This ensemble will not attract attention in public conveyances and is really quite suitable.

Many men feel that a cutaway calls for a wing collar, an Ascot, and while these are very smart and perfectly correct they are by no means the only proper accessories in that department. A smart widespread turn-over collar and a four-in-hand tie are equally correct. In fact this combination is preferred by the majority of Londoners.

from the locomotive up forward. The shoebox lunch was carefully wrapped, obviously by loving hands at home, and came to view about the time the porter was announcing the second call for dinner. Inevitably it contained tongue and chicken sandwiches, a chicken wing, salt and pepper mixed together in wax paper, as for a picnic, and vast quantities of frosted cake.

Box-lunch voyagers usually made a concession toward the railway commissariat by ordering a bottle of ginger ale. That, at least, was sure to be sanitary. Probably the shoebox luncher has been shamed out of existence by the magnificence of modern restaurant cars, where caviar is on the menu and stewards wear foreign office jackets and ledger-ruled trousers.

There isn't much excuse for him, really, what with trains for all the world like a Ritz hotel, but he was a valiant figure in the American tradition and we would like to see him once again with a bit of cocoanut frosting on the tip of his nose and the countryside rolling by outside, with the exhaust of the locomotive clearly audible, so that you knew you were really on a train.

Four TRICK SWING

By Ely Culbertson

WHEN one considers the catastrophic results of historic "bad guesses" in war, business and marital ventures it is not to be wondered at, I suppose, that a bad guess at the bridge table may cost as many as four tricks on one hand. That is what happened on the hand below. I have used deliberately the term "bad guess" rather than "unlucky guess" because it seems to me that there was a distinct edge against the declarer's choice of plays.

West realizing that his diamond king was in an extremely vulnerable position, decided that the best way to save it was to carry the attack to the enemy. Accordingly, he opened the seven of diamonds, and this bit of brilliance turned out to be the declarer's undoing.

IN JUSTICE to South it must be admitted that he hesitated an appreciable length of time before determining on a line of play, finally putting up dummy's ace and then leading the queen through East, with the intention of ruffing if the king went up, or discarding a club if it did not. The latter ensuing, declarer discarded a club and, to his horror, saw West gobble up the trick with the king.

West now not only led a club but, on the virtual assurance from declarer's play that East held the ace, took the precaution to lay down the club king, following this with a second club lead. East won and now, with three tricks already home, clinched the contract's defeat by playing his last diamond.

At this point South was helpless to avoid losing another trick. If he ruffed with the king he would fell West's queen with the ace, but at the same time establish East's jack, whereas if he ruffed low West would overruff with the queen.

Quite obviously, if the declarer had taken a finesse on the first lead he would have made all 13 tricks. Now as to the reason why this finesse should have been taken in preference to declarer's actual line of play. It was hardly conceivable that West would have opened a doubleton diamond against North's powerful diamond bidding and, in fact, the declarer himself later admitted that he had figured the opening lead a singleton.

BUT IF IT REALLY had been a singleton the contract was as good as doomed. East would not be such a fool as to cover the queen with the king, and it would do South no earthly good to get rid of a club because West would ruff and promptly cash two club tricks.

After that, unless there was an extraordinary lay of trumps, the defenders still would have to get a trump trick, since, as actually happened in the play of the hand, East undoubtedly would be on lead at the second club for the killing return of a diamond.

Against many lays of cards, such as king and one, king and two, and king and three diamonds in the East hand, declarer's play would have turned out well, but as long as he himself diagnosed the opening lead as a singleton he also should have taken the trouble to analyze that if this were so his projected line of play would not work. That being the case, it would have been merely the better part of logic to play for more propitious circumstances.

'Keep the Home Neat, but Don't Be Too Fussy'

"House Is Not a Museum But Is to Be Lived in and Enjoyed."

JUST WHEN we thought her type was becoming extinct, we have come across the woman who can't enjoy her home because she can't bear anything to be disturbed or used. In fact, we have been unlucky enough to meet several such women lately, and we hereby tender our sincere sympathy to those who dwell within their gates.

We can just see these marvelous housekeepers making the rounds, duster in hand and a glint in their eyes, looking out for a speck of dust, for the sign of a cigarette ash or for a bit of lint adhering to carpet or chair. We can just hear the admonitions and rebukes administered to those guilty of creating the slightest disorder in rooms that must look like something out of the furniture store catalogue, but not like rooms that are lived in.

OF COURSE, we all should be house proud, everyone of us, and we should do our utmost to keep the home looking as neat and tidy as possible. But there it ends, if we and the family are to know any happiness in the home. For, after all, the home is meant to be lived in and to be enjoyed; it is a place in which we can be ourselves. It isn't a museum.

But the woman who is continually fussing and fuming about the house, putting things in order, dusting or rubbing out spots with the air of a martyr, doesn't think so. She has carried things to excess and has made a vice out of a virtue. And she is usually the first to feel abused and to air her grievances when members of her family declare that they are leaving home in order to experience a liittle comfort.

JUST AS MANY men are driven from their fireside by the too-tidy woman as by the poor housekeeper. And we have heard children speak bitterly of a mother who seemed to prefer that her rooms be spotless rather than that her children be comfortable.

So it is best to equip ourselves with the very best of household tools and cleaning appliances, to use them well, and then to let the family enjoy the home, teaching each member to respect his surroundings and to assist in the task of keeping the house as nice and neat as possible. Of course, it does mean a mess and a lot of subsequent cleaning up when the children ask friends in. But it is such gatherings that make a home and create memories that will shine through the years, long after the youngsters have grown and have homes and families of their own.

Scarfs

A series of new scarfs on display in the St. Louis stores evidently were created to impress the girls on the sorority rush lists. Each one is dedicated to a different national college sorority, the characteristic emblem being printed on the crepe background. Noted in the collection are arrows, keys, anchors and a variety of other symbols, many of them appearing in the proper color schemes. The scarfs are intended to be worn tied Ascot fashion or knotted carelessly about the neckline of a frock.

Children Learn Their Habits From Parents

"School Merely Develops What Juveniles Bring From the Home."

By Angelo Patri

PARENTS are teachers by right of birth. By the law of birth might be a truer way of stating the fact. Fathers and mothers cannot get away from their teaching duty as long as they are fathers and mothers, because children look to them for example and guidance and instruction before looking to anyone else.

The teaching begins when the child is born. The way the child is touched, the feel of his mother's hands, the different touch that is in his father's hands, are set in his memory; and in all time to come that memory will affect the child's use of his own hands. They will be firm and strong and sure, or uncertain and jerky and impatient in accordance with his experiences, and his inheritance. As he is likely to inherit his manner of using his hands from his parents he is doubly likely to use his hands as they use theirs Hands are very important in the life of a child. It is with them he feels his way, works his way, fights his way. Upon their power and ability much of his success depends. Hands express intelligence or the lack of it in no uncertain terms.

It is from his parents that a child learns his moral code. If they try to teach him sincerity while they smile at their own teaching they teach the smile, not the sincerity. If they teach him kindness while they show kindness to him and to all who come their way, he learns it and it is stored in his body and bones. While the child cannot put his knowledge into words he knows what he knows and behaves accordingly. Much of the teaching that takes hold on little children is the silent teaching of practice and example. What father and mother do the children are.

MANY TIMES I have heard the public schools blamed for the lack of good manners, the lack of good morals, for the lacks of society in general, but those who complain loudest are more closely associated with these failures than the teachers and the schools can ever be. They are the fathers and the mothers who have not taught good manners, good morals, fine aspirations of the soul by practice in their homes. The children are the direct products of the home. The better the home the finer the children.

A school, no matter what kind it is, can add nothing to a child. It develops what the child brings to it. It does wonders with children who have had little or no training in the fundamentals of living. It would do more if the first and most important teachers—the parents—did their work better. What father says is the law to the child. What mother does, is the ark and the covenant, above the law.

On Painting Old Furniture

THERE isn't much of a middle way as far as fashions in painted furniture go. It is either very grand and very formal, or else it is the extreme of simplicity and often with a decided peasant accent.

Formal painted furniture is quite an art in itself and one would hardly advise a woman to try that herself; you can have it done to furniture that you already have, however, if you get an expert cabinet painter. Antiqued painted finishes for mahogany dining chairs are fashionable, and for other furniture, it is sometimes interesting to have an old gold line or even a few sprays of flowers or bouquets.

The kind of painting that a woman can tackle herself, though, is simple or in the peasant mood. Old furniture can be refinished and decorated with or without bright provincial motifs to use in informal rooms. This isn't hard; it doesn't have to have the perfection of finish required in the type of painting mentioned.

The most marvelous of painted furniture is the lacquered work of the Orient. The West has never been able to perfect such lacquered finishes although the effort to compete has resulted in the term "japanned" applying to a shiny paint job (it's a misnomer, however, because this is usually achieved with ordinary paint and not lacquer).

Varnish has been used for anyway 3000 years . . . the Egyptians were experts at it but they used real amber chips blended with oil to make it! The name comes from Berenice, queen of Ptolemy I, whose beautiful hair was similar in sheen and color to those early varnishes. Today varnish isn't made of amber, but it's a very good looking and useful finish in its place and furniture finishers would miss it if they had to do without it.

Air Filter May Help Sufferers Of Hay Fever

Home-Made Device Will Make Bedroom Almost Free of Pollen.

By
Logan Clendening, M. D.

THIS may be a better psychological moment for advocating once more destruction of ragweed early in the season in order to prevent hay fever, than the time I did it before several weeks ago. Several weeks ago everybody was comfortable; the necessity of preventing some dim, far-off, imaginary illness is always hazy in the human mind, but now that the old hay fever is back among you, wouldn't it have been nice to have stirred up the city fathers to destroy the ragweed plants before they had time to bloom?

To be perfectly frank, a neighbor of mine, Mr. Henry S. Sigerist, of Kenneth, Kan., does not agree with me as to the possibilities of this method of prevention. "Ragweed," he writes, "grows anywhere and everywhere except in well-cultivated fields, but especially in pastures. I have 130 acres of it myself. The growth is very light and sparse this year, but a good rain would start billions of dormant seeds. It can be restrained but not exterminated by mowing, and seems always ready to come back in full stand immediately following neglect."

THIS MEANS, I take it, that if a stand of ragweed is destroyed Aug. 1 and neglected, new plants will spring up and reach maturity by Aug. 15. I would be inclined to doubt that. The ragweed runs a regular life cycle every year. Pollination ends about Sept. 20, and the fertilized seeds lie dorman until some time in June. The plants mature from June to Aug. 15 and then again begin to pollinate.

Will interruption of this life cycle destroy the plant for that season, or will other plants replace the destroyed ones and mature in a shorter cycle? I am conducting an experiment on that subject, having destroyed a flourishing patch at the end of July, and will publish the results.

Another correspondent writes: "I can go you one better. Municipalities in our section have set men to work collecting and burning the weed in September, after the seeds are already matured and sown for next season."

I believe the most practical method of treating hay fever is by an air filter in the window of the bedroom. The bedroom can be made nearly pollen-free without the use of an air filter if it is dismantled and kept closed. Such pollen grains as enter sink to the floor.

—o-o—

SELECT A bedroom with as few windows and doors as possible. The room should be thoroughly cleaned, pictures and hangings removed, also rugs, carpets and material not absolutely necessary.

Walls and ceiling should be cleaned with a damp rag and the floor with an oil mop.

The bed should be covered all day with a sheet which is carefully removed without shaking at night. In the morning, after the bed is made and covered with the sheet, the room is closed and must on no account be entered. At night, when the patient enters, he does so with the greatest care, closing the door carefully and walking about as little as possible so as not to stir up any pollen.

An electric fan cannot be used because it would stir up the settled pollen and fill the air with it, but the room can be cooled with a 25-pound cake of ice in a tub.

Home-made air filters are constructed by using a box to fit the window, two sides partially off, the box fitted with screening filled with close-meshed cotton. An electric fan inside the room sucks the air in. If the screen is the only entrance point for air, only a small amount of pollen will enter and the fan is allowable.

New Salad Ideas

Here are some salad tips, new "makings" and new ways to use them. A thrifty thought is to use cooked broccoli stalks cut into strips and marinated in French dressing. Serve with green or vegetable salad.

Cauliflower, raw and crunchy, is excellent in salads. Use the little flowerets and be sure that they are crisp. Cauliflower and broccoli make a good combination, too. Try them with a little sliced orange, some green pepper and chopped celery with a tart dressing.

Tender inside leaves of spinach (raw) are good in salads. The chances are that the guests won't recognize them, but they'll eat them with pleasure.

Candied fruit peels make a festive garnish for fruit salads; nice long strips of them on your dessert salad will make your guests blink and admire your ingenuity.

Tuna fish, salmon, shrimp or chicken salads are news when they are combined with bananas. And is it good! Jellied canned tomato or jellied orange cut into cubes or slices is nice served with a chicken salad.

IN THE HOLLYWOOD WHIRL × × ×

By Margaret Post Niemeyer

the much-heralded "Paramount Night of Stars" came off recently in the Hollywood Bowl with Leopold Stokowski—his right name, I am told, is plain Leo Stokes—conducting the latter part of the program and with our own St. Louis musician, Irvin Talbot, wielding the baton for the Sakuntala Overture. And then Gladys Swarthout, who sails from Deepwater, down in the Ozarks region, sang. It was a real Misouri musical evening.

Miss Swarthout knows how to sing and she also knows how to dress and on this important night she gave us all a thrill by her exhibition of both talents. Her singing left nothing to be desired for the Carmen was alive with fire, and as though to complete the illusion she herself was in a gown of flame colored chiffon which, as she walked from the wings accompanied by the spotlight, floated about her with the long diaphanous train trailing far behind like the tail of a comet.

There were those among the great audience who had given thought to attractive costumes, too. Jeanette MacDonald was one of those I especially noticed. Miss MacDonald was with Gene Raymond. She was charming in a black wool dress with a very high cowl neckline and a hip length jacket. The point which caught my eye and that of everyone else who saw her, was the fact that the sleeves were made entirely of silver fox, quite loose, a decided innovation. There was also a small collar of the fox and on her head there perched a black toque with a huge rosette of magenta velvet. Miss MacDonald's only jewelry was a double strand of graduated bright gold beads.

A few days ago I was having tea at the Crescent Heights home of Betty Furness. There were just a few of us, Betty, her mother, a visiting friend from New York and one or two others. Over our teacups it developed that Betty and her friend had been on a shopping orgy that morning and among other things Betty had bought a new coat which, fortunately for us, she had brought home for she brought it out for us to see. It was of soft, natural colored camel's hair cut with a very high waistline and having a stunning big collar and lapels of beaver, which almost entirely hid Betty's pretty face.

BIRTHDAYS some around even in Hollywood but when one is as young and bewitching as Marie Wilson they can bring only pleasure. So one night this week as we were dining at the Cafe La Maze, who should come in but Marie—accompanied by her ever faithful Nick Grande and Rosina Lawrence and Lou Golder—and sit down at the table next to us. There was nothing to mark the party as anything unusual until suddenly there was a sort of suppressed excitement at one end of the room and a waiter appeared bearing aloft a beautiful cake lighted with pink candles. All the way through the room, on his march to Miss Wilson's table, the waiter sang at the top of his voice, "Happy Birthday to You." Marie, who blushes violently at the slightest provocation, turned scarlet and gulped down two large glasses of ice water. It's her own way, she explained to me later, of getting over any excitement. Everybody in the room stood up and joined in the birthday song and, from everywhere, appeared camera men who began to make pictures of the party. For some reason Nick seemed to resent this part of the celebration, though with his, or rather Marie's publicity agent in the crowd, I should think he might have expected something of the sort to happen. For a minute it looked as though we might expect some real excitement, but gentle little Marie calmed him down in a moment or two and the affair closed as it was intended to, in a happy celebration.

Marie was in a black crepe dress with wide revers which fastened back on the gown with large rhinestone buttons. There was a small upstanding collar drawn together by a narrow black tie just above the revers. Marie's friend, Miss Lawrence, was in a bluish grey frock with a grey hat and big purple flower at the front.

Virginia Bruce was entrancing when I saw her the other night at the Trocadero with a party of friends. She was gowned in a stiff black taffeta, made very snug at the hips and from there it was gathered, flaring extremely wide to the hem. The neckline was original, being made in large scallops which dropped off at the shoulders and were lined with petal pink. The hem was scalloped, too, and lined in the same manner and when she danced the pink made a pleasing contrast to the severe black taffeta. About her throat Virginia wore an exquisite necklace of carved rosebuds with a fragile cameo in shell pink suspended from it.

THERE IS a little old man who sits in a sheltered corner along Hollywood boulevard who makes his living from a superstition prevalent among movie people. This is such a topsy-turvy town that when you congratulate an actor on doing so well he knocks on wood lest he be not doing so well tomorrow. So this little man who was a cabinetmaker in his day, carves the most remarkable things out of wood for the movie people to carry with them in event they want to "knock."

Barbara Stanwyck had the face of her young son carved in wood on the order of a little medallion. She wears it as a breast pin. A little wooden horse to wear on a watch chain is what this jackknife man carved for Frank McHugh. The horse is a syqmboy of Frank's first starring picture, "Three Men on a Horse."

JOAN CRAWFORD is working on a new picture called "Love on the Run" and as I sat watching them make a shot of it today I heard some one come tiptoeing around a "wild wall" which in movie parlance means one which isn't stationery but may be moved about at the wish of the director. The call of "cut" came. With this order Jean Harlow appeared around the wall, and seeing me sitting on my stool, she came over and joined me.

It's always a pleasure to talk with Jean. She is never in anything but a good humor and is mighty good company. Besides, she is almost sure to furnish you with something interesting to think about and write of in the way of styles. Today, as she came towards me, I saw that she was in a brick-colored wool dress which was made very simply, nothing outstanding about it except that, gleaming against its high collar, was a triple strand of bright gold beads which are enjoying great popularity these days. But as she came closer I saw that over her arm was a coat, and it was this coat that spelled big things in the way of fashion.

"I guess I look crazy with this coat on a day like this," said Jean, "but I am going out to see some people at Malibu from here and will spend the evening there and you can never tell about how it will be down on the ocean at night. Anyway, it is kind of good looking, don't you think?" she went on in her exceedingly frank way, as she held it up for me to see. And I certainly did think so, made as it was of nutria cut on swagger lines and lined throughout with the same brick red wool as the dress. Jean's hat was most captivating, being modeled after that of a "bell hop" and made of brick red suede and nutria.

JOAN HAD spied us by this time, and seeing that it would be some time before they would be ready to go on with the next shot, she came over to us and suggested that we go over to her dressing room while she had a little of her make-up repaired—you have no idea how often that has to be done, under the effects of those powerful and hot lights. So over we went, Joan and Jean talking the news of the studio and I only too glad to be along.

While Joans' maid added a bit of powder here and tucked in a lock of hair there, Joan said to me, "I believe I'll let you into more or less of a secret. I think I'll let you have a peep at the wedding dress that I will wear in this picture for it is too lovely for words, and if any of your readers are thinking of being married soon it might give them some really interesting ideas on the subject of wedding dresses."

Was I thrilled, and was Jean, to, when Joan pulled aside a covering from the wall and there, in all its glory, hung the wedding gown.

It was of white mousselaine de soie, made over white silk, and from the tight fitting basque which had a square cut neck line, fell a full billowy skirt, and from the neckline to the hem ran a row of small buttons made of orange blossoms and gardenias. "But the most astonishing thing about the costume," said Joan, "is the way the veil is to be attached. Across the back of my head there will be what you might term a sort of hammock made of gardenias and in this will rest my hair piled up in curls in back and from beneath the gardenias will fall the full length wedding veil. How's that for something new in the way of wedding designs?" Both Jean and I were properly enthusiastic but were cut short from any further enlightenment by the call for Miss Crawford to return to the set. Feeling that I might be more welcome the next time if I did not tarry any longer, I said good bye to both Joan and Jean.

"The Golden Age" seems to have staged a comeback, judging from the great amount of gold jewelry being worn by every one here. There are the gold bead necklaces in one, two and three strands; the brooches and bracelets of gold with delicate tracery in black enamel borrowed from the First Empire designs; and huge brooches three and four inches long and two inches wide studded with colored stones, which is of modern design and is worn at the throat with the new high collars. Pat Ellis has one of these which looks like a king's ransom when worn on a black velvet gown.

THEN THERE is the new "tailored" ring. The stone, a sapphire in the case of Beverly Roberts, forms the buckle and another stone which runs along the gold band of the ring forms the tongue which apparently slips through the buckle. They are smart when worn with the tailored suit.

LIFE HAS BEEN EXCITING

theirs. Now, I find it just a bit ironic to discover that I am, after all, a very "average woman." Love and marriage mean more to me than the richest rewards "career" can offer.

Ironic, also, was the discovery that marriage had advanced, rather than retarded, my professional success. I have grown spiritually; consequently I have grown artistically. Marriage, by demanding much of me, has prevented me from becoming too absorbed in my career and in myself. It has given me a truer perspective on life.

Last spring, en route to Europe to fill my Covent Garden engagement, he saw I was exhausted and on the verge of nervous collapse, and forthwith took charge. As we stood on the deck of the Ile de France and watched New York fade away, he took me in his arms and said:

"My dear, three years ago, when we met aboard this same ship, you were already a personage, but only because you had always taken time from your work to be a human being. Now, you are much more famous and much more successful. But fame and success will trap you if you are not very careful. They will take away from you those lovely interludes which give new dreams and new stimulus. Without those interludes, success will be a curse instead of a glorious adventure . . ."

And he made me promise then and there that once Covent Garden was behind us, I would place myself in his hands and ask no questions.

But at Cannes there were too many people. There, I was still Grace Moore, the singer, the celebrity, the curiosity. I could not escape the interest of the crowd.

One morning, with great pretense of mystery, my husband ordered me into our car. All day we drove, along the French and Italian rivieras, through Milan and then, higher and higher, into the Swiss Alps. "We're going to St. Moritz," I decided and then, curling up in the seat, fell sound asleep.

I was awakened shortly after midnight to find that we had stopped in front of a little Swiss inn. In the brilliant moonlight, against its background of towering crags, it looked like an illustration of a charming Christmas card. I glimpsed the sign, "Majola," and suddenly remembered. Three years before, on our honeymoon, we had driven past that same little inn and I had been enchanted by its rustic beauty. At that time, I had told my husband:

"Some day, when I am very tired, you shall bring me here. You will know when" . . .

And he had remembered!

We scrambled from the car and I danced in the snow like any 5-year-old while he rang the bell and shouted for the porter to open the door.

We lived there for two weeks, incognito. No one knew who we were—and no one cared. By day, we donned Alpine clothes and climbed the nearby peaks, at night we tumbled into bed, blessedly fatigued and too content to dream. I was a person reborn. One morning, while toiling up a mountain trail, we stopped at a wayside inn for a pail of buttermilk. Someone started a phonograph and I heard my own recorded voice, singing "One Night of Love" and "Chiribiribin." It seemed to me that those songs belonged to some other woman whom I once knew vaguely.

And, standing there, gazing out over the wild beauty of Alpine valleys and peaks, we made another vow; each year must give us five full months in which no thought of "career" shall be allowed to interfere with the simple pursuit of happiness, five carefree months in which we shall be Mr. and Mrs. Valentin Parera, professionless people quite drunk with the joy of unpretentious living.

The champagne of life, I think, lies in contrast. Those five months of flight from fame will always preserve for me the glamour of success.

My life has been rich in contrast. And if I am grateful for my triumphs, I am also grateful for my defeats. I have known many in the years since I so blindly charted my course for operatic stardom.

In triumph or defeat, they have been joyous years. I have lived on emotional hill-tops and life has been exciting.

(THE END.)

Candied Carrots

For candied carrots, boil six medium-sized carrots, scrape and cut them into strips as potatoes for French fried. Mix one-half cup water, one cup brown sugar and two tablespoons butter in a baking dish and warm to make a syrup. Place the carrots into this syrup so that they are entirely covered and bake until candied.

Cole Slaw

Here is a recipe for a cole slaw that is very different and most piquant. Slice one head solid cabbage as for cole slaw. Mix together one cup each cold tongue, one green pepper, one red pepper and one-half chopped onion. Thin one cup mayonnaise with the beaten white of one egg and add to the cabbage slaw. Sugar may be added if not sweet enough.

Knives that have become notched can be made smooth again by rubbing them down on the edge of a cement window sill, or on a fairly coarse file. Rub on one side, and finish off with a brisk rub on the other to make the whole smooth. Polish in the usual way.

How Nazis Are Tightening Their Hold on Danzig, Free City of the Baltic

English Report Says Despite League Guarantee Opposition Is Forced to 'Fight in Chains' —Terrorism and Suppression Prevail.

From the Manchester Guardian.

EVEN if the non-Nazi majority in Danzig is to be left to its fate, it is as well that the British public should be aware of the conditions which actually prevail here in the Free City of the Baltic. It should never be supposed that the vast majority of Danzigers do not feel themselves to be Germans; indeed, a large majority for that reason labors under the misapprehension that they would be materially better off if reattached to the Reich. It is all the more striking that people of such conflicting views as the German Nationalists, the Catholics, and the Social Democrats of Danzig should have constructed a common block which, gaining recruits as it has since the election and devaluation of 1935, forms an undoubted majority in the Free City today.

The Danzig Opposition is forced to fight in chains against its Nazi rulers, although full constitutional rights are guaranteed by the League of Nations to some 400,000 inhabitants of the Free City with its hinterland. "This great front which opposes National Socialism is an alliance which it is best to call the union of decent Germans, and its motto is the saying of a great poet, 'Lieber tot als Sklav.' " These words were written in an exceedingly witty and courageous article entitled "Traumwanster," which appeared last May 29 in a Danzig householders' paper called "Die Neue Zeit"; "Die Neue Zeit" was at once forbidden for eight months and the responsible person, Dr. Blavier, taken into preventive custody.

Paper Is Silenced.

After the January meeting of the Council of the League this year conflicts had seemed to be assuaged. Gen. Goering, Hitler's special adviser on the Polish area and in many ways the cautious man of present-day Germany, had counseled moderation, and it was arranged that a Press Court should be set up in Danzig to which appeal could be made over prohibitions and confiscation.

Though the judges of the court were obviously inclined to support Nazi policy, relative freedom had prevailed until the end of May. The "Volksstimme" is the organ of the Danzig Social Democrats, but, since the Nazi regime, it has become the favorite reading of Danzigers as a whole, since it is forced to write with moderation in order, even fitfully, to appear at all. But throughout June the "Volksstimme" was silenced.

Before considering the events to which this veto was a prelude, it should also be emphasized that ever since the Nazis have ruled in Danzig the Opposition has also been lamed by the attitude and methods of the police. Many of the ordinary constables are Nationalists and would gladly be the true servants of law with only the policeman's natural suspicion of the poor. But the Nazi Government has virtually forbidden police impartiality, as Herr Greiser made plain in a speech in the Diet last May 5.

Sadistic Types Chosen.

Thus S. A. and S. S. and even Hitler Youth rowdyism are uninterfered with, while the detectives and higher police officials appear to be chosen among obviously sadistic types. The S. A. are the storm troops. The S. S., originally a bodyguard for Hitler, are the pick of the troops used for special detail in Nazi affairs. The sworn statements from anti-Nazis subjected to the prevailing methods of the police are fairly convincing; many of them have come before the courts. Most of the accounts refer to Room 84 as the chief torture chamber of the Danzig police headquarters.

The case of an ex-police official arrested in 1935 on the false charge of possessing arms (name, date of arrest, etc., are in my possession) is characteristic. A detective conducted this prisoner along a passage alone, then suddenly shouted aloud, "You dog, you're attacking me," whereupon about ten police people rushed up and beat the man savagely with rubber truncheons until he completely collapsed; he was laid up for some days and released at the end of a fortnight. Ever since the Nazis came into power the criminal police have practiced the familiar technique of trying to terrify the rank and file of the Opposition on trumped-up charges while leaving the more conspicuous leaders alone.

Yet at the end of May it was clear that intimidation and gagging had failed in their effect. The Opposition was growing. To give one example, the Nationalist, or Conservative, party had fought the election of April, 1935, with only some 200 registered members; this figure has now increased to just about 4500. The devaluation of May, 1935, hit the working people, and therefore the Social Democratic party, with particular severity, and Government patronage is, of course, used to bleed the Opposition. But all this has added to the unpopularity of the regime.

Lester Shuns Blinkers.

The last obstacles to the complete "Gleichschaltung" of Danzig were the presence of the High Commissioner of the League of Nations and the fragmentary survival of an independent judiciary. Sean Lester, the representative of the League, was armed with merely arbitral powers, but he refused to wear the blinkers persistently offered to him by the Nazis. Even in the truce period which succeeded the January meeting of the Council, he was able to confirm a suspicion that his correspondence with Geneva was tampered with.

One day in February he sent his Italian "Chef de Cabinet" to request the return of a posted letter to which he wished to make an addition. The officials were painfully embarrassed, for the letter, which was not yet due to leave Danzig, could not be found. It was subsequently produced by a man who had been taking "particular care" of it. This incident, trivial in itself, is typical of the conditions in which Mr. Lester has had to work.

As for the judges of Danzig, many of them are Nationalists who refuse to forget the elementary principles of justice, and have dared up to now to grant compensation to opponents of the Nazis whose maltreatment in Room 84 or elsewhere has been proved; a verdict of this kind was given as late as July 2.

Three Martyrs for Nazis.

But in order, once and for all, to put an end to the "union of decent Germans" a great June offensive was planned by the Nazis. At first Herr Greiser's attitude was a little obscure. A number of attacks on individuals synchronized with two now notorious assaults upon perfectly legal Opposition meetings. The Nazis scored three martyrs in this game. The medical examination of the corpse of Deskowski, the most famous of the three, showed that he died from heart failure; there is no evidence that the other two were killed by anti-Nazis. Herr Greiser still replied with some moderation to Mr Lester's questions, and all meetings and processions were forbidden for the rest of the summer; Nazi processions were included in the order, though in practice no authority has subsequently hindered them.

At this point Herr Greiser was summoned to Berlin, and there followed in rapid succession the affront to Mr. Lester from the officers of the German cruiser Leipzig, the publication of Herr Forster's article declaring Mr. Lester

Another Battle in War Between Union Labor and W. R. Hearst

WHAT IS HAPPENING AT SEATTLE

Newspapermen's Strike Provides the Occasion

Struggle Unites Factions on Both Sides, One to Break Organized Labor's Power, Other to Establish "Closed Shop."

Employers Back Publisher, Not Always Because They Esteem Him, but in Protection of Their Own Interests.

By SPENCER R. McCULLOCH.
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
SEATTLE, WASH., Aug. 29.

ANOTHER major engagement in the continuing warfare between William Randolph Hearst and organized labor on the Pacific Coast is reflected in the strike of the American Newspaper Guild against the Post-Intelligencer, the only morning paper in Seattle, which has been forced to suspend publication since the strike began more than two weeks ago.

The issues involved in the strike are far overshadowed by the unanimity with which organized labor of almost every type has seized upon the opportunity to manifest its hostility to the publisher.

In so doing a situation has been created in this city of 400,000 which amounts to industrial warfare, with major business interests avowedly out to break the power of organized labor and labor groups equally determined to effect a "closed shop" policy in virtually every business and industry.

Business Backing Hearst Is Mere Self-Protection.

Between these two conflicting factions, now engaged in a battle which the newspaper strike has intensified and brought out in the open, lies a mass of "white collar" wage owners, small business men, professional men, who manifest an apathy to the present strike but who now are the objectives of campaigns by both sides to enlist their sympathies for inevitable future struggles.

Business and financial interests are rallying to the support of Hearst not because they necessarily esteem him or indorse his policies but because they see in the shutting down of the 60-year-old Post-Intelligencer acquired by Hearst about 15 years ago, a portend of what may happen to their individual businesses in the acute conflict with organized labor. The war has been marked by six major strikes since the bitter longshoremen's strike which tied up shipping along the Pacific Coast in 1934 and which crystallized the antipathy of the maritime workers for the publisher.

Mayor Dore Calls His "a Union Administration."

The situation is further complicated by the pro-labor attitude of the city administration swept into office by the labor vote, its policies epitomized by Mayor John F. Dore who told the writer his was "a union administration."

Dore, a former criminal lawyer and now counsel for the Brewery Workers' Union, despite his public office, has demanded that Hearst be "driven from the city" and has denounced the newspaper management for refusing to arbitrate with the Guild and neutral mediators.

"This is a union administration," Mayor Dore told the writer, "and we propose to go with labor as far as we can. Any troubles will be decided in their favor. We will give them the breaks. And if any strikebreakers show up, imported by Mr. Hearst or anyone else, we will search them for weapons and throw them in jail if we get a chance. This is an out and out labor administration and I make no bones about it."

Mayor Is Real Director of Police Department.

Dore, who asserted that hundreds of pickets, including longshoremen, teamsters, cannery workers, boilermakers and others, who surrounded the newspaper office a few hours after the strike was declared constituted a law-abiding crowd, said that if it should become necessary he would declare the existence of a city-wide emergency and take charge of the police department.

Most of the policemen, he observed, "carry union cards" and are not disposed to be antagonistic to picket lines. The nominal head of the department is a Chief of Police appointed by Dore's predecessor, candidate of the "conservative group," but Dore is the actual director of the department.

Claims of the Hearst management and others opposing the strikers that law and order has not been enforced have been met also with a deaf ear by Gov. Clarence D. Martin, who incidentally is a candidate for reelection in the primaries Sept. 8, who has said that he has received no evidence of law violation and sees no necessity for intervention. He advised mediation. Pickets, who engaged in fist fights in several individual cases with persons leaving or attempting to enter the newspaper plant, have dwindled to a skeleton crew, augmented at night, who maintain a policy of watchful waiting in the event an attempt should be made to man the plant. Other pickets are held in reserve along the nearby waterfront, ready for action.

Professional Guard Only Man Injured.

Only one man has been injured seriously during the strike. That was on opening day, Aug. 13, when the pickets described to the writer by the Hearst management, as "a bloodthirsty mob," appeared in force. The injured man, a professional guard, under indictment for the shooting of a teamster at Tacoma two years ago, was set upon by teamsters and others when he attempted to leave the building, without police protection. Such protection has been furnished for those engaged in carrying food to guards who remain on duty inside.

The printing trades, who are under contract with the paper and who are not on strike have made no concerted attempt to enter the picketed building, obviously regarding conditions there as not conforming to their contractual guarantee of "safe ingress and egress."

Broadly speaking, the newspaper strike has served to solidify both the ranks of labor and of capital as well as to bring to the fore the underlying issues back of the conflict between the two.

Factions on Both Sides Unified by the Strike.

Hitherto, except on certain occasions, Seattle labor has been divided into two groups. One, controlled by Dave Beck, international representative on the Pacific Coast, for the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Stablemen and Helpers of America, dominates the Central Labor Council, is composed primarily of crafts and adheres to "conservative" practices.

The other, a militant, left wing group, includes various industrial unions and water front workers, longshoremen and other marine workers affiliated with the Maritime Federation of the Pacific Coast. This organization, because of the antagonism of the Hearst press in the strike of 1934 has boycotted his publications ever since and agreed in advance to furnish pickets for this present strike. Its members are subject even to a $5 fine if they buy a Hearst publication.

But now the labor factions are making common cause against the publisher, deeming him an enemy to organized labor. Likewise, business interests here who previously have failed to act always in accord, are utilizing every means to combat what they regard as the menace of "predatory poverty."

Beck, the most powerful single labor leader in the Northwest, is assailed as a racketeer. It has been repeatedly asserted although never proved, that his organizations control prices in the cleaning and dyeing, beverage, laundry, bakery and milk industries. Steadfastly denying price-fixing, the labor leader, who controls vital hauling facilities here, freely admits that he subscribes to the theory that industry must be maintained on "a constructive, profit-making basis in order to pay bona fide wages."

Capital, as such, is represented by the Washington Industrial Council with the avowed purpose of opposing the "closed shop" —maintaining the employer's right to hire and fire—promoting law and order and combating "radicalism."

This powerful organization, headed by James W. Spangler, vice-president of the Seattle First National Bank, was developed after the water front strike two years ago and is now making its most intensive campaign, anticipating future strikes and warned by several of comparatively recent occurrence.

It is composed of more than 30 major groups, including banking and other financial interests, large shippers, water front operators, oil interests — in brief, the principal capitalistic interests of the city. Organized, paradoxically enough, along craft union lines it is controlled by an administrative committee, composed of a representative from each group, which in turn, selects an executive committee.

Smelling Out Likely Source of Labor Trouble.

Its avowed purpose is to resist "unreasonable demands of organized labor and the practice of coercion and violence," and its activities now are expanding to locate places where "labor controveries" are threatened, to ascertain in advance where wages, hours and working conditions may be bad.

One of its organizers pointed out to the writer that such information would enable it to "clean house" when necessary and place the employer in a defensive position in anticipation of labor's demands. It professes to be concerned with making secure the employment of the wage-earner with "conservative tendencies" and to avoid "the unholy atmosphere of radical organizations."

Like some of the labor organizations it has experienced difficulty in obtaining efficient co-operation of various groups. But now, alarmed by a series of strikes and anticipating additional controversies, the council is emerging as the recognized representative of capital in this area. Chamber of Commerce activities, a new Law and Order League, all directed against organized labor, most of them assailing Beck, all operate under its guidance.

Its previous difficulties, now vanishing, were due to the inability of some executives to take orders and the hesitancy of bitter competitors to make common cause.

Employers' Side Stated by their Representative.

Spangler, who told the writer that the Council was determined to resist "the unholy demands of the employe group" and would stand out against the "closed shop" without being "opposed to unionism" asserted that a continuation of the "present violent controversial condition" would be harmful to the progress of the community, driving industry away and injurious to law and order.

"Law abiding citizens," he said, "believe that Federal, State and municipal statutes should be enforced. There is an orderly way for laws to be changed if the majority so desires. But during their existence we are not yet convinced protection may not be given to all classes in pursuit of their daily avocations as long as they are within the law."

There is reason for the alarm of the interests opposed to the practical recognition of organized labor—which must inevitably mean the "closed shop."

The present strike is the sixth important one since the water front strike two years

American Political Scene, Supreme Court and New Deal As Seen Through British Eyes

Denis W. Brogan, Who Called U. S. Government a Racket, Draws Parallel Between PWA and England's Rearming.

By CARLOS F. HURD
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff.

IN mid-campaign, and midway of his survey of the American political scene, Denis W. Brogan, fellow tutor of Corpus Christi College, Oxford, lecturer to English students on American and French government, was in St. Louis last week on a journey which extended to the capital city of Kansas.

His past travels in the United States have been the exploration tours of a political philosopher, and his book, "Government of the People," in which he termed the American Government a racket, full of abuses and inconsistencies, has been read by many Americans. He has not abandoned the role of philosopher, but his present quest is for spot incidents and surface facts, which may draw his countrymen, even for a few minutes, from contemplation of the European crisis all about them.

When he gets back to Oxford, and when his present study has been supplemented and corrected by the figures of Nov. 3, Brogan will be prepared to set down matured views on the American issues which he outlined, as he then saw them, in his book of two years ago. Just now, he is most desirous of learning what chance Gov. Landon really has; what is likely to happen in Pennsylvania, politically and industrially; and whether Father Coughlin or Dr. Townsend deserves more than causal attention in such a survey as he is making for readers of the Glasgow Herald, with articles for the London Times to follow.

Britain Likes Roosevelt.

"The British public has concluded that Mr. Roosevelt is going to be re-elected," Brogan said to a Post-Dispatch reporter, "and hence it is taking little interest in the American campaign, having things much nearer home which cause it much more worry.

"I was surprised, arriving in the United States early in August, to find so much hope in the East for the election of Gov. Landon. The New York market, which at this time contains a great deal of English money, is hopeful of Landon's election. Speculation is pro-Landon. How much that means, I would not try to judge until I have been about the country more.

"Without taking sides, it can be said that the English people probably prefer the President to Mr. Landon, of whom they know almost nothing. They believe international relations and trade will be maintained satisfactorily by Mr. Roosevelt.

"Huey Long was a great favorite with English readers up to his death, and for a time thereafter. Father Coughlin has not become well known in England, and Dr. Townsend and Mr. Lemke, hardly at all."

Supreme Court and New Deal

Campaign issues related to the Supreme Court are of prime interest to this observer, who gave an early and accurate view of New Deal legislative experiments when he wrote, in 1934:

"Politically, the United States is a new 'Country of the Blind'; along its narrow paths, politicians feel their way, never sure that they will not come suddenly to a dead end, for the guiding principles are feeble threads indeed. At any moment, the whole path may have to be retraced. This gambling character of a great part of legislation ranks, with legislative irresponsibility, as the chief sin against sound politics made easy or inevitable by judicial review."

The "dead end" reached by NRA and AAA, and the more involved situation as to minimum wage legislation, are viewed with understanding by this visitor, who is frankly doubtful whether he can make the casual British reader, or even the careful British student, understand them very well.

"The whole attitude of Americans toward the courts is unfamiliar to the English," Brogan said. "We don't believe you can have little patches of legislation. Many of us have no conception of a law being unconstitutional; to us, a law is a law.

"Most English observers would say that the United States is not likely to get out of trouble so long as its hands are tied in the present fashion. In Great Britain itself, we do not have this problem, involved as it is with the other problem of the relation of states and Federal Government; but the Australian Commonwealth is beginning to have it.

Parallel in Australia.

"The Australian Privy Council has invalidated legislation, which is virtually the same as a decision of unconstitutionality by your Supreme Court. There has been no violent reaction; in England, as I view it, there might have been.

"With the European situation as it is, Englishmen feel that any slip may mean destruction—one, two, three, you're out—but here, you can still make errors and get over them.

"In England, nobody knows what to do, so we usually do nothing. Since the Abyssianan affair, it seems that no one cares to suggest a course of government policy. The Government is thought to wish to go out, and the Labor party doesn't wish to take the responsibility.

"The Spanish situation, which arose just before I left home, aroused a general attitude of hoping it would soon be over, and that the trouble would stay in Spain. There was sympathy with the rebels, among our Conservatives, and hope that the Government would win, among Labor partisans; but the average man just hoped it would not mean another general war.

Price-Fixing in England.

"As to the Supreme Court decisions which affect this campaign, I have found a feeling that NRA contained internal inconsistencies. Both NRA and AAA have their parallels in England. We have tried price-fixing through limiting production. We put up the price of milk, by requiring that producers must sell to marketing boards, at one price for home use, and at a cheaper price for industrial use, in chocolate or food preparations. That has caused a lot of kicking, as people cannot see why the same milk should command different prices from different purchasers.

"Our Minister of Agriculture, Rt. Hon. Walter Elliot, nearly lost his seat over the price of milk. He is behind the subsidy policy for wheat and sugar beet raising, and the rigid control of hop-culture, which has caused much complaint.

"Our Conservative party traditionally favors the farmers, as opposed to the Labor party, which views subsidies to agriculture as increasing the burdens of labor. But even some of the Conservatives hold that, for reasons of climate, aside from questions of general policy, the plan of subsidizing wheat and beets is a mistake; that in our moist climate, fruit raising and dairying offer better prospects to the farmer. I hold that view myself.

"The NRA and AAA decisions seemed, in their political effect, to favor the anti-administration forces. The court's decisions can't be kept out of politics; people will approve or disapprove of them, and will express their feeling politically.

"But in the minimum wage decision, the Supreme Court may have put the Government on the spot, or may have put itself there. The decision hurt the plans of the

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

The name and address of the author must accompany every contribution, but on request will not be published. Letters not exceeding 200 words will receive preference.

On the Election Frauds—and Mr. Brisbane

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I WRITE this letter with a twofold purpose: First, to congratulate you on the fine public service you have done in exposing the election registration frauds. Your effort to restore honest popular self-government in St. Louis and in Missouri seems to me to be the finest type of journalism.

Second, I have often wondered how long your paper will continue to print Arthur Brisbane. In Wednesday's paper, Mr. Brisbane, evidently traveling through France, discovers he has to pay much more for gasoline there than in Texas, and makes this fact the occasion for congratulating our rugged individualists who have developed the oil industry (and incidentally to take a crack at "some professors" who would "tear down" our great "oil, automobile and other units of 'big business' ").

Our vast petroleum resources in Texas, Oklahoma, Louisiana and other states were often discovered by almost penniless wildcatters, or by chance. The fact that crude oil once sold for 10 cents a barrel in Oklahoma and Texas was certainly not due to any great contribution on the part of big business, but simply to a veritable torrent of a precious natural resource, which uncontrolled private exploitation has inexcusably wasted. Big business can no more claim credit for our natural resources than Czarist governments, or the present Communist Government, of Russia can claim credit for the rich petroleum resources of Russia.

Mr. Brisbane, inadvertently I suppose, forgets to point out that every gallon of gasoline in England and Italy (and perhaps in France) has to be imported. Unless I am mistaken, gasoline in England was selling for about 30 cents a gallon. But that is an imperial gallon, or five quarts. Reduced to our regular four-quart gallon, that would make gasoline retail at 24 cents per American gallon in England. Because of the pressure of sanctions, the price of gasoline in Italy soared to prohibitive prices, about $1.25 a gallon. Mr. Brisbane reports gasoline selling for 48 cents a gallon in France. Here it is possible to transport gasoline long distances by pipe line. When the added cost of transporting petroleum by water is considered, the 24 cents per American gallon, for gas in England, does not compare unfavorably with the price of gasoline in many Eastern markets.

Experts in the petroleum field estimate there are from three to five times as many gas stations as are actually needed for efficient distribution. The industry has been characterized by appalling waste in production, waste of natural gas, for example, and incredibly wasteful distribution. There has not been discovered any lubricant for our machine civilization to take the place of oil; no synthetic product in place of oil. When we waste oil, we are not living on interest; we are burning up our capital resources.

Is it any wonder that Europeans often react unfavorably to smug, self-satisfied, provincial tourists of the Brisbane type, who compare the distress price of petroleum in the Panhandle, where it was a drug on the market, with its scarcity price in Europe, where it is an import, and credit the advantage to the consumer to the genius of big business in America?

LUX ET VERITAS.

Andrew Carnegie on War.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

WE often hear the words, "Do the people want war?" And who are "the people?" That's easy: "The people" are those human beings that want no war! On a glass door of the Carondelet Library I read these words:

"Surely no civilized community in our day can resist the conclusion: That the killing of man by man as a means of settling international disputes, is the foulest blot on human society, the greatest curse of human life, and that as long as men thus continue to kill one another they have slight claim to rank as civilized!"—Andrew Carnegie.

If these words were circulated and held before the eyes of "the people" as persistently as "war news"—there would be no war!

Is Father Coughlin Anti-Semitic?

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

OF all the absurd accusations which have been and are being made against Father Coughlin, it seems to me the one accusing him of being anti-Semitic is the most ridiculous. His critics on this point would have us think that the Jews have no understanding of social justice.

There are many Jews in the N. U. S. J. They know that Father Coughlin, when speaking against certain individuals, is not considering race or denomination, but is inveighing against some privilege or system which these individuals support against the economic welfare of the masses of our citizens.

The critics' conclusions are as wrong as if I were to conclude that Father Coughlin is anti-Catholic because he has denounced certain individual Catholics sitting in high places.

THE SENATORIAL CAMPAIGN.

A Senate with many new faces is assured for the next Congress. Voluntary retirements, deaths and one primary defeat have made upward of a dozen replacements necessary to date. Add to these the changes almost certain to come from at least several of a dozen or more close races and an upper house with a sizable delegation of new members is as good as sworn in.

Several Senators have announced that they will not be candidates to succeed themselves. Best-known of these is the independent Republican, Norris of Nebraska, who, at the age of 75, is completing his fourth term. Costigan of Colorado, Democrat, who has worked and voted with Norris frequently during the last six years, is retiring because of ill health. Hastings of Delaware, Republican, a sharp critic of the New Deal, announced his retirement some time ago, but he has been drafted by the State convention of his party to run again.

Other Senators who have said they will not run are Benson of Minnesota, Farmer-Laborite; Loftin of Florida and Mrs. Rose McConnell Long of Louisiana, Democrats. Benson, who was appointed to fill the seat of the late blind Republican, Schall, is the Farmer-Labor candidate for Governor of Minnesota. The Farmer-Labor candidate for Senator was the late Gov. Olson, who appointed Benson. A senatorial candidate now must be chosen by the Farmer-Labor State Committee. Loftin was appointed to the seat of the late Trammell of Florida with the understanding that he would not be a candidate in November. Mrs. Long was named to the seat of her husband on the same basis.

One seat, that of Murphy of Iowa, Democrat, killed in an automobile crash recently, is vacant, and that of the late Senator Fletcher of Florida, also a Democrat, is virtually vacant since its occupant, Fletcher's secretary, was appointed after the Senate adjourned, and will not sit unless a special session is called before the election.

The Senator defeated in a primary race is Gore of Oklahoma, blind Democrat, who was a member first from 1907 to 1921, and then from 1931. He is one of the Democrats who have been sharply critical of the Roosevelt policies. His successor probably will be Representative Josh Lee who defeated Gov. Marland for the nomination in the run off primary.

Borah of Idaho, veteran Republican and dean of the Senate, faces a hard battle with Gov. C. Ben Ross, Democrat, whose ability to get votes in Idaho has rivaled that of Borah himself. Gov. Ross has had his eye on Borah's Senate seat for some four years. In Massachusetts, Gov. James M. Curley is out to wrest the Democratic nomination from the incumbent, Marcus A. Coolidge, and then to defeat Henry Cabot Lodge Jr., Republican, in the election.

There will be at least two other New England senatorial races of more than ordinary interest. New Hampshire will see an attempted comeback by George H. Moses, long one of the Republican leaders in Congress. He is opposing Senator Henry W. Keyes, who has served since 1919, and Gov. H. Styles Bridges. In Maine, the Democratic candidate is Gov. Louis J. Brann, who proved a vote-getter by winning the governorship in 1932 and 1934. He will oppose a sitting Senator, Wallace H. White Jr.

Other races that bear watching are those of Lewis of Illinois, Democratic whip, against Otis F. Glenn, Republican, member of the Senate from 1929 to 1933, and of Dickinson of Iowa, Republican, against Gov. Clyde Herring, Democrat, who hopes to enjoy farmer support on account of the administration's sponsorship of the now invalidated AAA. In Georgia, Gov. Eugene Talmage, bitter New Deal foe, will try to oust a stanch Roosevelt supporter, Richard B. Russell Jr. Rhode Island Democrats will make a strong effort to defeat Jesse H. Metcalf, a Republican stalwart since 1925.

In three states, voters will be called upon to fill both senatorships—in Iowa because of the expiration of Dickinson's term and Murphy's death, in Florida because of the deaths of Fletcher and Trammell, and in New Mexico because of the expiration of the term of Carl A. Hatch and the necessity of filling the unexpired term of the late Bronson Cutting, occupied on appointment by Dennis Chavez.

There is no chance for the Republicans to gain control of the Senate in November. The Congressional Directory issued in April showed 70 Democratic members, 23 Republican members, one Progressive and two Farmer-Laborites. It also showed the senatorships of 19 Democrats and 12 Republicans expiring. If the Republicans should retain all their seats in this group and the Democrats lose all theirs, the Democrats would still have a majority. But the Democrats obviously will suffer no such loss, since more than two-thirds of the Democratic seats at stake are in the South. Actually, 23 seats held by Democrats in the last session will be voted on.

Regardless of who is elected President, the Democrats will have a majority in the Senate, will organize it and command its committees.

MR. LORIMER'S RETIREMENT.

An extraordinary career in periodical journalism is about to end with the retirement of George Horace Lorimer from the editorship of the Saturday Evening Post, effective the first of the year.

How Mr. Lorimer, with little special training, took the moribund weekly and made it "An American Institution," is possibly the century's outstanding magazine publishing phenomenon. There must be still many readers who remember vividly the young editor's early effort, "Letters of a Self-Made Merchant to His Son," which caught and held the country's imagination and laid the foundation for the enormous material success which has gone on and on, with only a few brief pauses, to its present peak.

Opinion is divided as to the Post's influence in the national scheme. Some of our intellectuals, or intelligentsia, have made a cult, almost, of deriding it, but the fact remains that Editor Lorimer has filled brilliantly a role which, in the good old days when writers were mostly vagabonds, would have designated him a patron of letters. The good old days have gone when a Maecenas could make Horace comfortable and happy on his Sabine farm, or the Grand Monarch could smile generously, if capriciously, on the tireless genius of Moliere. The age of business has blown forever off the map the institution of rich or royal favor to a grateful mendicancy. It has established and put into practice the philosophy that the laborer is worthy of his hire. It has raised the art of writing from vagabondage to a dignified, distinguished profession.

In the 36 years of Mr. Lorimer's editorship, almost every personage in statecraft, science, industry, literature, the stage, the world of sport, has appeared in the Saturday Evening Post. Always the latchstring has been on the outside to the young, unknown writers of fiction. How many a "mute inglorious Milton" has been rescued from the oblivion of Gray's elegiac churchyard invites pleasant speculation.

The retirement, it is explained, has been occasioned by exacting personal affairs and the desire to do some "long deferred writing," impossible in the pressure of editorial duties. Now in his ripe and mellow maturity, freighted with a rich cargo of experience, Mr. Lorimer should have things to say that will command a large, interested audience.

LANDON REPUDIATES A POSTER.

The most conspicuous Republican national campaign poster abroad in the land just now is a 24-sheet affair, depicting a brawny workman. The legend reads: "Vote for Landon and Land a Job. Regular Jobs at Regular Pay."

It would appear from the closing words of Mr. Landon's recent address at Buffalo that he had noted this poster, and not altogether approvingly. After outlining his suggestions for reform of governmental spending and taxing policies, the Governor said:

> That is the kind of government we must have if we are to get rid of unemployment by giving our workers real jobs at good pay. I know that accomplishing all this is not a task that can be accomplished overnight, and I make no such promises. We have huge responsibilities that we must continue to meet. But with the help of a courageous country, it is a task that can and will be done. That is my pledge to the American people.

The poster's slogan is a catchy and alluring one, with its suggestion that every Landon voter will get a good job immediately. It is far removed from any conceivable reality, however, though fully in keeping with the glamorous promises held out by both major parties in previous campaigns. Mr. Landon, by his disapproval—"I know that accomplishing all this is not a task that can be accomplished overnight"—shows a commendable realism, and a desire to keep his campaign on a factual basis. His attitude augurs presumably that he will not be guilty of promising the abolition of poverty or of putting two chickens in every pot, as did his predecessor on the Republican hustings.

It would have been much better, however, had Mr. Landon expressed his opinion while the poster was being prepared. Campaign conductors often need a restraining hand in their manufacture of extravagant claims.

BRINGING SHAKESPEARE BACK.

The drama critic of the London Times has proposed a moratorium on Shakespeare. In making the motion, he realizes he is on the border-line of treason, but, even so, he stands by his guns. He is persuaded that a holiday from Shakespeare would be helpful for English-speaking peoples and that, ultimately, the poet himself would come into a happier estate.

This motion was prompted by the London experiment of presenting Shakespeare in Regent's Park. The play was "A Midsummer Night's Dream," exquisitely adapted to such a setting. Unusual economic advantages were enjoyed. There was no rent to pay. There were no fantastic salaries. The producer was, in effect, granted a subsidy. Yet the attendance was so meager that the receipts did not meet the expenses. A beautiful artistic effort was a commercial failure.

As the critic truly tells it, Shakespeare has been crammed down our throats. He is not, as he ought to be, a voluntary delight. He is a compulsion. He has been over-publicized, held up before our eyes as something we ought to do, ballyhooed, at last, into a bore. So a long, long rest from this genius who has been institutionalized and deified is the treatment prescribed.

How the proposal, so capably and honestly presented, will be received may await the result. Our own notion is that the moratorium is not the correct prescription. Why not prohibit him, under legal penalties of fine or imprisonment or both? Here in America we know, and the world knows, what we did to John Barleycorn. Legally we made him an Ishmael, factually we made him the life of the party. If by Act of Parliament the reading of Shakespeare were sternly enjoined, the presentation of a Shakespearian play rigidly proscribed, would not the bootlegger presently be rapping on the back doors of "the stately homes"? Would not young and old be surreptitiously devouring the "kickiest" poetry yet distilled? Would not an intrepid impresario ring up a curtain in some Forest of Arden to a packed amphitheater while officialdom nodded?

We do not pretend to answer the questions. As a desperate strategy, it commends itself. Any trick is worth trying that might popularize Shakespeare today and "tomorrow and tomorrow and tomorrow. . . ."

NO RETREAT IN THE DAKOTAS.

Many alarmist views about the drouth and the drouth country have been expressed, some of them by Government authorities who should have known better. The farmers of those regions have naturally become disturbed by reports that they were to be removed en masse from their homes and lands by Government ukase. The sturdy stock that inhabits that section has an unchangeable attachment to the soil, and a firm-jawed determination to hold the fort and see the fight through. To retreat now would be, in their eyes, recreancy to the land where their fathers and grandfathers had lived and prospered.

President Roosevelt, in his address at Bismarck, N. D., has done much to set at rest the fears of those who expected to be moved out bodily from their homesteads. The President assured his hearers that he had found a chins-up attitude that he had hoped to see; "that you are not looking forward to the time when this country would be depopulated, but that you and your children expect to remain here."

It is an indomitable spirit that these people are showing. Their enemies, drouth and erosion, cannot be whipped merely by stubbornly attempting to stand them off, however. The farmers' strategy must be adapted to that of their foe. There must be new methods of plowing and planting, new choice of crops, a different technique of land use. It is not an easy battle that these farmers of the Dakotas and other Mid-Western regions have chosen in preference to retreat. They may be expected to utilize the findings and the teachings of agricultural science to make their struggle a successful one.

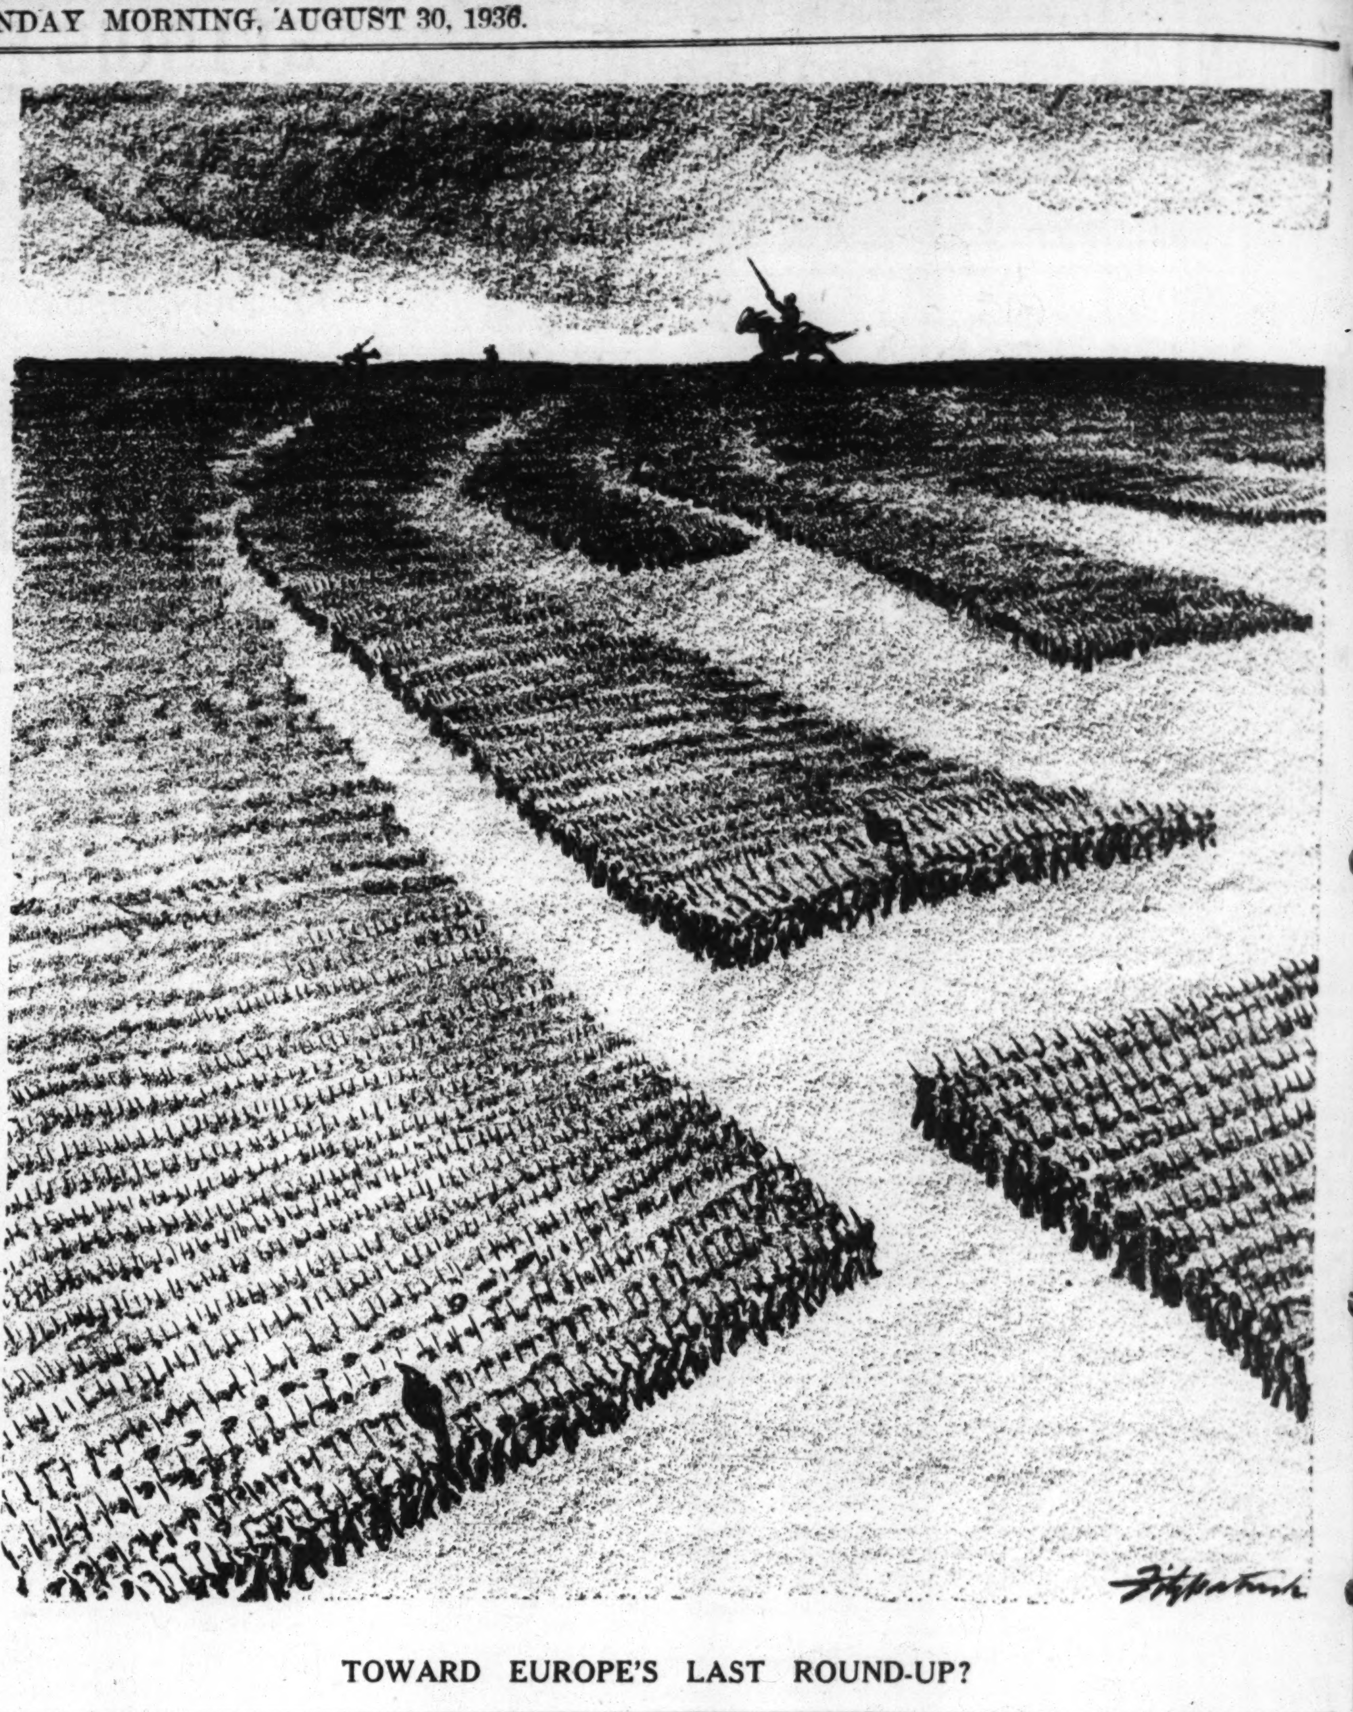
Anyhow, the thermometer has taken us back to the gay nineties.



TOWARD EUROPE'S LAST ROUND-UP?

Why Do Men Write Books?

Answer to question is sought by writer in various motives: to please others, to please the writer, to earn money; believes a man with literary faculty, if cast away for life on an island, still would write; all other reasons than delight in creation are secondary, but he reminds that both Shakespeare and Scott wrote to gain wealth.

Arthur Machen, British Essayist and Novelist, in the Modern Thinker.

WHY do men write books? Why do they paint pictures, make statues, build temples and cathedrals, compose music and delight in some bit of ornament which is not of the faintest practical use to anybody? It is a difficult question, and a question which involves us in the mysteries.

What are the ordinary incentives to the writing of imaginative literature in the world as we know it? The poet's last words—"England does not want my work"—would seem to imply that the object of making such literature is to please others; and that the failure to achieve this object is lamentable and tragic in the highest degree. Do we accept this account of the matter? Is it agreed that the art of literature is an art of pleasing, and nothing else, and that he who fails to please a considerable number of his fellow creatures has failed altogether?

Years ago, I remember, some friends were debating this question or something like it. The case was put, I think, of a man marooned on a desert island, certain that he would remain there till he died. Would such a man, granting him the literary faculty, and granting him, I suppose, pens and ink and paper—either obtained from the wreck, or home-made ingenious substitutes—would such a man write, knowing that whatever he wrote would never be seen by any eye but his own, to whatever length of days he might attain?

Some said Yes and some said No; and when pipes were knocked out for the night, the problem remained unsolved.

To the best of my recollection, I held that the ayes had it. I was for the poor fellow occupying himself eagerly with his parrot quills, his paper made out of the bark of the guru tree and ink obtained by the maceration of the root of a certain plant. And, on appeal of time, I hold that I was in the right.

Our Crusoe, be it remembered, has the literary faculty. That implies the desire of writing; and I say that he would most certainly write because he liked writing, quite apart from any imagined or possible fate that might or might not be supposed to be in store for the thing written. It is not necessary to convince our islander that, after his death, his work would be discovered and he be accepted by all the world as Shakespeare's equal; apart from any such conviction, he would write for the fun of writing.

Here, then, I believe, we have the true spring of imaginative literature: the delight of the creator in creation. Everything else is secondary; but that is not to say that nothing else matters. The creative impulse may be stifled by circumstance; if our desert islander had stayed in the city instead of going on that cruise, he might well have been too much occupied by affairs to think of expressing himself in the way of letters. And then, since Foker was quite right in telling Pendennis that every fellow liked a hand, there are men who are disheartened by persistent failure to win that hand of applause. This, I think, does not often befall the greatest.

Keats did not allow the hooligans of the reviews to distract him from his work; Byron wrote on in spite of a torrent of moral disapprobation; Shelley was unmoved by the heavy judgments of church and state against him, and meditated more deeply and serenely.

And then, there is the other extreme. So far as anything relating to Shakespeare is clear (and this is clearer than most of our surmises about him), it seems certain that the finest literature in the world was produced for the sake of money. It is certain that Shakespeare had no interest in the plays as works of art. He took no measures to collect them, to print them or to preserve them; he was evidently quite indifferent to present popularity or future fame.

Hamlet, Lear and Othello and the rest had done their work; they had enabled the son of the bankrupt dealer of Stratford-on-Avon to amass a comfortable little fortune, to turn himself into a gentleman with a coat of arms, and to settle down in his native place, there to found, as he hoped, the family of Shakespeare of Stratford-on-Avon. The devil might take the plays for all he cared; to him it was a matter of no consequence whether England wanted his work or didn't want it.

And then there was another very great man, not widely remote, we may think, either in gifts or in character from Shakespeare. Sir Walter Scott, as grim Carlyle declared, worked for nothing by money, wrote "impromptu novels to buy farms with," to swell wider and yet wider the demesne about Abbotsford, where Scott hoped to establish the border family of the Scotts of Abbotsford.

Again, the indictment has a deal of truth in it. If "Waverly" had been a total failure, even if it had won the applause of good judges but had not sold more than a few hundred copies, I think it is pretty certain that "Waverly" would have had no successor. Scott had no notion of the book for the book's sake; he would have thought such a theory pure nonsense. He had no artistic scruples of any sort.

When he had carried "The Heart of Midlothian"—one of the noblest tales ever written—to its legitimate conclusion, it was found that the copy made only three volumes. This, the Ballantynes, his printers and partners, pointed out, was commercially impossible; a three-volume novel wouldn't do at all. Without ado and without remonstrance, Scott wrote a fourth volume—and spoiled a great masterpiece.

I do not remember that Scott spoke much or at all of his fame or of the immortality of his work. The Waverly novels to him were a highly prosperous commercial undertaking; the new branch of the Scott clan, the Scotts of Abbotsford, would have abundance of "the ready" (as Scott called it) wherewith to keep up their state of border gentry.

And yet it would be false to say that the desire of money was the efficient cause of Shakespeare's plays or of Scott's novels. Both were written in pursuit of wealth, but they were written magnificently because the authors were men of the highest genius.

Hero in Homespun

From the Montreal Daily Star.

THANK heaven that Gov. Landon of Kansas has safely got through that inevitable visit to the old homestead in Pennsylvania, where he was born. He may now get to business.

Kissing babies was ever the lot of the noblest political thinkers on this continent, as long as they are candidates. But Gov. Landon went one better. He hugged his great-aunt—he hugged the hat right off her head, and she proudly claimed this as a unique distinction. That should win him the entire great-aunt vote of the United States.

Our neighbors cannot be divested of the sneaking suspicion that everybody born in a log cabin is a Lincoln in embryo. Therefore, in every campaign, if it is at all possible, the candidate must be reborn in the old log cabin—in this case, a small frame house at West Middlesex, Pa.

We have been taken to see the little American village, with its little church, its little red (always red) schoolhouse, and the old swimmin' hole where the Governor's great-aunt used to row while little Alfred fished for mud cats with a worm. The worm is most important, since it will get him the vote of every worm-dangler in the country, although it may lose him a few votes amongst the aristocrats and economic Tories who fish with a fly.

Our hero, in fact, has been presented in homespun. Surrounded by folksy folks from Kansas, he has made the Great American speech which all candidates have to make. Reading it carefully, one gathers that Mr. Landon is in favor of America—and Americanism. A very judicious stand upon the part of one who hopes that America is in favor of him.

Warming up, he has declared that the choice lies "between the pig-in-the-poke policies of the present administration and those American institutions under which we have enjoyed more liberty and attained a higher standard of living than any other people in the world." Splendidly said; even Hoover, who played it like a phonograph record, never said it better. That bit about pig-in-the-poke is especially good, since Mr. Landon is reversing the formula; with the hay-seeds firmly planted in his hair, he goes about poking the pig, thereby demonstrating that he is a safe and sound, plain American, in the best bucolic tradition.

This is great political stuff, perhaps. But one wonders when Mr. Landon will get down to details. He is a fine, sincere and able man. He has made a good record as Governor of Kansas. It remains to be seen whether he is of presidential size, or whether he would become a babe in the Washington woods, more tragic because more sincere than Harding.

It is time that he was allowed to go after Roosevelt in detail, and, most particularly, time that he declared in full what he is "going to do about it." Mr. Landon has a fighting chance—but it will require fighting.

ANOTHER FORM OF SUICIDE.

MOTOR COMMISSIONER CONNOR of Connecticut, after five months of work classifying motor accidents, finds that "there was an increase of 33 per cent in the number of intoxicated pedestrians killed during the first five months of this year as compared with the same period last year."

Another good slogan for America's booze fighters would be, "If you drink, don't walk; if you walk, don't drink"—unless you want to sprout wings!

MICHIGAN FACES MIXED SITUATION IN ITS PRIMARY

Couzens Crosses Party Lines to Support Roosevelt; Opponents Picture Him as Beaten.

FIGHT DEVELOPS AMONG DEMOCRATS

Murphy, Candidate for Governorship Nomination, Opposed by Ex-Republican Liberal.

(Copyright, 1936.)

DETROIT, Aug. 29.—The Michigan electorate will face a mixed situation in the primary election Sept. 15.

Senator James Couzens, Republican, seeking renomination, has announced his support of President Roosevelt.

On the Democratic side, Frank Murphy, High Commissioner of the Philippines and former Detroit Mayor, is fighting it out with George W. Welsh, ex-Republican liberal, former Lieutenant-Governor, for the gubernatorial nomination.

Murphy has the Roosevelt-Farley blessing in Michigan, just as Gov. Herbert H. Lehman has in New York. He is on temporary leave from the Philippines post.

Welsh's greatest strength lies among Republican independents and liberals, his Democratic allegiance dating back only to 1932. If Couzens independents sense that Couzens is giving up his Republican Senate candidacy, Welsh may be the beneficiary of whatever strength they swing to the Democratic primary.

Murphy-Welsh Fight.

The Murphy-Welsh fight is developing something of a feud. The former, with close friends in positions of WPA authority, and backed as well by Federal appointees as the Washington favorite, hasn't encountered the smooth sailing he expected. His stronghold is Detroit, where he once piled up a plurality of 86,000 in a non-partisan mayoralty election.

One source of his strength has been the Polish-American colony in Detroit, accountable for perhaps one-fifth of the city's votes. A complication has developed here, however, through the fact that Representatives George G. Sadowski and John Lesinski both are in the Welsh camp.

Former Gov. William A. Comstock, who took a brief walk from the Democratic fold in the spring in resentment over Washington interference, is back in camp as a Welsh supporter. Comstock withdrew from the recent Jefferson Democratic discussions here to avoid entanglements which might hurt Welsh.

Republican Primary.

In the Republican pirmary, Gov. Frank D. Fitzgerald is conceded renomination, and former Gov. Wilber M. Brucker now is regarded as having a chance to top the Couzens vote for the senatorial nomination. The Senator is continuing in the race officially, but even his supporters agree that his forthright Roosevelt espousal has damaged his cause.

Couzens' opponents charge that his declaration, just a few days after the State was flooded with campaign literature picturing him as a tower of Republican strength, was a recognition that the odds were against him. Fact-finding polls taken by friendly Democrats were reported to have shown him trailing Brucker in a 60-40 ratio.

The bolt was not unexpected and Republicans are congratulating themselves that it came before the primary. Had it been deferred, with the primary outcome close, the damage to Landon's cause might have been greater, they say.

Opinion is divided as to what strength Couzens may be able to bring to Roosevelt. His following is largely independent. He has scoffed at party conventions and held aloof from close association with recognized leaders.

Democrats hail the convert gleefully and say that he will take the stump for Roosevelt and if not renominated, for Representative Prentiss M. Brown, reputed favorite for the Democratic senatorial nomination.

Republican Viewpoint.

Republicans profess to be undismayed, claiming Couzens himself had discovered that most of his supporters slid out of the Republican camp to help make up the 1932 Democratic landslide. Those remaining are bound by closer ties to the party and to Landon than to Couzens, they assert.

Col. Frank Knox, vice-presidential nominee, a former Michigan man, is to be the honor guest of his alma college homecoming Labor day and will address a State-wide Republican rally. Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg of Grand Rapids, Couzens' junior Republican colleague, after a month's participation in the fight for Landon elsewhere, will pass the last 30 days in his home State in an attack on the New Deal.

Coughlinites, Townsendites and Share-the-Wealth groups are preparing to take command of the Farmer-Labor State convention in Owosso, Sept. 12, to force a place on the ballot forthe electors of Representative Lemke. Father Coughlin, Dr. Townsend and Lemke himself, all have been in the thick of the Michigan fight.

American Political Scene Through Eyes of a Briton

Requblicans to make the Court a leading issue in the campaign. Now, it is not so easy for them to demand thatthe Democrats shall announce what they are going to do about the Supreme Court."

A British PWA.

PWA has its British counterpart, Brogan says, since the European situation has set Britain to rearming, rapidly and heavily, for the next World War, as described by a Post-Dispatch correspondent in last Sunday's paper.

"Our depressed areas are getting the benefit of an industrial development which is as stimulating as TVA," he said, "but was not made to order for their benefit, or as a social experiment, in the manner of TVA. Our depressed areas are in the west and north, Wales and Scotland.

"In the Clydebank, the Government's naval program has stimulated the ship industry. Both in Scotland and elsewhere in the areas which have suffered most from the depression, big airplane construction industry is now in prospect. The Government is preparing to move airplane manufactories and hangars from their exposed position around London to the more distant places.

"Not long ago, when many were demanding a PWA for England, the Government argued that there was no point in spending money to create employment. Now, rather inconsistently, the Government is arguing in support of its policy of spending for armament, that it does create employment. There is no doubt that it does.

"The armor plate building has revived Sheffield. The London area, which has the luxury industries and prohibits the consumption goods, and Birmingham, which the motor industry has made the most prosperous place in England, did not need the stimulus so much.

"Another one of your campaign issues may come home to the English people soon—expenditures that take the country into debt. The Government hasn't announced that it will be going after defense loans in the next year or two, but there is no doubt that it will have to.

"There will be complaint. The dole, and high taxes for support of a permanent unemployed class which England is coming to take for granted, are accepted as a necessity; but the public is against taking on any new expensse, and only the necessity of defense can enable the Government to put such a policy in effect."

A Glance at TVA.

Brogan came to St. Louis from Chattanooga, Tenn., after a look at the TVA set-up. "Everyone likes to see something done for a depressed area," he commented, "but it is still too early to say whether the Government can put such an area on its feet by the methods being used in the Tennessee Valley.

"Our Labor party, with the support of Lloyd George and the Liberals, brought about an extensive housing program, a kind of PWA. They have built 2,000,000 houses in all parts of England, in all the cities and large towns, with subsidies, cheap loans or capital grants. Some of the cost is returnable, but the Government expects to take a loss. We do not imagine that cheap housing can be made self-supporting.

"Local government and schools have stood the depression with us rather better than with you. We have had no closed schools or unpaid teachers, and little failure of the finances of local administration."

From Topeka, after viewing Gov. Landon's homecoming, Brogan planned to go to Chicago, Cleveland and—of most interest in his present view—to Pittsburgh and the Pennsylvania industrial centers.

"I have been surprised to find, in the East, that John L. Lewis has given an impression of force and ability," he said. "If there is one thing in the present American situation that will interest British readers, it may very well be the changes in the labor organizations, and the prospect of a future labor movement in American politics. Also, the political situation in that state is considered crucial."

ANTI-NAZI CABINET FORMED IN RUMANIA

Two Iron Guard Sympathizers Left Out; Also Foreign Minister Titulescu.

By the Associated Press.

BUCHAREST, Rumania, Aug. 29.—Premier George Tatarescu formed a new government today from which were excluded Foreign Minister Nicolas Titulescu and two men who have been friendly to the militarized and Nazi-inclined Iron Guards.

No one sympathetic toward the Iron Guards will be included in the Cabinet, said Tatarescu, who formed the new government with King Carol's approval shortly after the old Cabinet had resigned today.

The decision to drop Titulescu from the Cabinet, the Premier disclosed, was reached after a long conference with King Carol. The former Foreign Minister is reported to be in France, prevented by illness from returning to face the internal crisis caused by Nazi opposition to the government.

Titulescu, the Premier said, would be supplanted by Victor Antonescu, regarded politically as a friend of France. Despite the Cabinet changes, observers saw little indication that foreign policies would be changed, although Russian and Rumanian friendliness may not be so close as under the Titulescu regime.

While no official explanation of the Cabinet resignation was given, it was believed that terrorist opposition to the government was responsible. Unverified reports had placed Titulescu's name on an Iron Guard list of public figures to be killed.

NO PRESIDENTIAL ELECTORS' NAMES TO APPEAR ON BALLOT

Only Those of Candidates; New Law Designed to Avoid Confusion.

In conformity with a new section of the Missouri election laws, enacted since the 1932 presidential election, the ballots handed voters at the election Nov. 3 will not contain the names of the presidential electors of each party, but merely the names of the candidates for President and Vice-President.

Heretofore the names of the electors, one from each congressional district, have appeared on the ballots, and there has been some confusion among the voters as to whether to vote for or against individual electors. The law now provides that the names of the electors shall be certified by each party to the Secretary of State and a vote cast for the presidential and vice-presidential nominees of a party shall count as a vote for all the electors of that party.

The ballots, of course, will carry the names of all candidates for state and local offices, as in past elections.

WPA MUSICIANS HEARD BY 20,000,000 IN 6 MONTHS

15,000 Employed, Besides 1600 Teachers and 600 Composers, Director Sokoloff Announces.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29.—Works Progress Administration officials today said 20,000,000 persons listened to its music programs during the first six months of this year.

Dr. Nikolai Sokoloff, director of the Federal music project, said 15,000 musicians had WPA jobs. In addition, 1600 music teachers provided free lessons to prospective artists and 600 composers were reported to be employed.

WPA had 141 symphony and concert orchestras, including three in New York and two in Boston, he said. There were 81 dance, theater and novelty orchestras under the music project during the first six months of the year, in addition to singing and teaching activities.

Labor and Hearst In Another Battle

ago. In all of them labor maintained its policy of "not going through a picket line established by labor," and in most of them it gained concessions.

At the present time, besides the newspaper strike a furniture workers' strike is in progress, forcing the closing of five Seattle plants employing 4000 workers and four plants in Tacoma. Plants here have been closed since last Monday.

The fundamental issue involved is recognition of the Furniture Workers' Union, the Northwestern Furniture Manufacturers' Association declining to enter into any negotiations which might lead to a "closed shop." Union leaders assert they only desire employers to "permit our shop committees to urge nonunion members to become members of the union."

The writer was informed by the industrial division of the Chamber of Commerce that "demands" for union recognition had beeen made on wholesale drug houses, hardware concerns, auto accessory establishments, plumbing supply houses, wholesale grocers and others.

Agreement Expires Sept. 30.

The anti-labor forces are further concerned because the Federal arbitration plan which terminated the water-front strike expires Sept. 30. Certain differences between water-front operators and workers have developed, it is conceded, which may lead to difficulties at that time.

Nor have all of the other strikes been settled amicably. Negotiations for a permanent settlement are still in progress as a result of the Fisher flour mills strike last fall. A few months ago 33 repair plants operated by automobile dealers were closed for three weks in a fight for union recognition. In at least two instances union agreements were signed. In other cases the union gained a foothold.

A strike last year of the needle trade workers resulted in a victory for the employers but organizers are said to be in the field again. There was a short but bitter strike along produce row last winter, in which Beck and his teamsters figured, and numerous minor strikes rounded out Seattle's turbulent labor picture.

Beck, the local point of the general labor struggle, has filed a $250,000 libel suit against the Seattle Daily Times, which is supporting Hearst, for an editorial attributing the strike to him and terming him a racketeer. He is regarded as the dominant labor leader and one of the key political forces in this area.

Beck, who induced the executive board of the State Federation of Labor to call a conference of crafts employed by the Post-Intelligencer to work for a conference with the management to avert a strike, told the writer he took no active part in promoting the strike. He conceded, however, that his organization's control of the Central Trades Council which placed the paper on the "unfair list," and said his men would furnish moral and financial aid to the strikers.

The action of the council has resulted in a protest to William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, who sent an investigator to prepare a written report.

How Leader Handles Unions.

Beck, whose 6000 teamsters virtually dominate the 30,000 members of organized labor in this section, is an interesting type of labor leader. Well groomed, suave when occasion requires, he directs his varied organizations along the lines of big business.

"I subscribe to what I term the Samuel Gompers theory," Beck said, "and that is, that industry must make a legitimate profit to pay labor. You cannot get anything out of an empty barrel."

The labor leader, who was an overseas aviator during the World War and was instrumental in the election of Mayor Dore, conceded he promoted the standardization of laundry price lists but "only for the computation of drivers' commissions."

As for general price-fixing allegations laid at his door he insisted his books and methods were open to inspection at all times. He laughingly denied an account given by one of his associates to the writer which purported to relate how he protected "home industries" by refusing to haul merchandise for dealers who stocked a certain out-of-town soft drink at cut rates.

Beck made no secret, however, of his opposition to the Industrial Council of Washington—the capitalist employers' organization. His opposition to Hearst, he said, was based on the belief that the Post-Intelligencer actively supported the council, as well as to what he deems Hearst's opposition to organized labor in general.

"The issue is now clearly drawn," Beck said, "and for the first time in the history of this city the Hearst attack has given solidarity to the entire labor movement—with the conservatives in complete charge."

It may be mentioned here that while his organization did not picket during the water front strike, his teamsters adhered to labor's policy of refusing to go through a picket line. So well established has this policy become in this area that on one occasion, the writer was informed, a radio operator conducted a one-man strike for increased compensation acting as his own picket, and water front workers refused to go to work past him.

Hearst Counsel Stands Pat.

A fundamental issue of the strike of the Post-Intelligencer editorial employes is similar to that created in San Francisco and Milwaukee when members of the American Newspaper Guild were discharged by Hearst.

The Guild is seeking recognition of its union as a collective bargaining agency and in the present instance, reinstatement of two employes, a photographer and a dramatic critic. It charges they were dismissed because of Guild activities. The management ascribes their dismissal to "good and sufficient reasons."

Harvey J. Kelly, general labor counsel for the Hearst newspapers and former chairman of a special standing committee of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, defined the position of the management for the writer.

"We will not violate the right to hire and fire people who gather and edit news and write editorials," he declared. "There can be no recognition direct or indirect of the American Newspaper Guild. Its enunciated policies and its leadership are the reasons for that."

Kelly, who recalled that Hearst announced at Rome, Italy, where he is visiting, that the plant here would be closed indefinitely "may be permanently" rather than recognize the Guild, said there would be "no compromise with mob counsel" and that the management would continue to refuse to arbitrate.

While the Hearst management here officially disclaims guild membership as the reason for the discharge of the two employes, both of whom had been with the paper for years, no attempt is made to conceal that certain executives discouraged the formation of the guild and made it clear that membership would preclude any opportunity for advancement.

Guild Leaders Startled.

The Guild, through Richard Seller, president of the Seattle chapter and of the Post-Intelligencer unit, and Jonathan Eddy, its national secretary, has offered to arbitrate all points. It is publishing its own paper, the Guild Daily, now the only morning paper in the city—four pages with an increasing number of advertisements. It contains news of the strike and some general local stories and sports news. It claims a membership of 43 of 68 eligible employes while the management of the newspaper places the figure at 26, asserts that most of the higher paid men have remained "loyal."

The Hearst organization occupies an entire floor at a downtown hotel here, staffed partly with news writers and other employes from other cities. Some of them are preparing daily radio broadcasts attacking the strikers.

Even the most ardent Guild members are frankly amazed—and somewhat dismayed—at the turn events have taken. They had no conception that their organization, which in its embryo stage here was called "the Sunday afternoon social club" would ever furnish the spark which allied the forces of organized labor against Hearst and employers here generally.

Their dismay, if it be such, is due to the demand by Mayor Dore and some others that "Hearst must be driven out of this community." The declaration, repeated at a mass meeting called by the Guild, and attended by several thousands, drew from Eddy the reminder that "remember, we want our jobs back."

The dismissed employes are Frank Lynch, a photographer with the paper for 15 years and head photographer shortly before his dismissal last June, and Everhardt Armstrong, music and dramatic critic for 17 years, who was discharged last month.

Other Unions Stepped In.

A long series of representations to the local publishers followed, ending in no practical result when the management declined to discuss reinstating the men. But after the Guild obtained a charter from the American Federation of Labor, older heads in trade unions began to counsel with the comparative novices.

Beck, who has aided the Guild as has been told, pointed out that it was necessary to see that "new organizations do not fall into the hands of theorists or radicals, and that they must be guided along the right path."

During the attempts to effect a settlement, an advisory committee waited on the local publisher, W. V. Tanner, and the Guild members obtained the co-operation of Charles Doyle, secretary of the Central Labor Council; Edward Weston, head of the Metal Trades Council, and others.

The Central Labor Council indorsed the newspaper men's organization, and chose an advisory committee to aid it, the committee including operating engineers, laundry and dye workers, automobile mechanics and the publisher of a weekly labor paper.

It suggested several letters, finally called on Tanner and brought about a conference with members of the Guild, including two members on the staff of the Seattle Star. The only other paper here, the Times, has no guild chapter.

Subsequently, the Seattle chapter of the guild put the Post-Intelligencer on the "unfair list" and voted its Executive Committee power to call a strike if all other attempts at an amicable settlement failed. The Central Labor Council placed the paper on the unfair list Aug. 12 and the strike began the next day.

Pickets from Water Front.

Within two hours about 250 pickets surrounded the building, most of them hastening from the water front. It must not be supposed that this was an accident, although the subsequent rallying of labor surprised even labor leaders.

Members of the guild had been assured prior to the strike by J. W. Engstrom, secretary-treasurer of the Washington District Council No. 1 of the Maritime Federation of the Pacific Coast that ample pickets would be on hand in event of a strike.

"Sure, I personally guaranteed the pickets to Seller," Engstrom told the writer. "We were only too glad to get a crack at Hearst, besides aiding a labor organization in its legitimate right to collective bargaining."

Engstrom, whose rude offices contrasted with Beck's luxurious suite, asserted that his organizations deemed Hearst "more dangerous than the Industrial Council."

Maintaining that the Hearst labor news was distorted, especially during the big 1934 water-front strike, he said: "Make no mistake about it—we want freedom of the press. All we ask is that facts appear in the news columns. The publisher may express any policy he desires in the editorial columns. But the news columns should be unbiased."

Engstrom, who as business manager of the Pacific Coast Marine Firemen's, Oilers' Watertenders' and Wipers' Association is one of the left wing leaders in the Seattle labor movement asserted his organization would maintain picket lines "regardless of what the others do."

Membership of the allied maritime organizations here, he estimated at 7000 including 1500 longshoremen. Some of the others including 1600 sailors, 800 firemen and as many cooks and stewards, are often at sea.

Feeling About Hearst.

To the impartial observer there is no doubt that the general feeling against Hearst in this community is sincere, some of it actuated by his support of Landon, while the predominant sentiment here is for the New Deal.

Labor's opposition to Hearst policies has been made plain but even some of the business leaders who have enlisted in the bitter war against organized labor have told the writer privately that their outward support of the publisher in this strike is due to the feeling that "it might be our turn next" rather than an indorsement of his policies.

The so-called "liberal class," including many college professors, are affronted because of his crusade against Communism. Certain labor leaders, accuse him of branding as Reds any labor leaders who oppose him. The rank and file of teachers oppose him because of his stand in favor of requiring them to take the oath of allegiance. And there are those who miss the rock-ribbed conservative nature of the Post-Intelligencer for about 45 years before it was absorbed into the Hearst chain.

Guild Members Issue Paper.

In the meantime, the active Guild members have organized their daily paper on an efficent basis, are distributing it at newsstands throughout the city—also unionized. It would be fair to say that have popular support and that the determined fight of the business interests is not against the Guild but the potentialities of organized labor in general.

Efforts of the newly formed Law and Order League which has pledged itself "to work for the suppression of racketeering of every kind and type now rampant in the City of Seattle" and is campaigning among the "white collar" class, previously mentioned, for 25,000 members is met with a campaign by the Guild. The Guild is forming an open committee "of public-spirited citizens for the purpose of defending the constitutional rights of the Post-Intelligencer strikers and all other union men against attempts being made by William Randolph Hearst and the Industrial Council of Washington to crush unionism."

"The right of working men and women to organize is at stake," it states in the call for organization.

The writer visited the now quiet picket line on several occasions, observed pickets bearing placards ranging from the boilermakers' union to the ferryboat men. The ferryboat workers, incidentally, are necessary to transport the newsprint required for the continued operation of the Post-Intelligencer plant.

The pickets are captained by a member of the Guild, sometimes by a Guild member from the Star chapter, who goes on the picket line after finishing his duties with his paper. Picket headquarters are established in a room bordering an alley near the plant, where hot coffee and sandwiches are on tap. Reserve pickets are on duty there also—with scouts prepared to obtain additional pickets should an attempt be made to operate.

The usual tactics of the radical organizations—to jump in after a strike has been declared and "support" it—have been manifested here, including an indorsement by the Communist party. Attacks on Communism, so far as the Guild itself is concerned, however are met with the reply that Lynch, the discharged photographer, is a disabled World War veteran while Armstrong the dramatic critic was a Captain of infantry overseas.

Nazis Tighten Hold on Danzig By Terrorism

did nothing but make trouble and Herr Greiser's outburst at Geneva on July 4.

Officials Forced to Join.

On July 7 Herr Greiser returned to Danzig and privately agreed with his colleagues that the independence of the judges must promptly be stopped, and a few days later all officials were told they must join the Nazi party forthwith. The Opposition press had meanwhile been swept aside by a five months' ban, with the one exception of the Catholic "Volkszeitung," which, politically emasculated, was allowed to continue, probably owing to Catholic intervention from Poland.

The Statute of Danzig guarantees privileges to Poland and constitutional rights to the citizens of Danzig; the Poles are aware that it is part of the whole system by which the Corridor is theirs. But though they know perfectly well what is happening in Danzig, they are afraid to quarrel with Germany about it. It seems that they will agree to look on while Herr Greiser, with the new decrees of July 18, pursues a "perfectly legal" course in Danzig, very much as Herr Hitler did in Germany in 1933. No doubt in time the Nazis of Danzig will similarly procure the votes they failed to obtain last year. And if they are lucky the "decent Germans" of the old Hanse city will be dead rather than slaves.

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH

ST. LOUIS, SUNDAY MORNING, AUGUST 30, 1936.

Opera's Course Changed By Season Now Ending

Next Year to Find Park Theater With Own Productions Manager, Richard Berger, and Repertory of Former Light Opera Successes.

THE last "Glamorous Night" of Municipal Opera's 1936 season will be figured in with the totals late this evening and the directors of the park theater will set about drafting plans for the next and nineteenth year.

Two major developments have come as unexpected results of the last 12 weeks of musical entertainment. One forecasts the renaissance next season of traditional light opera pieces; the other is a change in administration whereby Richard Berger, Laurence Schwab's assistant at Municipal Opera for the past two seasons, will become "productions manager."

Berger's appointment, announced yesterday, follows the signing of a Hollywood production contract by Schwab which will keep him busy there. Under the new arrangement Berger will be under the supervision of the opera's executive committee, and production will be an entirely St. Louis affair, along lines of the opera's own experience. Municipal Opera will maintain an office in New York during the winter, with Berger in charge, and from that point will make its own deals for casts and musical properties. Co-operation on the Hollywood end has been promised by Schwab, whose work with musicals for Twentieth Century-Fox will put him in an excellent position to spot promising talent.

Response to "The Bohemian Girl," "The Merry Widow" and "The Red Mill" have made it virtually certain that Municipal Opera will pick its revivals for next season from the shows of away back, that is, from among "Robin Hood," "Chimes of Normandy," "The Firefly," "Babes in Toyland," "Fra Diavolo" and those others it played in its first few seasons. Probably nine of 10 shows may be of that character, with the remaining places in the opera filled by "American premieres" of light opera from abroad. The success of "Glamorous Night," playing to capacity houses during the past week, would guarantee the latter choices.

The final week is expected to put the opera for 1936 a little over on the black side financially, and attendance, if things go well tonight, will likely exceed the record of 713,815 persons for 82 performances in 1933. The current season already holds the record for nights without rain, having gone a full 12 weeks last Thursday.

THE major disappointments, both artistically and financially, came from shows such as "Oh, Boy!", "Sons o' Guns", "A Connecticut Yankee", and "Kid Boots", so-called "personality" shows in which principals failed to measure up to promise or the shows themselves proved too slight for Municipal Opera. Their failure marks the end, for the time being, of musical comedy in the park.

Shows like "The Three Musketeers", "The New Moon" and "Bitter Sweet", produced in the best style, had been seen too recently to attract large houses. The opera consequently will stay off shows of that type, for next season at least.

Between now and next June, the opera board will select a repertory to go with the principals it can hire, giving no consideration to a show if the leading roles cannot be filled with some assurance of a happy outcome. Since a large number of its shows are expected to be of a standard light opera type, certain principals will appear more often during the season. This does not mean that there will be a return of the stock company system, however, as casting will continue to be for the individual shows.

The requirement naturally will be for singers more than musical comedy stars, although the opera will take into account the modern trend for svelte prima donnas and handsome leading men, even in grand opera. So-called "name" players are not demanded by Municipol Opera audiences, it has been discovered, and unknowns who can deliver the goods are highly regarded. The opera, therefore, will have a chance to develop some of its own stars.

The practice of introducing dancers, comedians and various vaudeville entertainers in specialty numbers is likely to continue. And in digging up the successes of the long past, books will be brought up to date. One idea suggested is the employment of recognized writers for that very purpose.

OUTDOOR entertainment is gaining a new popularity over the country, a trend that cannot help making Municipal Opera's path easier, since it will attract artists, producers and writers to the field.

Even New York, where Schwab's "May Wine" was the only "book" musical during the entire year, has taken heartily to outdoor operettas as presented by the Shuberts and Fortune Gallo at Jones Beach, on Long Island, and at Randall's Island, in the East River.

Staging, lighting and many house devices follow practices which the Shuberts picked up in St. Louis. At Jones Beach, the audience sees the operettas across a lagoon in which boats carry out a carnival effect during intermissions. At Randall's Island, under the shadow of the new Tri-Borough Bridge, voices and orchestra compete with nearby railroad trains and grunts of river tugs, but the New Yorkers are all for it.

Condemned Queen Gets a New Hearing

"Mary of Scotland" Only a Lady Who Loved and Lost, at Ambassador

By Colvin McPherson.

THE matter of "Mary of Scotland" tends to become more unsettled as the years go on. "Some," says one of her recent biographers, Stefan Zweig, "regard her as a murderess, others as a martyr; some as an intriguer, others as a saint." It has been Maxwell Anderson's poetic privilege to present her, in the drama now on the Ambassador screen, as a Queen who fell victim to a love greater than a throne. Katharine Hepburn fits into this portrait very well, even better, it seems to me, than did Helen Hayes. Her greater stature gives her more royal dignity, she has more spirit and she holds off her tears longer against the same run of hard luck. Generally, the film production is one of great beauty and impressiveness. Under the experienced direction of John Ford, "Mary of Scotland" would necessarily be highly artistic. In the underlighting, especially of the last scene; in the musical score, with its climatic effects and its lapses into obscurity, in the use of the same songbird who carolled "Rose of Tralee" in "The Informer," Ford's technique would be recognized. Again and again "Mary of Scotland" is vigorous, poetic, filled with mist and fire. Separate scenes represent photographic composition at their best. At times, to be sure, both poetry—figuratively speaking, since Anderson's blank verse has been translated into prose for the screen—and photography run wild. The trial scene, with its symbolic exaggerations, is grotesque, and so is the climb up the scaffold, by a stair resembling an approach to the Great Pyramid. Especially since Mary had her head banged off in an inner room, and a few feet from the floor at the most. Quarrel would not be made, however, at the taking of poetic or dramatic license, if unquestionably fine use were made of it. Yet the purposes of "Mary of Scotland" are not always clear, its compass not always pointing the same way. Perhaps a better editing would have tightened it up dramatically. Certainly the absurd appearances of the sentries, to shout from the castle walls before any dark nocturnal deed, are not good editing. "Mary of Scotland" will misinform a great many who do not have occasion to investigate the Stuart monarch's record further. For Mary, as everyone ought to know, did not go to the executioner in youth and beauty but at the age of 45, hobbling with rheumatism and wearing a wig to conceal her grizzled head. A few other departures from fact may be listed. She did not meet her Great Love, Bothwell, until she had gone daffy about her cousin, Darnley, and married him. Bothwell was not overfond of her but was hornswoggled into the royal favor by aid of his own ambitions. Mary and Elizabeth never met for that dramatic last scene, as far as we know, and Mary was not badly housed in England, but kept in royal style. So much for the facts. The Elizabeth that we see in the screen's "Mary of Scotland" is a smirking creature who never changes her mood. Florence Eldridge, in private life Mrs. Fredric March, plays the part. March himself is Bothwell, holding the fief for a dozen reels or so and giving it up in a frightful stretch of scenery-biting. Douglas Walton as Darnley is another given to extra dramatics. Back of the three-foot beard of John Knox is Moroni Olsen, but such a perfect old rabble-rouser that he might not be recognized. John Carradine as Rizzio continues his sure career on the screen. The nobles of Scotia are well-cast from Hollywood's character players and the English court is strengthened with the presence of proper Englishmen.

The Last of the Mohicans.

MY INTRODUCTION to motion pictures was, if I remember correctly, at a street fair, where "The Mad Maid of the Forest" was being exhibited to the curious. But it cannot have been much later that a traveling tent show with a jumpy projector and some battered reels came to town, and on a vacant lot east of the blacksmith shop, gave us a lot of excitement, with Indians and settlers fighting to the finish. Neither Cecil B. DeMille's gigantic siege in "The Crusades" nor the Warner Brothers' machine-gun battle in "G-Men" ever have afforded this ardent movie-goer such satisfaction. So I think many will agree with me in finding "The Last of the Mohicans" something like the old days. My, my, it's been ages since the redskins rounded up some whites and burned them at the stake. Of course, that is what "The Last of the Mohicans" is about, at least for purposes of Loew's. Mr. J. F. Cooper's famous novel, to be had at the public library, gives a much longer and somewhat more ethnological account. It is the time of the French and Indian war, the British are trying to hold Fort William Henry and Randolph ("Hawk-Eye") Scott is in charge of the Colonel's daughters. Led by Bruce ("Magua") Cabot, the braves cause all sorts of trouble, burning down settlers' cabins and scalping the victims. It's good to see such things again. And there's at least reminiscence when Cora leaps off a cliff in "The Birth of a Nation" manner and she and the dying Uncas clasp hands as did the sweethearts in another D. W. Griffith opus, "Drums of Love." There's paddling down the rapids in canoes, tricks of woodcraft, rare fighting in the fort and bloody work with the tomahawk, all in all quite an outing.

Some modern savages are after the scalps of a pair of newspaper people in "Women Are Trouble." And for burning at stake, murder near the elevated is about to be substituted when help arrives. You takes your choice, of course, but give me the lovely past.

Sing, Baby, Sing.

ANY similarity of the events in "Sing, Baby, Sing," at the Fox, to real life is just a happen-so, we are told by a foreword. We would be most naughty if we presumed, for instance, that some studio writer was inspired by John Barrymore's game of "Chase Me," with Miss Elaine Barrie. The hero of "Sing, Baby, Sing," is a different type of fellow. He's a Hollywood actor who has done a great deal of Shakespeare, who wears long points on his collars, and who cannot keep still when alcohol prompts him to open up with selections from the bard. Little Alice Faye, whose face I am used to now, after a real struggle, plays a night club entertainer who cashes in on her chance acquaintance with Mr. Menjou. In order to get a radio contract, she and her agent, Gregory Ratoff, pursue Mr. Menjou to Cleveland, to Chicago and Kansas City. Enlivening the many situations is Menjou himself, perfect as he peers through bars at the bottom of a bed or out a Pullman window, Ratoff, Patsy Kelly, with her Donald Duck disposition, and the Three Ritz Brothers, a vaudeville team making a furiously funny screen debut. It's an amusing show and bound to bring on a pleasant mood. A ball and chain is attached as the second part of the program. Called "Stepping Out" now instead of "Jailbreak," it's about murderers in the penitentiary. Home talent play, you might say.

Summer Brings on Riots In Movie Make-Believe

Visitor to Studio Street Finds French at It Again With Sticks, Stones and Rubber Swords — How It Feels to Be Clubbed.

By H. H. Niemeyer.

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 29.

WITHOUT casting any reflections on statements by the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce to the contrary, we have had some pretty warm weather out here lately. Not regular St. Louis weather, you know, but then warm enough to make indulging in riots more than ordinarily unpleasant. Still when the movie customers seem to demand a riot they have to get one, no matter how high the thermometer climbs. So we have just come through a made-to-order one rather actively. Not a Spanish riot nor even a Seattle newspaper one but a pretty genuine, blown-in-the-bottle French affair. At least it was staged on a French street. True, the French boulevard was built, for the purpose, on the Warner studio lot for a scene in the newest Kay Francis picture, "Stolen Holiday." True, also, right around the corner were other less romantic streets, but the French section looked pretty good and true to form. Any overseas tourist would recognize it in a minute.

The rioters themselves ate an early lunch. There were so many of them that it was thought best to get them out of the studio cafe before the regular actors began to flock in and demand tables. It so happened that this was a mistake. Rioters just can't riot properly on a full stomach and the feeding delayed things a full hour.

Neither Miss Francis nor Ian Hunter, the stars of the production, took part in the battle. Nor did Claude Rains, the more or less innocent cause of it all. The riot was between extras dressed as French police and extras dressed as French citizens and both were armed—the police with rubber swords and the citizens with balsa wood clubs and papier-mache rocks and bricks. None of these is exactly harmless in the hands of a determined extra, anxious to make a showing for the director, but all are supposed to keep death and mayhem down to a minimum.

Accompanied by a young man named Williams, who suggests subjects for fan magazine interviews and who, therefore, had no business attending back lot riots, we arrived on the scene of battle just as Assistant Director Easton was ordering the affair to begin.

Mounted policemen trotted smartly toward the high iron gates, back of which the cameras were grouped to record the scene. As they advanced they waved their rubber swords and smacked them smartly against the heads and shoulders of the milling citizens below them. The "citizens" in turn, waved their clubs and hurled their pseudo-rocks and shouted and made faces. Your observer, a victim of an overwhelming curiosity in other such scenes, profited by his experiences and found a well-protected place just behind the director to watch the fun.

THE big gates were forced slowly open and a few of the rioters entered the little courtyard and took up the battle directly before the camera. One wild-eyed and bushy-haired individual took the center of this impromptu stage and waged a one-man civil war against two uniformed gendarmes.

"Sock him!" urged Easton, dispassionately.

The gendarme socked and the bushy-head snapped back as its owner was catapulted across the court. He fell heavily, lay still a moment, then struggled to his knees, grabbing at a loose brick as he got up. He hurled this in the general direction of the cameras and your observer, but high enough to miss all, and dove head first again at the legs of the policeman.

Meanwhile, outside the gate, the rubber swords and balsa wood clubs were beating a merry tattoo on skulls and backs, until Easton held one hand aloft and blew a shrill whistle.

"Rest a minute," he advised. "There's no pep to it. That's what we get for eating lunch first. We'll have to do it again, and we'll keep doing it until it's right."

"Ever get hit by a balsa wood club?" a studio property man asked, by way of conversation, while the extras waited.

Your riot observer admitted he had not, but recalled that he had felt the full force of a papier-mache brick.

"Well," suggested the prop man, "let me tap you with one, will you?"

Thus challenged, your observer agreed that a light tap, an experimental tap, might be arranged, just by way of adding to the realism of the battle for him. But the whistle blew before the experiment could be completed and the riot started over again.

This time even the director didn't complain about the lack of action. Your observer and others watched interestedly from their haven behind the director, while a Mr. Dean—he of the Hottentot top—took another beating, while men and women and horses milled about in the streets of Paris, while rocks and bricks whistled through the air and clubs and swords fell impartially on all heads.

It was then that the prop man whom your observer had once mentioned in an uncomplimentary manner, completed the unfinished experiment. He came up from behind, a balsa stick in his hand, and whacked your observer gently on the head.

Back in his own quarters, which he never should have left, and to which he had been returned by the ever-faithful Williams, your correspondent set about putting down his impressions of the riot. There is a smallish lump on his head and a dull ache in the back of his neck and determination in his mind that the prop man on the "Stolen Holiday" set shall never again be mentioned in these columns.

AND outside the riot zone—Murray Smith, former stage actor who has spent the last two or three years in St. Louis as an entertainer with hotel floor shows and as a concert pianist under the name of Mario Silva, has gone the way of all stage flesh and has come to Hollywood. As Mario Silva, he entertained a crowd of newspaper correspondents and press agents the other night at a party given by the Spancs, a name coined from Society of Press Agents and Newspaper Correspondents for the organization which has succeeded the defunct Wampas Club. Silva scored an immediate hit on that occasion and expects to get a crack at the movies before long. His first appearance in St. Louis was made seven or eight years ago, when he played the song writer in George Kaufman's comedy, "June Moon" at the Shubert Theater. At that time he was programmed under his right name of Murray Smith. He had been a real song writer and composer in New York when Kaufman picked him up and convinced him that he was an actor.

Eleanor Powell and Greta Garbo both practice dance steps daily in adjoining halls on the M-G-M lot. But they've never met and probably never will. . . . Frankie Bailey, known in the Gay Nineties as "the girl with the million-dollar legs," which never got her very far in the films, is "coming back" in a Hollywood stage revival of "The Black Crook" . . . A settlement has been made which frees Robert Donat from his Warner contract so the English star can come to this country and make two pictures for an independent producer. The first will be "The Son of Monte Cristo."

Garrick Theater To Reopen Sept. 11

The Garrick Theater, which went dark during the cold spell of last January and February, will return to burlesque shows on Friday, Sept. 11, with a unit called the "Vaniteasers." A new operation plan has been developed, the local house being included with 34 others in the Independent Burlesque Association.

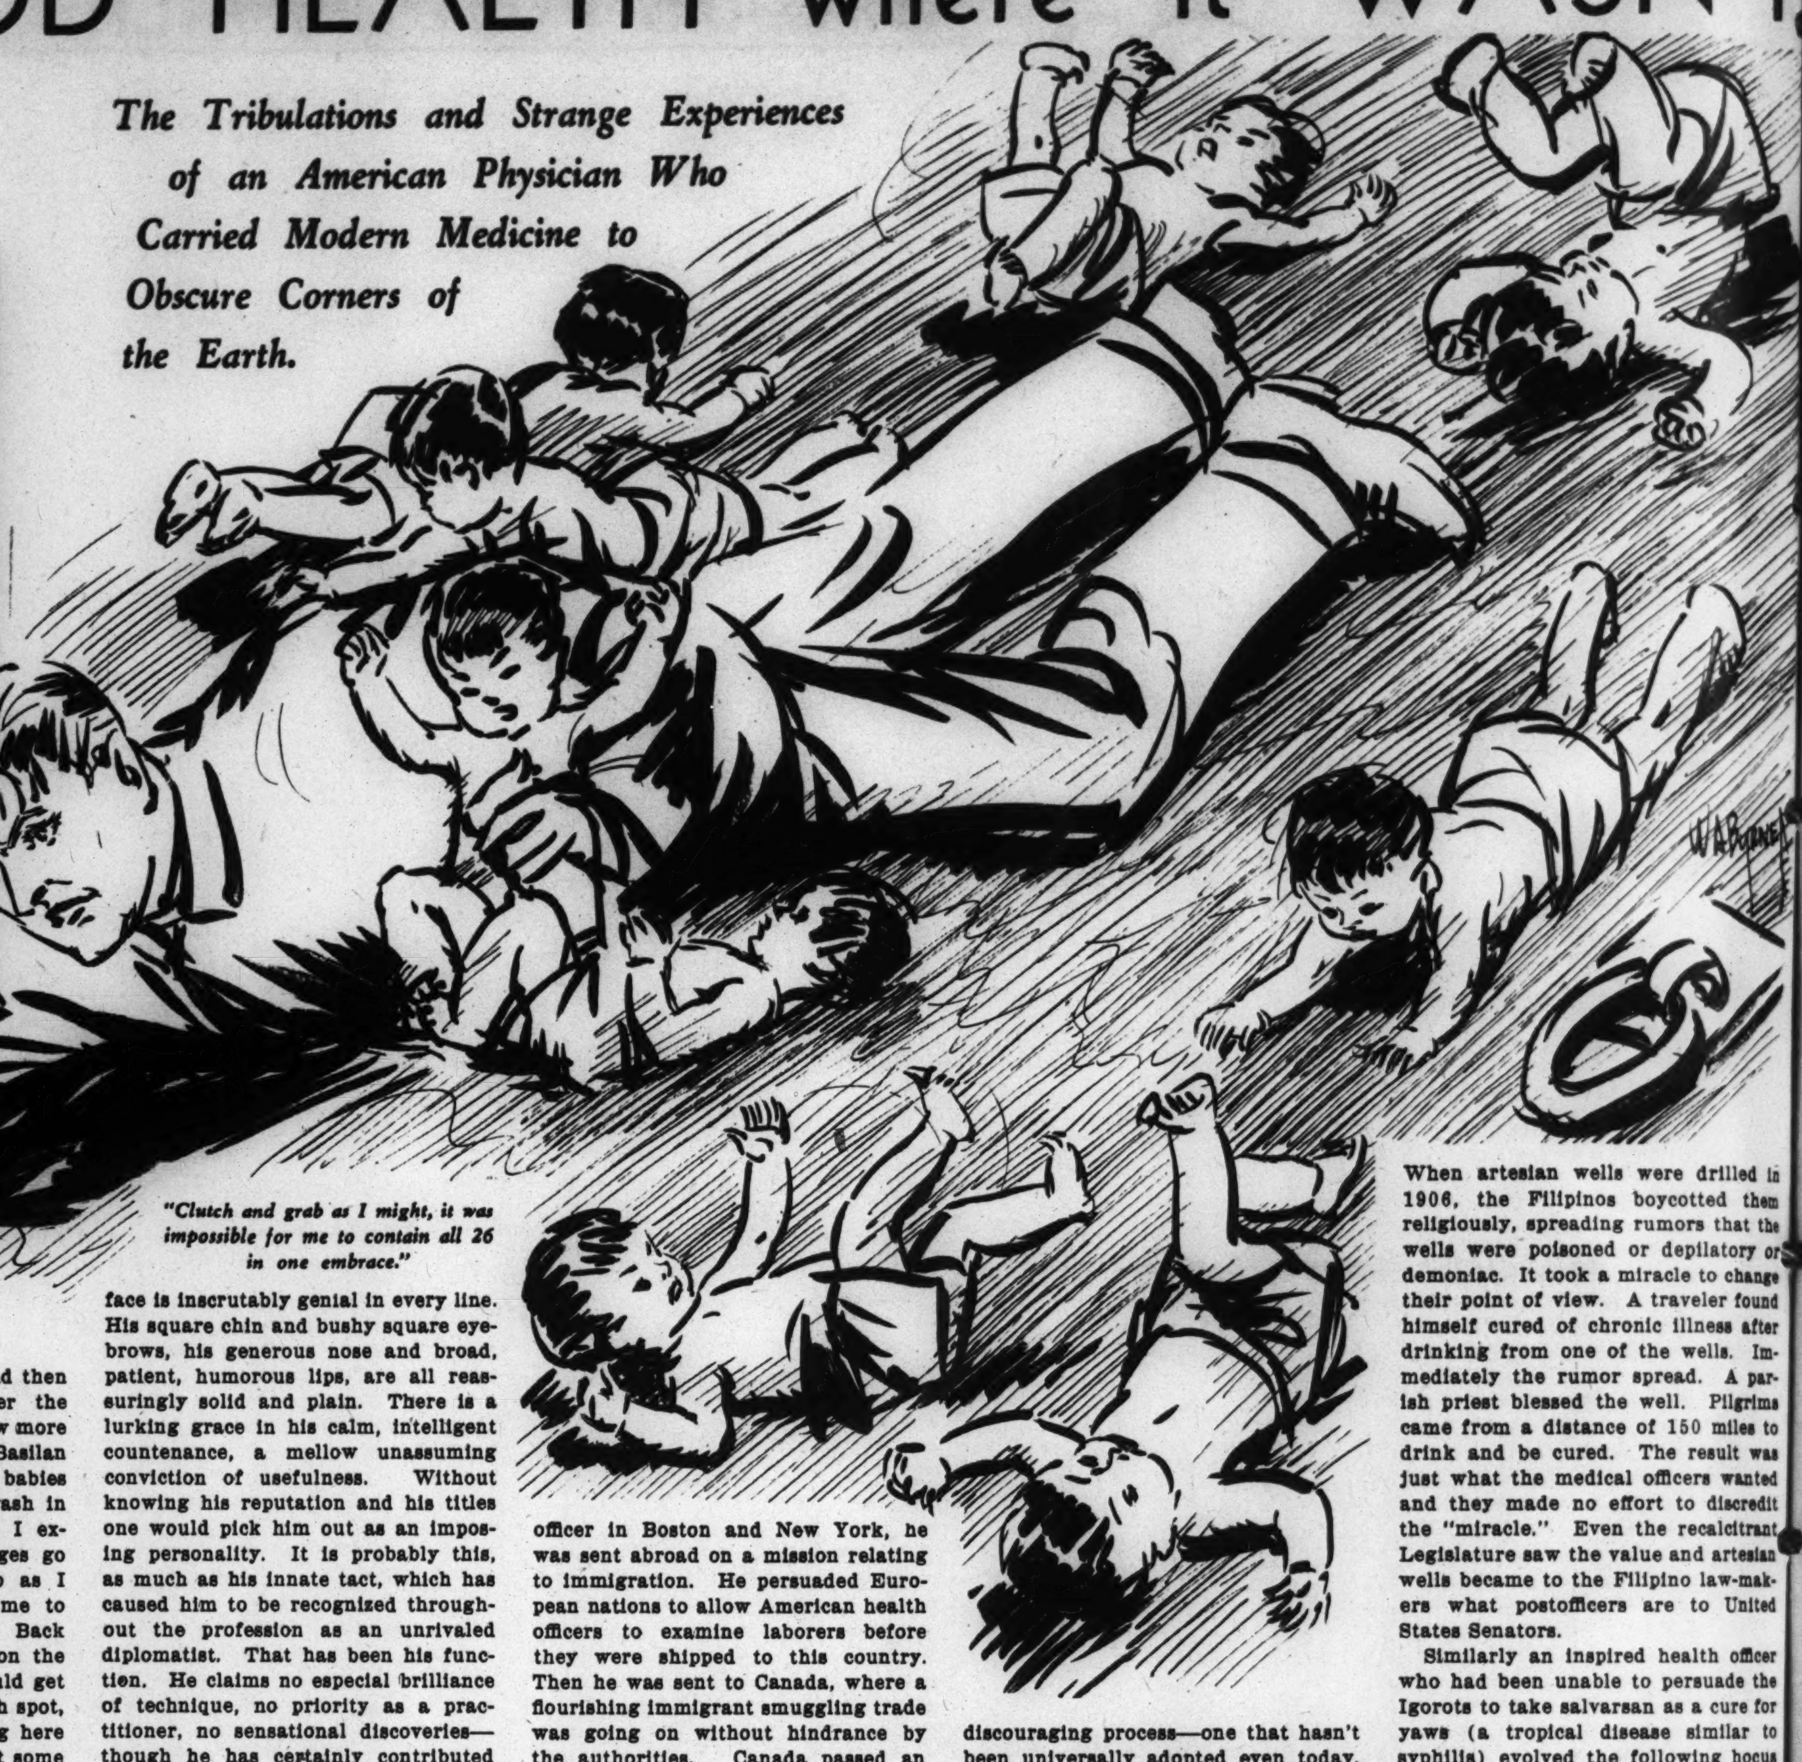
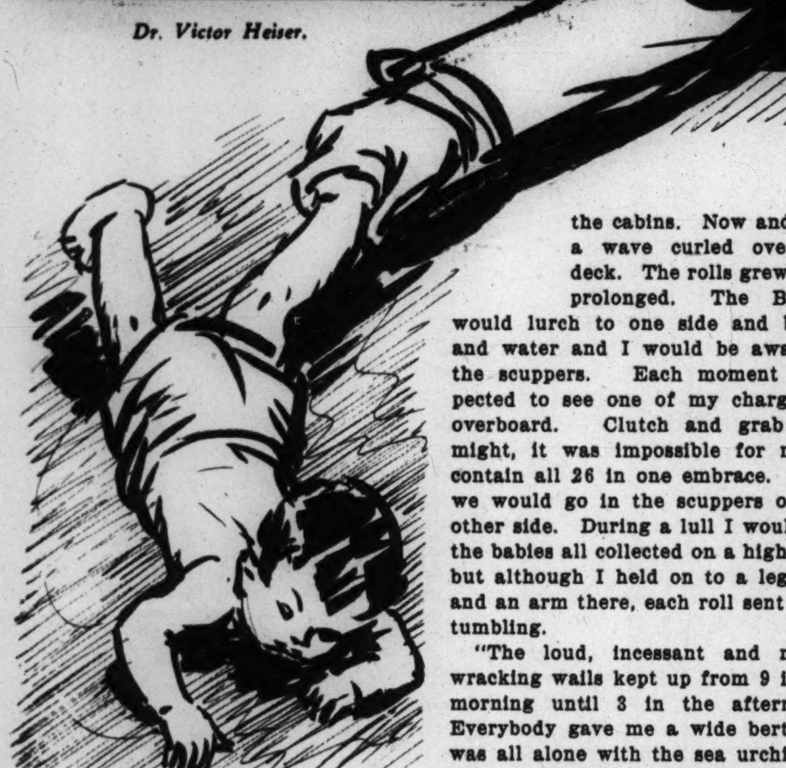
TOOK GOOD HEALTH where It WASN'T WANTED

The Tribulations and Strange Experiences of an American Physician Who Carried Modern Medicine to Obscure Corners of the Earth.

Dr. Victor Heiser.





"Clutch and grab as I might, it was impossible for me to contain all 26 in one embrace."

By MAX PUTZEL

Of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine Staff

"IT IS extremely unpleasant to be scratched by an insane leper with cholera," according to Dr. Victor Heiser, one of the few men hardy (and unfortunate) enough to have come within screaming distance of such an experience. The occurrence itself is terrifying enough, but it is as nothing compared to the subsequent apprehension. There is no way of telling whether one has become infected with leprosy until the incubation period, two to 20 years, is up. Dr. Heiser is now, at last, able to assure himself that he is safe. But his arm still bears the scar he received trying to quell a patient so dangerous he couldn't ask his assistants to approach her.

One gets the impression that he was even more upset by an incident which occurred while he was setting up the model leper colony of Culion in the Philippines. As Director of Health for the islands he had failed to foresee one contingency in planning the leprosarium: What to do with babies born there. Attempting to carry out an order for the segregation of woman patients on the island nearly brought him to an ignominious end. His persuasive lecture to them was interrupted by a concerted attempt to impale him on the points of a hundred furious umbrellas. This bayonet charge averted, he still had to cope with the baby problem. Oratory finally succeeded and 26 leprous mothers agreed to part with their illegitimate offspring. It was a hard thing to ask.

A day later Dr. Heiser found himself aboard the Government steamer Basilan, bound for Manila. Nuns from the leprosarium were on hand to care for the babies. But a terrible thing happened. There was a storm on the China Sea. One after another the nuns were forced to excuse themselves and retire to their cabins.

"Finally," writes Dr. Heiser, "I, a bachelor, was left alone on the after deck with 26 babies. The ship began to pitch and the seas grew heavier. Easily identifiable noises came from the cabins. Now and then a wave curled over the deck. The rolls grew more prolonged. The Basilan would lurch to one side and babies and water and I would be awash in the scuppers. Each moment I expected to see one of my charges go overboard. Clutch and grab as I might, it was impossible for me to contain all 26 in one embrace. Back we would go in the scuppers on the other side. During a lull I would get the babies all collected on a high spot, but although I held on to a leg here and an arm there, each roll sent some tumbling.

"The loud, incessant and nerve-wracking wails kept up from 9 in the morning until 3 in the afternoon. Everybody gave me a wide berth. I was all alone with the sea urchins in this dreary game of pitch and toss.

"At last a sailor hove in sight. Filipino men were as good nursery maids as any women. I hailed him.

"'I've had no lunch, and I must have a rest. You'll have to take care of these babies for a while.'

"When my sense of honor drove me back to the nautical nursery, a most amusing sight greeted my eyes. The sailor was seated flat on the deck, a baby on his right arm, a baby on his left arm, a baby under his right knee, a baby under his left knee, a baby hanging on his right ear, a baby hanging on his left ear. He had filled a beer bottle with milk. Whichever child howled loudest would find the neck thrust into its mouth. Until the baby subsided he would keep it there; then he would pull it out and stick it into the mouth of the next yowler. . . ."

And when the voyage was over and the babies had been delivered Dr. Heiser was called to the hospital to meet another emergency. All the name tags which had been attached to the babies had come off. "They're ravenously hungry," the head nurse explained, "and must have eaten them."

Fortunately he was able to extricate himself. With admirable forethought, the doctor had scratched numbers on the finger nails of each baby—and memorized the numbers and corresponding names.

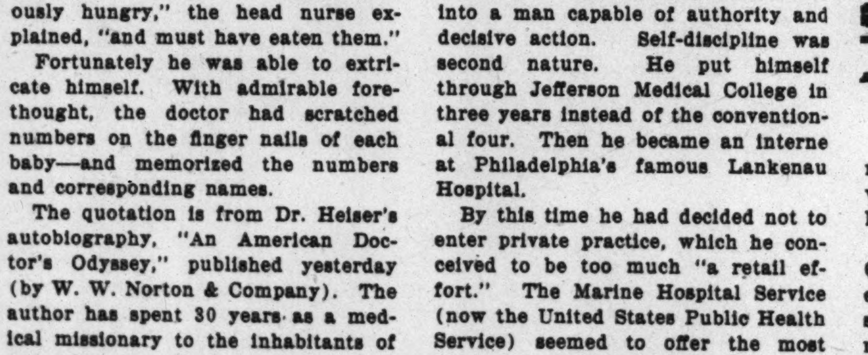
The quotation is from Dr. Heiser's autobiography, "An American Doctor's Odyssey," published yesterday (by W. W. Norton & Company). The author has spent 30 years as a medical missionary to the inhabitants of more than 60 nations in every corner of the atlas. His friends are a population. His acquaintances represent nearly every race.

Dr. Heiser is a six-footer and bald. His face is inscrutably genial in every line. His square chin and bushy square eyebrows, his generous nose and broad, patient, humorous lips, are all reassuringly solid and plain. There is a lurking grace in his calm, intelligent countenance, a mellow unassuming conviction of usefulness. Without knowing his reputation and his titles one would pick him out as an imposing personality. It is probably this, as much as his innate tact, which has caused him to be recognized throughout the profession as an unrivaled diplomatist. That has been his function. He claims no especial brilliance of technique, no priority as a practitioner, no sensational discoveries—though he has certainly contributed more than a fair share to medical knowledge and is a recognized authority in several fields. Chiefly it has been Dr. Heiser's role to synthesize and apply other men's scientific findings, to spread the first fruits of research to the world's hinterlands.

PERSUASIVENESS and a strong will were needed for such a task. But even more he needed courage and persistency. He had to be selfless to forestall jealousy and so objective that no bureaucrat could question his motives. Such has been his career—constructive, satisfying and adventurous. Few men could write meaningly, as he has, "Mine has been an extraordinarily happy and satisfactory life."

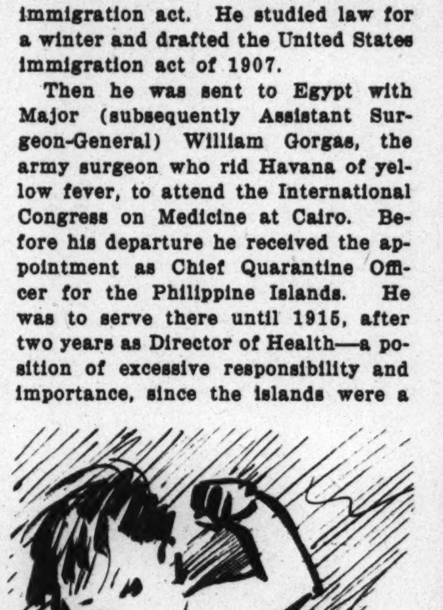
Victor George Heiser was catapulted into hard reality aboard a barn roof tossed insanely downstream in the Johnstown flood of 1889. His parents were among the victims of that catastrophe and the even flow of his studious boyhood was roughly broken by the loss. Thereafter he had to fend for himself. At 16 he became a plumber's assistant, then an apprentice carpenter. Then he got his A. B., put himself through a year at engineering school and decided to study medicine. A lonely youth, the burden of responsibilities turned him into a man capable of authority and decisive action. Self-discipline was second nature. He put himself through Jefferson Medical College in three years instead of the conventional four. Then he became an interne at Philadelphia's famous Lankenau Hospital.

By this time he had decided not to enter private practice, which he conceived to be too much "a retail effort." The Marine Hospital Service (now the United States Public Health Service) seemed to offer the most congenial outlet for his ambitions. Even then this unit seems to have had rigorous standards and applicants usually spent a year preparing for the entrance examinations. Heiser, who happened to drop in at the headquarters of the service during a vacation, decided to attempt them immediately without preparation. Three applicants were to be chosen out of 42. Heiser very nearly ranked first. The effort cost him 20 pounds.



After a year's service as quarantine officer in Boston and New York, he was sent abroad on a mission relating to immigration. He persuaded European nations to allow American health officers to examine laborers before they were shipped to this country. Then he was sent to Canada, where a flourishing immigrant smuggling trade was going on without hindrance by the authorities. Canada passed an immigration act. He studied law for a winter and drafted the United States immigration act of 1907.

Then he was sent to Egypt with Major (subsequently Assistant Surgeon-General) William Gorgas, the army surgeon who rid Havana of yellow fever, to attend the International Congress on Medicine at Cairo. Before his departure he received the appointment as Chief Quarantine Officer for the Philippine Islands. He was to serve there until 1915, after two years as Director of Health—a position of excessive responsibility and importance, since the islands were a nest of epidemic tropical diseases which had never been properly regulated in any colony up to that time.



Traveling eastward through India, Ceylon and Malaya, he encountered everywhere the same monotonous smug argument: The Oriental "could not be sanitated; he was happy in his filth and should be let alone. Epidemics of singular ghastliness were universally taken for granted in the East.

In the Philippines bubonic plague was a perennial catastrophe. Cholera was endemic. Smallpox took 40,000 lives a year. Tuberculosis, 50,000. Beriberi was rampant. The infant death rate was the highest in the world. The insane were chained to nipa huts that were packed together in incredible confusion and utterly without sanitary facilities. Spanish misgovernment had left a lethal chaos in its wake.

Dr. Heiser's method of dealing with the situation was to become classic; he attempted, what had never been done before, to educate the primitive population to defend itself. This was an excessively long-drawn-out and discouraging process—one that hasn't been universally adopted even today. But Dr. Heiser proved beyond question that it was the only way of sanitation in a primitive country.

To deal with plague, he organized a rat catching and fumigating detail that operated exactly like a fire department—rushing to an infected district and destroying the pests that carried cheopis fleas according to a carefully planned geographical formula. It wasn't until the plague of 1912 that this was proved to work. Later he happened to be visiting Ceylon when a terrific plague broke out in Kandy. His methods were already being used there, but the local health officers didn't consider it possible that the up-to-date English store there could be the focus of infection. Dr. Heiser's past experience made this the obvious place to look. He found the focus in the store's granary and the epidemic was almost instantly stamped out. Later a similar experience in Jaffa, Palestine, proved him to be a real detective when it came to locating a nest of infected rats.

Of course education alone wouldn't serve in an epidemic. The mass of the population was illiterate and propaganda had to be distributed by word. Even if the vernacular newspapers had had a wider circulation, the tendency among them—as among most upper-class Filipinos—was to be antagonistic. The program adopted finally was to concentrate on one disease and its prevention at a time. Lecturers, railway cars, later automobile exhibits and even miniature demonstrations on porters' backs, were sent through the islands.

A SERIOUS menace was the doctrine of resignation inculcated by the priests. It was impossible to get the Filipinos to safeguard themselves by building latrines, purifying the drinking water and breaking the old unhygienic habits, when the missionaries kept teaching that cholera was a punishment for original sin. Dr. Heiser refused to take a defeatist attitude. He went directly to the Catholic Archbishop with his problem. The Archbishop saw the point and immediately agreed to instruct his priests to alter their method, especially to discourage the wakes, which were so effective in spreading cholera. Not only that, he agreed to distribute pamphlets containing health rules. With this head start, the Director of Health had no trouble persuading all the other denominations to fall in line and imitate the Catholics. Thus he found himself in possession of the most powerful influence on the islands.

It was extremely difficult to change the customs of the people, however. When artesian wells were drilled in 1906, the Filipinos boycotted them religiously, spreading rumors that the wells were poisoned or depilatory or demoniac. It took a miracle to change their point of view. A traveler found himself cured of chronic illness after drinking from one of the wells. Immediately the rumor spread. A parish priest blessed the well. Pilgrims came from a distance of 150 miles to drink and be cured. The result was just what the medical officers wanted and they made no effort to discredit the "miracle." Even the recalcitrant Legislature saw the value and artesian wells became to the Filipino law-makers what postofficers are to United States Senators.

Similarly an inspired health officer who had been unable to persuade the Igorots to take salvarsan as a cure for yaws (a tropical disease similar to syphilis) evolved the following hocus pocus for a sufferer too ill to be suspicious. He gave him a stick with 15 loops of string tied to it. Then he instructed him to cut one loop with his bolo just as the sun cleared the horizon each morning, keeping himself tightly wrapped in his blanket all the time. "When the last one is gone," he concluded mysteriously, "throw aside your blanket. You will be well." Then he injected the salvarsan. . . . The sufferer brought back hundreds of fellow tribesmen for the cure.

IN THE long run it was only patient education that accomplished results; the unfortunate populace which was decimated annually by appalling epidemics could only be rid of them by understanding their salient characteristics, the methods of their transmission and the way of blocking them at their origins. In many cases no cures had been discovered and preventive medicine—instead of being a radical hope for the future—became a necessity.

Singularly enough, it was not a physician, but a layman who discovered the most effective means of propagating medical knowledge among the uneducated. Dr. Heiser credits John D. Rockefeller with the achievement.

"Mr. Rockefeller," he writes, "invited a small group of the leaders of the medical profession to meet him. 'I want to ask you gentlemen a question,' he said. 'Is there a disease affecting large numbers of people of which you can say, "I know all about this and I can cure it, not in 50 or even 80 per cent of the cases, but in 100 per cent?" Furthermore it should be possible by simple means. It should be a disease of which the cause can be clearly seen—nothing so vague as microscopic bacteria, but something visible to the naked eye. If you could name me such a disease you would not have to discourse in vague generalities about public health, but would have something concrete which the masses could understand, and concerning which they could be convinced by large-scale demonstrations.'"

The answer, of course, was hookworm, a disease which drastically affected the lives of millions and was spread by worms whose eggs traveled through human feces to the earth, whence the larvae passed through bare feet and legs into the human system.

Dr. Heiser became an associate director of the International Health Division of Rockefeller Foundation in 1915. He was given great liberty of action, traveled continually to all

'Out-of-a-Book' ROMANCE that REALLY HAPPENED

Fuller Potter, New York Artist and Son of a Wealthy Father, Went to the Tennessee Mountains to Find Subjects for His Canvas—and Married Cindy Williamson of Cane Holler Creek.

HARTFORD, Tennessee.

CINDY WILLIAMSON, threading barefoot through the laurel, sang an old, old song—

I'm a merry little mountain maid,
And o'er the hills I rove,
Eating huckleberries all the day,
And learning how to love.

Cindy was indeed a merry little mountain maid and o'er the hills she roved, but she hadn't begun to learn to love because she was too young for that. She laughed at love as she laughed at life. Some day, perhaps.

Then out of the East an artist—and he taught her how to love and carried her away to his people.

All the 15 years of her life Cindy Williamson had lived in the Big Smoky Mountains at the Tennessee-Carolina border. Her home was a three-room slab house in a cove up Cane Holler branch, a tiny spring-fed brook that goes romping to Pigeon River, singing as it goes. Her world was what she could see when she climbed the deeply-shaded trail to the top of Booger Mountain and looked down on the river in its valley and the hamlet of Hartford on its far bank and the road that went winding its eastward way. If she wondered where the road went and longed to go where it led, she never said so. The world of Cane Holler and Pigeon River was her world and with it she was content. It gave her laughter and satisfied all her need.

For playmates when she was a young child she had only her brothers and sisters, but there were plenty of these. Of the 15 born to Ben and Dona Williamson, 11 survived and they, unlike most mountain children, were lighthearted and liked laughter and play and it was not until after Cindy came that most of the others married and went away. So the cabin in Cane Holler was crowded, but not too crowded for the happiness which was the children's best heritage from plodding father and patient mother.

Just how crowded it was may be inferred from the uncertainty that besets Scott, youngest of the boys, 18 years old now, when he is asked suddenly how many children there were. He hesitates and rolls his eyes skyward, trying to remember, and falls back on his fingers for help, counting them off — three brothers and him, that makes four, and six sisters, all married, no, seven. Will Grindstaff, standing by, willing to help, volunteers: "I heard Doc Shields countin' 'em up one day, and I think he counted six girls married."

Scott concedes that Doc Shields ought to know, but he sure thought there were seven. It bothers him and later, at home, he calls up the question again and, to make sure, asks his Ma and she settles it, calling off the names—Virgie and Winnie and Marthy here in Tennessee, Hattie and Vickey in North Carolina and Viola in South Carolina, and Cindy.

When Cindy was old enough she went to school at Hartford, trudging the up-and-down trail over the mountain, and learned from books something about the world at the end of the eastward-winding road, but she still did not covet what that world could give or wish to journey where the road led. She learned at school the games that children play and she laughed so much, out of sheer love of laughter, that they sometimes called her "Laughing Cindy."

When she had all that the Hartford school could give she came to her day of decision. The nearest high school was at Newport, 20 miles away. She heard it talked about and took a mild interest in the talk. A girl could go to high school, the talk went, and learn enough to be a teacher and earn a powerful sight of money. Her interest, though, was more curiosity than desire. Life's denials had taught her not to wish. She did speak about it at home, but her father, broken by his work in the timber camps, had sickened and died and her mother, sorrowful, said Cindy couldn't "handy go."

CINDY laughed and said it didn't matter. She wasn't sure, anyway, that she wanted to be a teacher. So, with school days over, she would wait until a mountain boy came hanging around, eager to teach her how to love, and she would learn, and then after a while she would have a cabin home of her own, for that was the life lot of a mountain maid.

Fuller Potter is an artist with, perhaps, more of promise that accomplishment, for he is young. When he finished college he might have gone into the office of his father, J. W. F. Potter, partner in a Wall Street brokerage firm, but he did not care for anything like that. He continued his art studies. There was no denying his talent, but at 24 there was something lacking in his work. In New York he did not find the inspiration that he needed. He craved wide spaces and wild places, trees and brooks and rocks and waterfalls. They called to him and he answered their call. He loaded his car with tent and camp things and painting materials and took to the road, seeking a solitude that would satisfy. He did not know where he would find it, but he had heard of the Big Smokies. Perhaps they would fill his need.

Following the highway that leads to Asheville and its "Land of the Sky" he crossed the French Broad and came to Newport, near the mouth of Pigeon, and turned into the winding road that leads along Pigeon's banks to beckoning peaks, and found on Big Creek, high above Hartford, trail's end and there set up his tent.

Through the waning summer he painted, finding the happiness that New York had not been able to give him. The mountain people, not less than their mountains, interested him. He was grateful for their friendliness and gave them friendliness in return. When he came down to Hartford he tarried at the postoffice and at Laws' store, across the road, and talked with Postmaster Ford and Laws and the loiterers, and they all liked him for his forthright friendliness. When winter came he folded his tent and came into town to the Clark boarding house and after a while arranged to occupy the town lodge hall as a studio. To the curious he showed his paintings, scenes on Big Creek and round about and one of the town and road and river as seen from the mountain side. The scenes were "purty," the townsfolk said, but the picture of the town interested them most because they could pick out the houses where they lived. Through the winter Potter turned to types and although nobody knew just what he meant by types, they proudly posed for him—Sam McGaha, Parker Knight, Hart Barnes, Leona Black, Virginia Wallace, Bonnie Lindsey and a few others—and marveled at the "speakin' images" that he wrought and were the envy of all the villagers who did not qualify as types.

Once during the winter Potter loaded up the pictures that he had finished and took them to New York, but he came back, lured not only by the mountains that had filled his need, but by the friends that he had found. One of the friends that he had found, as he tarried at postoffice and store, was Scott Williamson, who came to town winter days when there was nothing to do in Cane Holler and nowhere else for an 18-year-old boy to go. Fuller Potter took a liking to the lad. When spring came and Potter began looking about for scenes to sketch, he asked Scott if Cane Holler was picturesque and Scott said it was "purty" over there, if that was what Potter meant, and Potter said he was coming over some time and Scott said he would be more'n welcome.

One day Potter crossed the river and climbed over the mountain and came to Cane Holler. Scott and Homer Conard, his brother-in-law, were building a shed up the branch and Potter, guided by the sounds of their industry, went there and was welcomed by the two, who did not mind an interruption, and they sat on the timbers and talked and after a while drifted down to the house and Scott said, by way of introduction, "This is Fuller Potter." Mrs. Williamson, mindful of the claims of hospitality, bade him welcome. Cindy, blond and blue-eyed, was shy and a little snippy, just to put this "furriner" in his place and show him that an artist from New York didn't mean anything to her. If, when he had gone, she laughed at him, it was only her way, she laughed at everything.

POTTER came back a time or two because Cane Holler was "purty," as Scott had said. If he considered Cindy "purty" and came partly on her account, he gave no sign. Cindy continued shy, if not so snippy. Then one day at the store in Hartford Potter and Scott were talking and Potter said he would like to live back in the mountains and especially in Cane Holler and asked if he could come and live at Scott's home.

Scott said nothing would suit him better, for he liked Fuller Potter and his friendly ways, but he would have to ask his Ma. He asked her and made known his own wish, but Mrs. Williamson was not in good health and did not feel that she could do the cooking for a guest and Cindy was still going to school. Maybe when school was out he could come. Cindy, though, when it was put up to her, flared. "I don't want Fuller Potter to stay up here," she cried. "I won't cook for him. If he comes I'll go away." Scott and his sister Winnie were not deceived. They knew how a girl, to cover up an unacknowledged interest, would strike out like that. It was a case of protesting over much. They teased Cindy until she was on the verge of tears. Then they told her, in mock surrender, that they would not let Potter come and, so strange is the way of a maid who is beginning to learn to love, she was more vexed than ever.

When school was out and Potter renewed his request, Mrs. Williamson sent word by Scott that he could come and Cindy cooked for him and made no move to go away.

When Fuller Potter came to live in the cabin in Cane Holler, no apology was made by Mrs. Williamson for the accommodations that she could offer. It did not occur to her that anything of the kind was called for. She welcomed him with simple dignity to a place at her table and the sharing of Scott's room. On his part Potter settled into the life of the family as if he belonged. He took it upon himself to carry water from the spring and feed and milk the cow and make himself generally useful about the place.

ONCE he rather overdid it in trying to make himself useful. Cindy and Winnie were doing the washing at the spring across the branch and Potter came along and offered to help hang the clothes. They declined the offer, Winnie with a word of thanks and Cindy in quick anger and embarrassment. Potter, laughing and teasing, picked up some clothes pins and pinched Cindy's ears with them and tangled them in her hair. Cindy, outraged by such behavior, said, "Oh, Fuller, that hurts," and then, whether from hurt or vexation, she was crying. "Oh, I'm sorry," said Fuller, "I didn't mean to hurt you," and he gently disentangled the pins. Cindy, only partly mollified, told him to go about his business and turned to her work.

Winnie, who felt herself wise in the ways of lovers, pondered this. Fuller and Cindy to her were just a couple of kids. "I knew," she says now, "that Fuller thought a good deal of Cindy. How did I know it? By his actions, but they weren't courtin' actions. I had never seen them courtin'. If they talked any lovin' words I never heard them. They paid no attention to each other around the house. They would sit side by side on the front steps or the side porch, but they never held hands and never said much to each other except when they quarreled. Yes, I know lovers like to quarrel, but theirs didn't seem like lovers' quarrels. Maybe they were only pretendin' to be mad, to throw us off."

Scott, to prove that at 18 he knows a thing or two, cuts in. "I saw them," he says, "actin' like they was courtin'. Whenever you see them whisperin' around you know there's somethin'. Or I do. I don't know what they said. There ain't many people wants you to hear when they're courtin'."

Except for their spats and the whispering noted by Scott, but not reported at the time, there seems to have been nothing to indicate that a courtship was in progress in Cane Holler. Occasionally Potter took Cindy in his car to a picture show at Newport, but he always asked somebody else to go along. In that way Scott got to see a good many picture shows that he would otherwise not have seen. They went together to Sunday school at the Hartford Baptist Church and to church on the first Saturday and Sunday of each month when Brother Jess Johnson came to preach.

Winnie had her suspicions, not-

HAMLETS by Night— FARM WORKERS by Day

Building scenery for a production.

The Hedgerow Theater's Cast Builds Its Own Scenery, Prints Its Programs, Takes Care of the Cow—and Eats Regularly.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

PHILADELPHIA.

WHEN the members of the Hedgerow Theater in Moylan-Rose Valley, Pennsylvania, 15 miles from here, presented their 119th new production this August, they marked themselves as being not only the oldest permanent repertory company in America, but also as having the largest repertory of any American theater.

But far more unique and praiseworthy than the extensiveness of their repertory is the courageous struggle which this small group of genuinely theater-loving young men and women have steadfastly waged for 13 long years in their successful efforts to become entirely self-supporting. Today, as the 22 members of the company look at the "cottage" in which they live and the several acres which surround it, not to mention their 10 sheep, their cow, their six ducks, their two dogs and their pet cat, they can be proud of the unendowed, completely co-operative, entirely profit-sharing collective which they have set up, nurtured and watched bear fruit.

Hedgerow Theater.

There in Possum Hollow, about a half mile from the Moylan-Rose Valley railroad station, these sturdy theatrical pioneers have run their own farm, prepared the scenery for their own plays, made their properties and costumes, cooked their own food, printed their own programs and done all the chores which go with community living. And while the moguls of Broadway have complained of hard times which forced them to close shop, the Hedgerovians have gone bravely on, not only continuing to give old favorites and new premieres to the audiences which come from Philadelphia, New York and other Eastern centers to see them, but they have also found the time and the means to make two extensive tours into the South and the Middle West, taking Shakespeare and Shaw and O'Neill to the hinterlands of Arkansas and Texas.

Of course, for such an enterprise there had to be a guiding hand and brain, and that guide was, is and always has been Jasper Deeter, known to Hedgerovians and theater folk near and far as just plain "Jap." Tall, gangling, lean, looking to many something like Abraham Lincoln, Deeter, who recently celebrated his forty-third birthday, has pursued the idea of a self-supporting repertory theater straight through the years and has never allowed his disciples, of whom there have been many, to swerve him from his ideas.

In the 13 years that have elapsed since he founded the theater on assets which consisted of nine dollars in cash, a location which delighted him and a belief in his instinctive rightness about the stage, Deeter and the Hedgerow players have more than once found themselves on the verge of dissolution because of large debts and meager audiences. Many times they have had to tighten their belts, literally, because food was growing low in the larder; they never eat turnips any more because of the period in which turnips were all they could afford to eat; often they have worn badly torn shoes and braved the winter winds in clothing that was far too light to keep out the cold.

But always the will to survive, to show that a co-operative theatrical group could survive, was kept alive by the persistence of Deeter. Today the group of 22 permanent players finds that the box-office receipts provide adequate food, clothing and shelter and even allow for a short vacation once in a while. In the last six years, Hedgerow Theater has been open during the entire year, giving six performances a week in the warm months from April to October, and cutting down to three performances a week when the snow is on the ground and Hedgerow is difficult of access to city folk.

At first it was a hard tussle to get Philadelphians to travel into the country to see a play, but now it has become an extremely popular pastime, so much so that Jasper Deeter is instituting an open forum for questions on the first Sunday of each month. His idea is merely to be pleasant to the city which has helped him and his group give the 2200 performances which they have so far rung up on the tiny stage of their charming little theater with its seating capacity of 168.

THIS year the Hedgerow people feel more secure than ever before. They have recently bought the farm house and surrounding acres where they lived at a rental of $60 a month since 1927. They have acquired sufficient means to put in modern stage switchboards and other new stage properties. They are extremely comfortable in the three-story, nine-room house, with its barn, garage and several shacks, and they have been able to put up for a night or two and invite to a meal the part-time workers, who number 25, and who come from nearby.

The Hedgerovians point with pride to their livestock: the cow, the 10 sheep which are mult'plying rapidly and which have already supplied wool for 10 blankets; the six ducks, the dog named Sherwood Anderson, which Libby Holman presented to the group two seasons ago when she played there in Anderson's play, "Winesburg, Ohio," and another dog, which is 13 years old. There's the Hedgerow cat, too, Minnie, which has had 21 kittens so far.

There are other new acquisitions of which the collective is justly proud. There's the secondhand printing press on which programs and announcements are printed in the farmhouse living-room by Catherine Rieser, who also takes care of the vegetable garden. Miss Rieser is helped in her job of printing by Bob Hanley, a photographer; Hanley takes all the publicity pictures for the company and does his own developing. He uses a second-hand camera which the group bought several years ago for $15.

Printing the programs.

The germ from which this unique organization grew dates back to the old Provincetown days at 133 McDougall street in Greenwich Village, New York. The Provincetown group was run by a board of 10 members: Eugene O'Neill, Edna and Norma Millay, Charles Ellis, George Cram "Jig" Cook, Cleon Throckmorton, Eleanor Fitzgerald, James Light, Susan Glaspell and Jasper Deeter. They are today best remembered for having given O'Neill his first stage presentations, but to Deeter, Provincetown means something entirely different.

There he learned what he has since accepted as an axiom: that a theater must be run by one man's tastes and not by the differences of 10 men. According to Deeter, the future for Provincetown lay only in one direction, that of making it into a repertory theater which would advertise two nights a week, at 133 McDougall street, for 10 years. But the board of Provincetown did not agree with Deeter. Next there were wranglings about giving a Negro the part of Emperor Jones in the play of that name. Here again Deeter today declares he argued that only a Negro would do, while several of the others, with an eye to Broadway performances later on, wanted a white man to do the role.

Harmony was gone out of Provincetown, but Deeter felt that his instinct for repertory, his desire for variety on the stage and his belief in getting a Negro for Emperor Jones were more than trifling disagreements. In the evenings, Jasper Deeter used to discuss theatrical problems with a group of rising actors who, like himself, had won a certain degree of New York approval through character parts. These were Eva le Gallienne, Ann Harding, whom Deeter himself discovered when she was working in an insurance office; Alexander Kirkland, Morris Carnovsky and Allyn Joslyn. Today all of them are important luminaries—Le Gallienne with her own repertory group now temporarily not working, Harding in the movies, Kirkland and Carnovsky with the Group Theater, which, according to Deeter, is "built on a healthy disapproval of the Hedgerow method," and Allyn Joslyn in the Broadway success, "Boy Meets Girl."

Director Jasper Deeter.

THEY used to talk of their distaste for type casting. They felt that though they might make a living if they continued in Broadway productions they could never try out their ability in a varied list of parts. Repertory was what they wanted and what they felt the American stage needed.

It so happened that not long after these conversations, Jasper Deeter was engaged by the Swarthmore Chatauqua to take out a troupe of Provincetowners in a comedy called "Crossed Wires." After 10 days of rehearsal at Swarthmore, the head of the enterprise informed the company that they would play 16 weeks under canvas and give "The Book of Job" on Sunday nights. Deeter was made company manager as well as director and given five dollars a week more than the actors. He got $40 a week.

Here Deeter again proved himself a thorn in the Provincetown side. He wanted the actors to strike in protest for one night off or "more dollars" but the company refused to strike and Deeter found himself on a one-man strike. He walked into the country near Swarthmore, Pa., and there, in a secluded fertile valley about two miles from the town he fell upon a dilapidated but charming old stone structure near the road. Inquiring about it, he found that it had originally been an old mill, built two centuries before, that it had been used as a local theater by William Price and his friends, who called themselves the Rose Valley Players, but that it had been vacant since 1916.

Immediately on that April day in 1923, Deeter, with $9 in his pocket, envisaged the place as his repertory theater. He liked the seclusion; he liked the settlement of Rose Valley where living was cheap and the few inhabitants did not mind artists who had "queer ideas," and he remembered that five New York actors had spoken fervently of an ambition to become part of a theater where they might act as they wanted to.

The first thing to do was to make the theater a place in which plays could be put on. A few players with a desire for experiment immediately enrolled with Jasper Deeter and together they rented the old mill. They set to work cleaning it, remodeling it, making a small lobby and a rather spacious reception room, covering the exterior with yellow stucco but leaving the narrow wooden steps intact. They set up a small stage and platform and for the audience they provided 15 rows of wooden benches which they obtained from a Pennsylvania church. Today those erstwhile pews have been cushioned, and real windows, fully screened, have been substituted for the small leaded panes found there.

The first year at Hedgerow was difficult and exciting. The small group which had come with the idea of spending a summer managed to run for 42 months before closing up for a short time in order to be able to pay off debts. The most heartening sign was that the New York group which had expressed a desire to go with Deeter really came to Hedgerow. Ann Harding gave notice to the Bonstelle company where she was playing and arrived in time for Susan Glaspell's "Inheritors," a play she has appeared in many times since then when she has returned from Hollywood to pay "Jap" a visit. Eva Le Gallienne could not make it until 1924; she then played "The Master Builder" by Ibsen, interpreting it in her own way, which is opposed to Deeter's conception of the part.

KIRKLAND, Carnovsky and Joslyn all joined Deeter at Hedgerow; each of these five actors left when, according to Deeter, "they felt there was nothing more here for their vision and interests."

In the fall of 1926 Hedgerow confronted a severe crisis. The debts amounted to $14,000 and since Deeter had always maintained that a theater does not fulfill its purpose unless it is self-supporting, he disbanded the group temporarily so that some money might be made. Deeter himself undertook the job of directing Paul Green's "In Abraham's Bosom" in New York, and in June of 1927 he was able to bring the show, with the late Rose McClendon and Frank Wilson of "The Green Pastures," to Rose Valley and re-open Hedgerow. In the winter of 1929-30 the old debts were paid off; the advertising bills to Philadelphia papers were cleared and Hedgerow was re-discovered.

Admission prices were lowered and the increase in patronage showed that the policy was a good one. Today there are 36 seats at 55 cents; 24 at $1.10 and the rest at $1.65. The latter are bought mainly on subscription, which is $11.50 for 10 seats good at any time. Most of the stage properties are made at Hedgerow; a

SKETCHES FROM LIFE

High Lights on Unusual Personalities

PAUL DE KRUIF
KLEMENTY VOROSHILOFF

WHY the AUTHOR of 'MICROBE HUNTERS' GOT MAD

"YES, it's going pretty strong," said the young man in the book store, who has an expert's grasp of the commodity he sells. "Not quite as well as some of his others, though. In this last one, he kinda goes off the deep end."

"Off the deep end" isn't half of it, as Paul de Kruif confesses explicitly for himself in his latest book, "Why Keep Them Alive?" He says he's just come through "a year of hell"—the hell of discovering that all his life he's been barking up a wrong tree, that the scientists of health, whose comrade and reporter he is, have been barking up the wrong tree just as surely as the scientists of material plenty; that the knowledge of how to have a well people means no more than the knowledge of how to have a well-fed and well-clad and well-housed people, so long as the will to make this ready knowledge effective (and the best of it has been at hand for years) is blocked by great $-marks and $50,000-a-year wardrobes and competitive clubs and old-fashioned "Darwinian" materialism and the comfortable narcotic of philanthropy and, in short, obstacles so fantastic, so incredibly dog-in-the-manger-ish, that outsiders like De Kruif and most of the rest of us simply cannot comprehend them.

It probably wasn't as sudden a discovery as it appears in the book, though it was pointed out to him quite recently, and bluntly, by Ezra Pound. The most famous of all science reporters cannot have been without the sour smile most of them had when they read solemn pronouncements of the great boon of the depression to public health. No question thus raised—and some of them were shrewd—could long shake his hold on the long-established kinship of family income and child health, of the fact that pathologists, looking inside the bodies of people who lived "on the wrong side of the tracks," had found just as appalling a difference in them there as "nice people" found in their speech and dress and table manners. The fault was that De Kruif considered knowledge the essential, and took the will for granted. Let only the microbe hunters learn what to do, he thought in his pre-depression innocence, and it will be done; sooner, perhaps, on the prosperous and enlightened and respectable side of the tracks, but—with plenty of knowledge, plenty of health for everyone—eventually on both. (The obstacles, you see, were of a nature that outsiders like De Kruif could not grasp.)

It was after "Men Against Death," published by Harcourt, Brace in the second year of the depression, that Ezra Pound pointed out his evident ignorance of "a man-made cause of dying . . . more murderous than all the swarming sub-visible billions of man-killing microbes put together." But it was no mere observer, even so "deep-seeing" an observer as Pound, who booted him out of his Castle in Spain and into some of the huts on Hungry street. The poor devils in those huts, right down in the pinch of the facts, wrote to him, too, thousands of them after every bit of life-giving science he reported: "Swell — and it's just what I need, but I'm broke. Now, my old carcass is no use to me the way it is, and I wonder if that great Doc (and a square shooter he is, too, the way you tell about him) could use it to find out something more. If I come out of it, OK, and if not, that's OK, too. I've nothing to lose but my chains of disease."

De Kruif got so many of those letters that he came to dread them, until his wife—the Rhea to whom his books are dedicated—had to make him open them. And, ultimately, they built the fire under him that rages through his latest book. They drove him out to find if, with all this wealth of science ready and eager to go to work for them, people were being allowed to die in want of it. That was his "year of hell."

The discovery wasn't essentially new, of course. Other aspects of it have been expounded by scholars no more recent nor radical than Woodrow Wilson and Ralph Waldo Emerson, long before there was plenty for the "haves" and "have-nots," too. The "economics of abundance" is spouted now so largely and so emptily that the words sound fishy even in the mouth of an honest man. But De Kruif was neither scholar nor politician nor do-gooder. He was a fighter. His interests lay in the sciences of life and death, where "want in the midst of plenty" was not a slick phrase but a red-hot symbol of pine coffins in the midst of all the means of abundant health, child bodies racked by disease and twisted by starvation, and a staggering vulnerability to whatever "bug," like the influenza of 1918, may decide to go on a rampage.

So the discovery was hell for De Kruif, and so he does his level best to make it hell for his readers. He doesn't find much he can do about it, except to shout as loud as he can about the life-saving and health-giving knowledge on one side of the wall of dollar-marks, and the sick and dying human beings on the other. He has the reporter's faith that if he can just shout simply and explicitly and soundly enough, perhaps the people who live in the sun on top of the wall, or the people who die in the shadow below the wall, may do something aobut it. And himself, he loves the sun, as he loves blue water and Bacardi and Beethoven.

He takes his—all four of them—in a cabin on the dunes outside Holland, Michigan. Nobody could take that cabin from him. Only, he says, there's enough sun for everybody, and enough blue water, or purple hills as preferred, and enough Bacardi can be made—or Scotch, or certainly enough clean, rich, pasteurized milk to go round to all the babies in the world; and enough Beethoven for everyone to have it, even in those now expensive record sets, or in that too-costly machine he has, that changes any kind of record without interrupting a high-ball or a thought. All the "have-nots," he says, could have the equivalent of such things, each to his own taste, and he could still keep all that goes with his "deep blue water and light blue sky," and all the "haves" could still keep theirs. Then, he says, why should ordinary sunlight be a privilege bought with money? — That's the type; artistic, or maybe scientific. Impractical.

He started out as a scientist, before the writing bug bit him—like the smallpox, says a school-mate, or maybe like a fever. And apparently, judging by what others say who studied at Ann Arbor or worked at Rockefeller Institute, he was a pretty fair scientist for a kid. He was only 32 when the fever reached a permanently acute stage, and he left the lab-table for the portable typewriter, the flivver and the brown study.

De Kruif — Paul Henry de Kruif — was born March 2, 1890, at Zeeland, not many miles from the blue water where his present cottage stands. His father was a prosperous manufacturer, a Dutchman, of course. Somehow, perhaps unreasonably, De Kruif reminds one of another famous Dutchman, likewise big, at once easy and explosive and impatient of shams—Hendrik Van Loon.

At the University of Michigan he studied bacteriology with Novy, and that was enough to make him a student assistant at 22, an assistant professor at 26, a Sanitary Corps lieutenant and then captain overseas at 27, a Rockefeller Institute bacteriologist at 30. He made the first prophylactic injections of gas gangrene serum. He worked at the Institut Pasteur, where Felix d'Herelle was studying the bacteriophage that, along with the quirks of many noted men, figures in "Arrowsmith." Up to 1922, his writings are listed only in the scientific indexes. In that year the writing fever erupted in "Our Medicine Men." In 1925 he collaborated with Sinclair Lewis on "Arrowsmith." And just 10 years ago he turned out "Microbe Hunters," which, with its companion volumes, forthwith became as indispensible for the conscientious medical reporter as Shaw's "Dramatic Opinions and Essays" for the conscientious reviewer.

Possibly he's done more for science than ever he could if he'd stuck at his lab-table. And it should be pointed out that not merely the writing fever, but a passionate loyalty to the scientific spirit, led him out of science. On the one side, even in a lab-hound's heaven he found what struck him as unseemly applause for facades rather than foundations; on the other, he found in print a way to hold up the spirit of honest science for the understanding of multitudes—and perhaps the faith of eager lads who may one day (if the money wall allows) be real men against death.

SCIENTIFIC men differ about him. He "dramatizes" science, they all say, and some of them say it with a sneer. Once a wholly first-class scientist literally hid from De Kruif, solely because he did not want to be dramatized—but he had nothing to say against De Kruif's method, for others. Some of them have had their toes stepped on, rudely, and some of them had it coming. But the finest scientists this reporter knows, the most icily contemptuous of scientific showmen, think that De Kruif does a pretty good job.

Knowing his sources and his facts, including those that even his old comrades do not tell him outright, they say he "dramatizes" only at first hand, getting next to the microbe hunters themselves—over a lab-table or over a cocktail—getting out of them and putting into print the human thing, the grubbing and devotion and weariness and hope and silly little oversights and fortunate hunches hidden under the dry reports at the meetings. Therein he has changed rather his subject matter than his method, for now he digs for the significant truth in the man—which is inevitably dramatic—where formerly, in the laboratory, he grubbed for the significant truth in things.

In that he has the help of a great many fortuitous gifts, and perhaps it would be fair to go back and say that hundreds of other youngsters also studied bacteriology with Novy at Ann Arbor, and not all of them, like De Kruif, became real researchers in their twenties. Among those gifts is the fire—the old Dutch fire,

HE BUILT the WORLD'S GREATEST ARMY

MOSCOW.

LIKE many other great leaders in history Klementy E. Voroshiloff, Commissar of the Red Army of Russia, is of humble origin. Born a Cossack peasant 55 years ago, he is still called "Klem" by his friends and admirers. Without formal military training, he nevertheless stands out pre-eminently today as one of the foremost military strategists in the world and is prepared to defend a nation of 170,000,000 with an army of some 1,500,000 men, armed and trained in modern warfare.

Believing that attacks against Russia on both the Asiatic and European fronts are inevitable, Voroshiloff has been chiefly instrumental in forming the powerful Red Army and Navy. Insofar as numerical strength is concerned the standing Red Army is reputed to have no equal.

A genuine war lord at present, Voroshiloff not only built up the present large army, but also ordered the manufacture of such destructive equipment as untold thousands of tanks. He has also brought into existence one of the great air armadas of the world. Russia now has restored military titles. The Red Army is like every other army in the matter of organization, the officers being graded as Colonels, Captains, Majors, Lieutenants, etc.

At the present time Voroshiloff is "Marshal of the Soviet Union," and Dictator Josef Stalin's right-hand man. He gained this appellation in 1925 after Trotzky had been dismissed; Voroshiloff was summoned to Moscow and entrusted with the command of the Moscow military district.

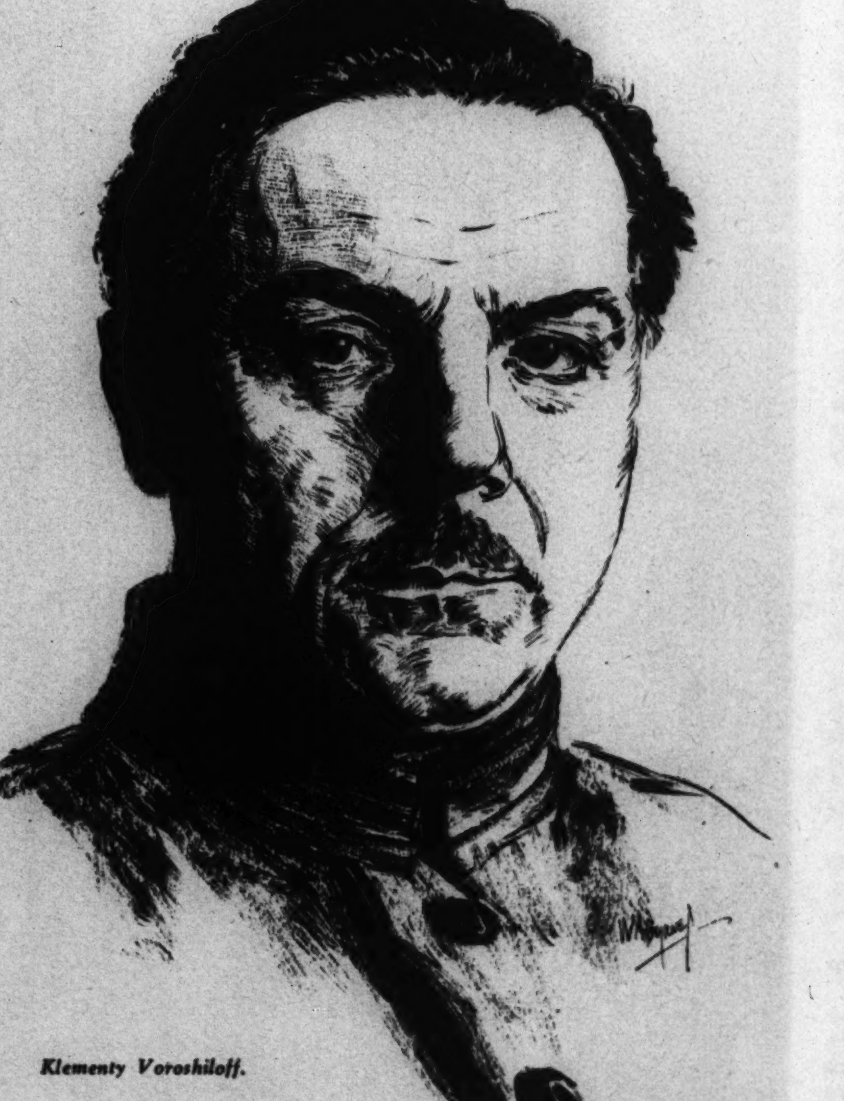
Voroshiloff's life battle is the picture of a man of strong purpose unwilling to be thwarted until he took his place among the leaders of his people. Born and raised among the peasants, he understands them. Heroic actions in past battles have thrown a martial glamor around him that attracts men of the soldier type to the cause he chooses to defend with the sword if diplomatic overtures fail.

At the age of seven Voroshiloff was working in a mine, buried almost as deeply in the lower stratum of human society as the ore he dug. Taught in his early years to hate the sight of a uniform and never given the simplest rudiments of military training and discipline, he now, ironically enough, heads a human fighting machine that the Kremlin confidently believes is second to none in the world.

The fact that Voroshiloff was not going to remain quiescent for long became evident when at the age of 17 he took part in a labor disturbance in an iron foundry in Lugansk, his native town, and was soundly thrashed by the police for his protestations. Far from dispirited by the first trouncing, he came back for more at the age of 22 and joined the Social Democratic Party of Russia.

VOROSHILOFF fought for his ideals in the revolution of 1905, but the Czar quickly quelled the outburst and the present war lord had to flee for his life and remain in hiding. Eluding capture, which at the time would have meant execution, he met Lenin at a secret conference several years later. Only 27 years old, he won the admiration of the older revolutionist and was told to return to the industrial center of Lugansk, await instructions and secretly spread revolutionary propaganda.

The trip to Lugansk proved to be one of the most decisive steps in Voroshiloff's career. Quick to realize that a natural leader was in their midst, the workers of Lugansk rallied to his support, and secret military companies for revolt against the Czar were formed. These workers were to give important service when the Bolsheviks overthrew the Kerensky government in 1917.



Klementy Voroshiloff.

Later, in combination with Stalin, Voroshiloff was to successfully defend Tsarytsin, now Stalingrad, in the Volga area, against the White armies, which attempted to capture it after the Bolshevik revolution.

In such a crisis the power of persuasion was as greatly in demand as was military ability and Voroshiloff possessed both qualities. He is considered an excellent orator in his mother tongue. Men, it is said, responded to his appeals wherever he went.

But a more intimate picture of Voroshiloff is gained from the story of Rudolph Hmelnitsky, now a General of the Soviet Army. The latter, shortly after joining the Bolshevist forces in 1919, was placed in a company of troops under Voroshiloff's command.

In an armored train filled with proletarian soldiers, Voroshiloff, or "Klem" as they all called him then, was sent to the town of Koristovka. Hmelnitsky was one of the proletarian soldiers.

They had no sooner reached Koristovka than counter revolutionaries in greatly superior numbers besieged them. Faced with annihilation, Voroshiloff had to think quickly. He telegraphed proclamations and requests for imaginary reinforcements that were supposed to be nearby, when in reality the nearest reinforcements were hundreds of miles away. The messages got to the counter-revolutionary opposition, quite as they were supposed to, and the Whites retired in some confusion, thinking that they were soon to be slaughtered by attacks from the rear.

At Alexandria, a town a short distance from Koristovka, the enemy was still in command. Voroshiloff led a band of 46 men against this stronghold.

His men were gradually clearing the tracks of foes when a giant enemy lunged at Hmelnitsky from a hiding place and might have run him through with a bayonet but for the personal bravery of "Klem," who, seeing the surprise attack, sprang at the big man, knocked down his rifle and engaged him.

Before the others could act, Voroshiloff was overpowered and his own pistol was turned against his chest by his burly enemy.

Voroshiloff stuck his thumb under the hammer of the trigger, preventing the giant from killing him; then he had an opportunity to shoot two bullets into his burly enemy and finish him off.

As the year 1925 signalized the decline of Trotzky, it also heralded the ascendancy of Voroshiloff, who since has climbed steadily into prominence.

Stalin and other Russian leaders no longer believe that the proletariat can be defended with an olive branch, and Voroshiloff's military genius is relied upon to protect the widely scattered Communist strongholds from invaders.

THIS defender of Russia is a tall, handsome man of stern demeanor, giving every minute of his life and every ounce of his energy to the advancement of his country.

He has won the devotion of the people. On his fiftieth birthday he was presented with three gifts bought by public subscription. The first was a dirigible, the second several combat planes and the third a submarine. To further honor him on his birthday, the town of Lugansk, where he was born, was renamed Voroshilovsk. Throughout the Soviet Union numerous organizations and buildings are also named after him.

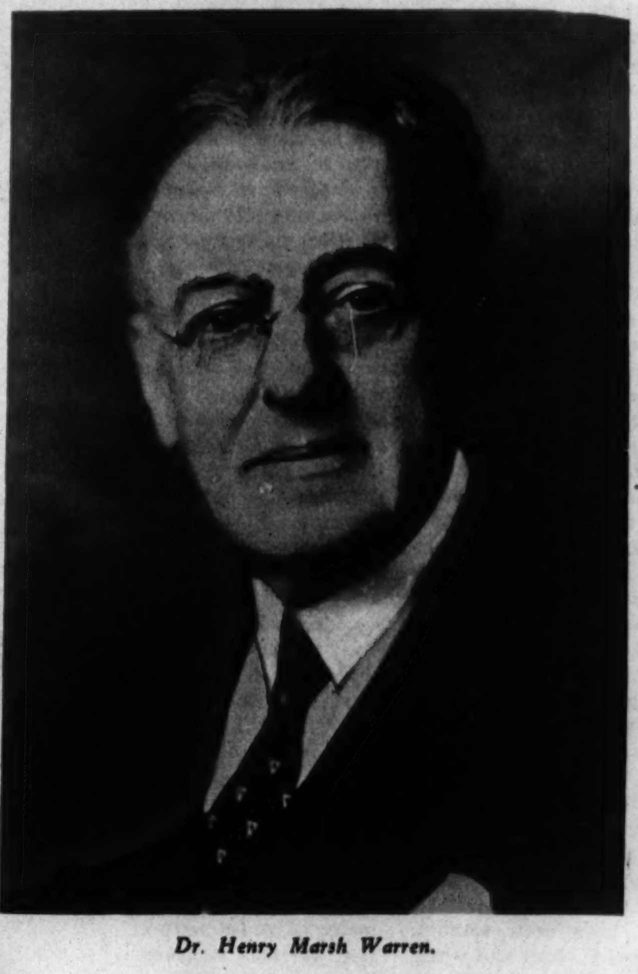
For the populace, taught by the Soviet press that a capitalist invasion of Russia may come at any hour, looks to Voroshiloff as a prospective saviour. Hard-eyed and unsmiling though he is, they cheer him wildly nevertheless. On his turnip-shaped Red Army helmet are three Soviet medals, the Order of Lenin, the Order of the Red Banner and the Order of Labor Red Banner.

Regardless of whether one agrees or disagrees with his political principles his own history bespeaks resourcefulness and personal courage.

TALKING WOULD-BE SUICIDES OUT of IT

Miss L. B. Bonnell.

Dr. Henry Marsh Warren Says His Save-a-Life League Saves an Average of 1000 Persons a Year From Death.



Dr. Henry Marsh Warren.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

NEW YORK.

DURING the worst of the depression the time most frequently chosen for suicide was 11 o'clock Tuesday morning. Why?

According to Dr. Henry Marsh Warren, an expert on the subject, the reason blue Monday is avoided by men and women who've decided in favor of "not to be," is that Sunday papers are full of promise for the unemployed. On Mondays they go forth to try again. On Tuesdays, still jobless, they give up the struggle during the empty hour before lunch time.

After 30 years of concentration on the suicide question, Dr. Warren is still innocent of callousness. Talking about the causes for America's more than 22,000 suicides a year, he says he believes that if the despondent would simply wait until 11 o'clock Wednesday and think it over, they would change their minds and decide to live. Twenty-four hours of consideration or 10 minutes' talk with him would, Dr. Warren is convinced, prevent even the most desperate from carrying through. He is eternally miserable to think of the number he misses. His National Save-a-Life League claims to have argued 30,000 persons out of committing suicide since its founding in 1906. That happens to be about the number known to have committed suicide in New York City since the league was started. Of course one has to discount this claim somewhat since vital statistics are notoriously inaccurate in listing suicides (naturally confusing many of them with homicides and often giving surviving relatives of dead men the benefit of the doubt), while Dr. Warren has certainly been approached by numerous earnestly melancholy souls who merely toyed with the idea and never could have summoned the courage to carry it out.

But whether or not the principle that all would-be suicides can be saved is a sound one, the idea has spread to all parts of the country and enlists the assistance of men prominent in all walks of life.

The league has numbered among its directors such men as Professor Irving Fisher (economist, prohibitionist), Dr. Royal S. Copeland (United States Senator), the late Rev. Dr. Charles H. Parkhurst (militant reformer) and the late Dr. David Starr Jordan (university president and author).

Many thousands of desperate individuals have recovered control of themselves through its confessional system and whether all would actually have committed suicide without it, is a matter of conjecture. "Nearly all suicides are preventable," Dr. Warren asserts. "I don't believe all such persons are mentally deranged. Possibly one-third are. But the temptation to commit suicide is more frequent than most people believe. It is like seasickness. The more it is suppressed the worse it is. It must out! There are comparatively few suicides among Roman Catholics. The confessional is the preventive. I am a confessional. It's probably because I am a total stranger to most of those who come to me that I have achieved some degree of success."

Dr. Warren's assurance of absolute secrecy and his manifestly sincere interest in the problems laid before him cause those who come to him to unburden themselves frankly and fearlessly. Psychiatrists admit that mere confession is a valuable part of a psychiatric cure.

"Usually external events merely intensify latent disturbances and provide the immediate provocation in any given case," says the Encyclopedia of Social Sciences. "To understand suicides therefore one must uncover the basic causes of psychic conflict. The usual explanation given in suicide notes cannot be accepted, because they are rationalizations covering up powerful buried impulses. Abnormal grief at the loss of a loved one, jealousy, marital difficulties, infidelity, desertion, family discord, pride, remorse and shame are but symptoms of difficulty in personal adjustment.

"Far more fundamental forces are fear and anxiety, feelings of inferiority, hatred, aggressiveness, revenge, guilt and other mental disorders that prevent people from attaining emotional maturity. Psychoanalysts, who have given the most satisfactory explanation of how these emotions drive individuals to despair and suicide, have shown that the way to prevent them is to build up each personality through self-discipline so that it can adapt itself readily to life's demands. The individual who is able to accept the exigencies of fortune with equanimity will not find it necessary to choose suicide as the only solution of seemingly insurmountable difficulties."

THIS scientific view doesn't entirely coincide with Dr. Warren's principles, though the friendly interest and even the scoldings he serves up to the harassed may be a method of offsetting the "powerful buried impulses" and convincing the would-be suicide that the immediate problem which seems insurmountable is actually less valid than his distorted emotions made him think it. Dr. Warren, though a former Baptist clergyman (once pastor of Central Park Church in New York and now director of the Fundamental Bible Institute), doesn't always resort to religious motives in dissuading the desperate. Usually he gives the "patient" his 14 reasons to answer the query, "Why should I not destroy my life, if I wish?" These are:

1. Because you would be doing the most sinful thing possible.
2. Because how do you know you won't have to begin life in the next world where you leave it here?
3. Because you would be a murderer.
4. Because you would be like a soldier who deserted his post of duty.
5. Because you would cruelly cause sorrow and humiliation to your family and friends.
6. Because your life in this world is regarded as a sacred trust.
7. Because you should not set such a terrible example before the world.
8. Because you would be considered a coward and a quitter.
9. Because many have overcome greater obstacles than you have.
10. Because you might be unsuccessful and become an invalid for life.
11. Because if you overcome this temptation you may be able to help others similarly tempted.
12. Because tomorrow may bring you what you most desire.
13. Because life is short—you may die any day.
14. Because as you seriously look at this question from any viewpoint you or any one can see how wrong it would be to take such a fearful risk.

Of course would-be suicides might answer all this by saying that suicide is not specifically forbidden anywhere in the Bible. They seldom do, however. Usually having rationalized themselves into a state of mind where they ruminated on killing themselves, they are only too eager to have some one rationalize them out of it.

The league now receives thousands of letters from dejected unfortunates who want to be saved by mail. Dr. Warren aswers them from his home, while his assistant director, Miss Lona B. Bonnell, a graying middle-aged spinster, takes care of the interviews. The doctor is 76 now, too old to receive his hundreds of callers. The walls of the league's office at 299 Madison avenue are plastered over with grateful or despairing letters and with biblical quotations relating to the sanctity of human life.

The first question one is likely to ask is: How does the league come in contact with those who are about to commit suicide?

Most of the contacts are made through people who know about the league and recommend it much as they might recommend a hair dresser or a chiropractor. Physicians send patients. Articles in newspapers and magazines give the idea to readers in whom the subconscious urge is already at play, persuade them to try the league rather than the gas.

The league also does research work. Dr. Warren, who attended Colgate University, Union Theological Seminary, Oxford University, Heidelberg, Harriman University and Temple University, holds a Ph. D. as well as a D. D. degree. It also seeks to suppress the sale of firearms and poisons. It is particularly active in attempts to ban so-called "noxious" books. Dr. Warren would like to see the works of Arthur Schopenhauer, the German pessimistic philosopher, universally burned. The doctrine of free will is anathema to the league, since it leads to the conclusion that a man's life is his own, to preserve or destroy as he likes.

IT MAY be more than a coincidence that the German-speaking peoples have the highest suicide rates. Austria ranks first with its excessive rate of 39.9 per 100,000 population in 1930. Germany itself comes second with 27.8 the same year. Even the peaceful Swiss (only partially German-speaking) have a rate of 26.1, which can't be explained, as in the cases of the two others, by allusion to the World War, the Treaty of Versailles and the excessive effects of a 20-year depression. All three German-speaking countries have higher rates than Japan, where suicide waves are epidemic, and much higher ones than the United States, where the rate dropped from the 17.7 peak in 1915 to 15.9 in 1933. Suicide scares in the United States are usually exaggerations. Mortality figures are gathered and passed along during the time of year when the rate is highest (the spring) and estimates on this basis are never upheld when the Bureau of the Census figures come out three years later. Irish women and Negro women are the groups least susceptible to suicide for some reason. In most groups three times many men women comm suicide and in group area race is suicide dangerous to so ciety as cance heart disease o tuberculosis.

The Save- Life League less concerne with such gen eralizations tha with particula instances o tragedy whic could have bee prevented. I files bristle wit stories of su cides prompte by trivial annoy ances. A ma blew his brain out because now suit didn' fit. A wife too poison becaus her husband wa frank about he pie. A Democra killed himsel when his wif wouldn't vote th ticket. One co ple committe joint suicide during a squabble over the expense of a slate for their child—nine cents; while another couple died in bitterness unable to compromise the question o how far the bedroom window should be opened. Dr. Warren can cite victims aged 5 and others aged 100.

On the whole he doesn't agree wit the popular axiom that all suicide are arrant cowards; he thinks th final act generally requires a great deal of courage. He also inveigh against the notion that anyone wh would come to his organization t forestall suicide is likely to be a frau —possibly someone who needs mone and knows of his soft heart.

HE IS certain that most of th people who come to him—clients, he calls them—are un able to make up their minds. Per haps they have found no reasons o their own why suicide isn't the onl way out and come to the league fo arguments for the other side. It i possible to be logically a pessimist an optimist. All contemplation o suicide is hedged with doubts.

That is why so many suicides resul from loneliness—the lack of a friend' contagious better moods—or from th impulse of a moment. The case tha first called Dr. Warren's attention t the suicide problem was that of beautiful girl who came to New Yor to marry and found her fiance alread married; she brooded in a hotel roo and finally jumped. Soon afterward the clergyman preached to a selec congregation in the Fifth avenue hotel suggesting that anyone contemplat ing taking his life come to him first The sermon was published in Monda papers and 10 well-to-do men calle on him next day for counsel.

Impulsive suicides are the common est variety, according to this expert "Impulse is dreadful," he says. "It' the reason for the enormous numbe of jumping suicides—from subwa platforms or buildings. People kno that there are more painless, certai deaths and easier ones. But poison and gas—the old-fashioned methods require a certain amount of arrang ment and delay. They jump on impulse." He recites a case in which a wife suddenly took poison during a heated argument with her husband— apparently that anxious to have th last word. Dr. Warren is certain sh hadn't intended to commit suicide— though the rooted subconscious cau may have brought the thought to th surface momentarily. He says mos child suicides come about in the sam way—a stifled hunger for revenge a pity, the "you'll-be-sorry-when-I'm-dead" kind of reaction. This, too would not be dangerous save for th momentary state of unbalance Dr Warren calls impulse.

The most unpleasant experience th league has had with this sort of thin happened to Miss Bonnell.

A man walked into her consultatio room, sat down to tell her what wa on his mind, finished his hard luc story and suddenly made a dash fo the window. She didn't follow him just said in a collected, patient voic well stiffened with authority, "You si down there, and be still!" He obeyed The league doesn't know of any cas in which a client whom they won bac to life later changed his mind. D Warren says he doesn't want to hea of one; thanks God he never has.

withstanding the absence of courtin' actions, and Scott had his, based only on the whisperin' that had come to his attention, but nobody knew anything for sure until about the middle of June. Then, when Winnie and Cindy were together and nobody else was around, Cindy said: "Winnie, I've got something to tell you," and Winnie knew what was coming. "Me and Fuller are goin' to get married," Cindy continued, "and I'm goin' home with him."

Winnie thought Cindy was too young, for she won't be 16 until next October. "You don't know how it will turn out when you marry so young," said wise Winnie, "and I think you ought to wait." Cindy said waiting was the last thing they were planning to do and Winnie said no more. Then Potter came to her and asked her if she would care if he married her sister and she told him that she wouldn't, except that Cindy was so young. Perceiving that Potter was not moved by her argument and knowing that, after all, Cindy was within her rights if she chose to be married at 15, because the law of Tennessee permits marriage at 12, she accepted the situation and told her mother, who made no objection. As the mother of seven daughters, six of whom had married and gone away, she could reconcile herself to the going of the seventh.

Difference in social status was not considered or even apprehended. All that she knew about Potter's family was that she understood, from what the young man had said, that they, as she expressed it, lived well and had plenty. That was what she understood by wealth.

So, then, it was understood, and accepted, that Potter would marry Cindy and they would go away to his people whenever it suited his convenience. It suited his convenience to be married in two weeks. On a Friday they drove away to Newport, Scott going along, and obtained the license.

THEY had intended to go back to Hartford and be married by Preacher Louis Cates, but as they sat in the car in front of the courthouse, Preacher Henry McMillan, brother-in-law of Cindy, who lives in McMillan Settlement but happened to be in town, came and poked his head in through the window and asked them if they were going to let him tie them up. Potter said Newport was as good a place as any for a marriage. So, at the suggestion of the preacher, they went to the home of Ed Ogle, a friend of his, at the edge of town, and there the ceremony was performed.

Back at Cane Holler the bride's packing was quickly accomplished, for she had no trousseau, and that night they started on their way to New York. If the Potter family had misgivings, Cindy seems to have laughed them away, for Fuller's father, early in August, gave out an announcement of the marriage and said he approved of the union. It seems, too, that Cindy won the heart of Fuller's mother, for she wrote back to her own mother: "Fuller's mother is sweet. I sure do like her." It is understood, though, that the couple will not stay in New York. When they went away Potter said that they would be back in September to live in Hartford and travel often the trail of Cane Holler, where the artist found his merry little mountain maid and taught her how to love.

parts of the world and was able to change his course at will to assist in epidemics or other situations in which he could be particularly valuable. Hookworm was his chief text. It was the entering wedge for the foundation in countries where medical practice was conspicuously behind medical knowledge. He became what he calls "a drummer of ideas." He would go to one place to learn new methods, to another to disseminate them.

The Japanese would want to know how to transmit their vast statistical and laboratory information into public health treatment. In Canton they asked him how to disband an army and he had the soldiers put to work destroying the waterfront wall, a serious menace to health. At Hongkong he ended a long-standing feud between the university and the health service, which was stultifying medical knowledge and practice there. In British North Borneo he persuaded the Governor to decree that only unpolished rice be served on the plantations, a measure the health department had been trying to force on the planters for years, since unpolished rice prevents beriberi. He visited Sir Charles Vyner Brooke, "the White Rajah" of Sarawak, but could never persuade this despot that health mattered. In Java and the Federated Malay States he persuaded the reactionary rulers to permit the Rockefeller Foundation to establish bases for the study of malaria.

His life was frequently adventurous; he was forever in and out of plague-ridden districts, savage countries; he was frequently in conflict with the prejudices of stubborn colonial governors and backward kings. His duties were multifarious. He saved the life of the present King of England and sent the present President of the Philippines to Baltimore for an operation. He gently persuaded the British to start a native medical school in the Fiji Islands, where the children of cannibals became brilliant physicians. He calmly told the shocked King of Siam that his vaunted medical school was the poorest he had ever seen, and persuaded him to take heroic measures to improve it. In general his role was that of a missionary, a persuader. He rounded the world 16 times in 19 years, making surveys and proposing programs.

For these services he might have achieved fortune and a chest encrusted with decorations and orders.

He avoided honors save those which might be of use to medicine, positions as consultant of medical associations throughout the world. In 1934 he decided to retire. He was 61 and finally had become tired of the endless trek. His resignation was acknowledged by a warm congratulatory letter from his friend, John D. Rockefeller Jr. He settled down to review his life and write his autobiography. One has the impression that he might have filled 10 volumes without exhausting the subject or his readers.

few are bought, but expenses in this direction are kept very low. The entire wardrobe of 11,000 numbered costumes—all of them simple and economical—was made by the group. In 1932, the Rose Valley Association, of which Deeter owns 80 per cent, bought the theater at a bargain and the carrying charges today are less than the rent was before.

The enterprise at Hedgerow is entirely co-operative; there are no stars. An actor may be a lead one night and find his chore that of chopping wood the next morning.

Of the group of 22 full-time people, every one does a share of the manual labor of washing dishes, doing the laundry in a newly-acquired second-hand laundry machine, and making the beds. There is a hired cook, Harriet Moore by name, who is a character in herself. Eighty-four years old and acting member of the original company, "Moore," as she is called, was most effective in keeping off bill collectors in the leaner years.

Sixteen hours of work a day is a fair average for the group of 22, since there is plenty of work to be done in the house and theater outside of rehearsing and acting. In spite of this heavy work schedule, Hedgerow is besieged by applications to join the group. Jasper Deeter selects the personnel himself and prefers inexperienced people. After three months' trial he gives a promising applicant a three-year contract, with Deeter guardian of his destiny.

"It is a one-sided contract," Deeter explained, "and I admit it. But the Provincetown experience taught me that a theater must be directed by one man. I choose the actors and the plays. In the choice of plays I try to be as catholic as possible. I admit that our repertory errs on the side of having too little farce and not enough straight poetry. When I see our programs getting too highbrow, I sway to the other extreme and sometimes make the error of giving just an ordinary show.

"WE NOW do four originals a year because we find we can afford them. We are offered many manuscripts and read about 500 a year.

"Often I have been asked to explain the principles on which I work. I can only say that I have no fear of style but that I see no point in using a style that is not related to the content. I use the musical method of directing. In the commercial theater Guthrie McClintic is the only one who employs it. Other directors use the architectural or idea method."

Born in Mechanicsburg, Pennsylvania, Deeter started out by being a newspaper man in Harrisburg. During the summer he cooked in order to earn a living while studying the theater at Chatauqua, New York. After joining the Provincetown Players, he first attracted attention as Smithers in "Emperor Jones." During a subsequent engagement on Broadway, he was fired from the cast of "The Better 'Ole" for constant "adlibbing" about the low salaries for actors.

He has also tried his hand at being a sculptor, a ballet master, a musician, and a lecturer on cultural subjects. Primarily he remains the director and teacher; to his pupils, he is genius, made even more worthy of worship by his many eccentricities, such as wearing unwashed duck pants, cutting his unruly hair very seldom, and refusing to abide by any of the rules of conventional attire.

His company has taken two extended tours, one in the fall of 1934, the other in the winter of 1935. On the first tour, the company traveled 8000 miles, visited 15 states, gave 76 performances, and were listened to by 65,000 persons, many of whom had never before seen a play. On the second tour the company traveled 18,500 miles by bus, gave 137 performances to 122,600 persons and had all sorts of adventures in far parts of the "stix."

most likely—that always makes him want to go off half-cocked, but always drives him back for another look at his facts. New York chokes him. It's not big enough for all his energy. When he has to stay there, as he used to in winter, he walks—mostly runs—four miles a day. Wake Robin, the De Kruifs' cottage on the dunes, is fitted up now so they can dig in there in splendid isolation from the first snow to the first robin, while their guests arrive in state, preceded by the communal snow-plow.

At the end of that trail are hot toddies and champagne and music, wood-chopping and sawing—before the snows come, icy swimming—Rhine wine and Bohemian sausages, fine brandy and Beethoven. Inevitably, De Kruif's passions are the Eroica and the Ninth.

Great comfort, and great loafing, follow terrific work, professional and physical. The De Kruifs started the place as a one-room shack a few years ago, fought off the surf with sandbags and nailed down the dunes with jack-pines, added a room here and a comfort there until the place is a Sybarite's dream (with ultra-modern improvements), while yet it fits the dunes like a glove.

Of all his gifts, it seems possible that Rhea is the greatest. His latest book is not dedicated, as usual, to her. It is "In collaboration with Rhea de Kruif." Actually, he says she's been his chief collaborator since they were married, Dec. 11, 1922. She was Rhea Barbarin of Freeland, Michigan, a bacteriologist. A wire to him for material on himself brought a half-page about her. (Such material is, deliberately, not available, and this is apparently the first published sketch of him outside of Who's Who.) They're working now on a piece about the great Russian physiologist, Ivan Pavlov, with the tentative title, "A Man Against Greed." And it seems a pertinent item of character that his wire wound up, "Don't pull your punches!"

POST-DISPATCH PASTE-UPS

A New Feature

By WALTER DAHLGREN

Here's the Hurdy-Gurdy Man,
His name's Mike, the monkey's Dan.
Put him together and paste him tight,
Follow directions and you'll be right.

Now he'll play most any tune
But for music, you must croon.
As Mike is playing, his monkey, Dan,
Will beg pennies like a little man!

DIRECTIONS: First mount all pieces upon light cardboard except the bellows of the accordion. Cut on the outside of the heavy lines (don't forget to cut out the two holes "B, B") and fold on dotted lines. Paste the quarter circles bearing a star (a star indicates paste) to the under side of the walk. Paste the monkey on the space for him, left white.

Now fold the accordion so that it is like the picture. Fold the two strips "A, A" and paste to the stars on the accordion.

Put your thumb and index finger through the holes "B, B" and through the strips on the accordion. By working fingers together and apart it will seem that Mike is playing.

BUGBURG

THE CHARACTERS

O. HUM—A very hungry opossum.
BUNGALOW BEN—A tramp turtle.
QUEEN PANTRY—The aunt ruler of Bugburg.

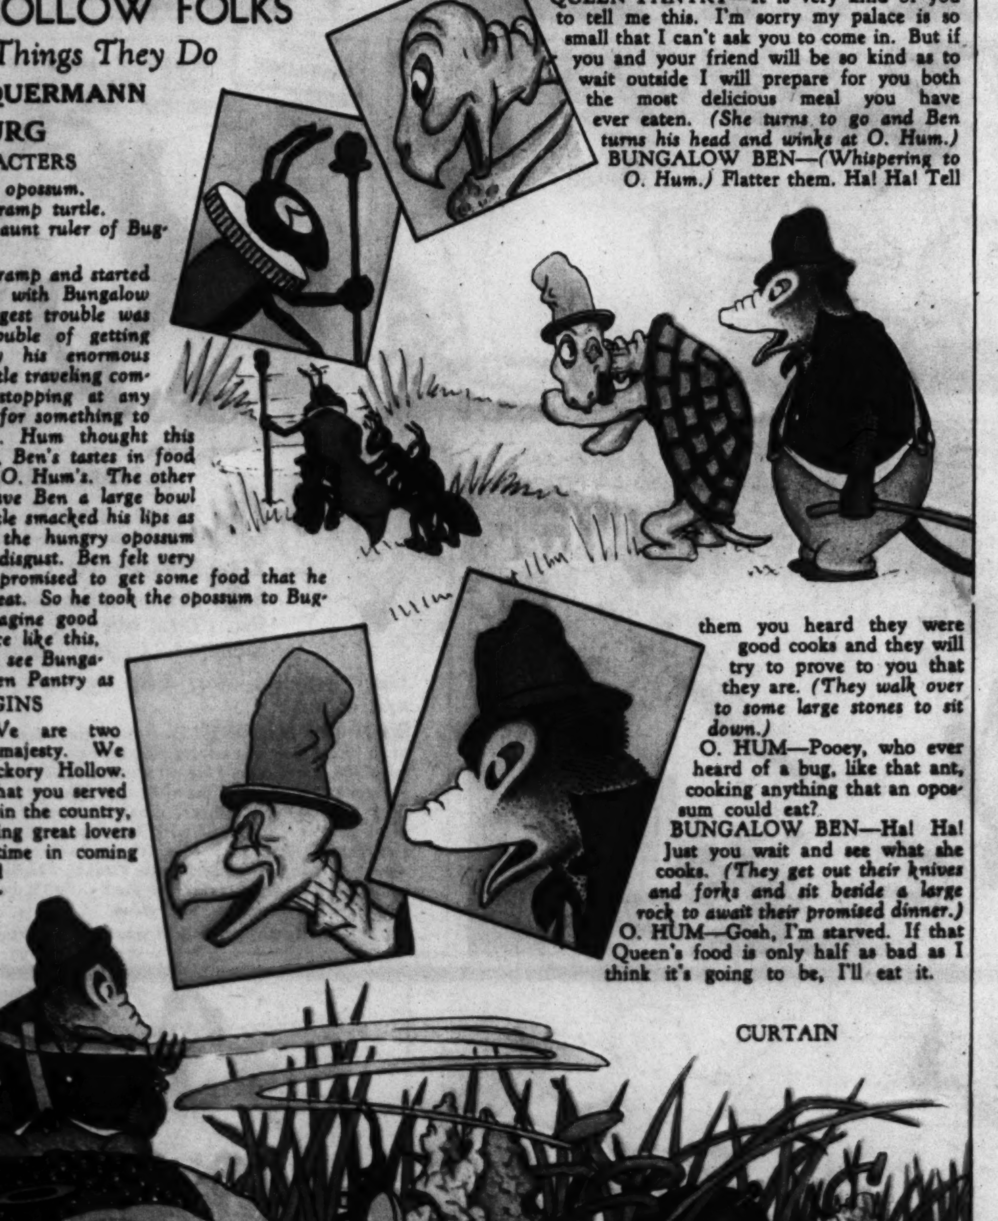
When O. Hum became a tramp and started hiking over the country with Bungalow Ben, he thought his biggest trouble was over. That was the trouble of getting enough food to satisfy his enormous appetite. You see, his turtle traveling companion had a way of stopping at any kitchen door and asking for something to eat—and getting it. O. Hum thought this was wonderful. But alas, Ben's tastes in food were very different from O. Hum's. The other day a kind lady frog gave Ben a large bowl of earth worms. The turtle smacked his lips as he devoured them, but the hungry opossum turned his head away in disgust. Ben felt very sorry for O. Hum and promised to get some food that he thought they both could eat. So he took the opossum to Bugburg. O. Hum can't imagine good food coming from a place like this, but he says nothing. We see Bungalow Ben talking to Queen Pantry as

THE PLAY BEGINS

BUNGALOW BEN—We are two weary travelers, your majesty. We come from far-away Hickory Hollow. Word reached us there that you served the most wonderful food in the country, and my friend and I, being great lovers of good food, lost no time in coming here, hoping you would let us sample your wonderful cooking.



QUEEN PANTRY—It is very kind of you to tell me this. I'm sorry my palace is so small that I can't ask you to come in. But if you and your friend will be so kind as to wait outside I will prepare for you both the most delicious meal you have ever eaten. (She turns to go and Ben turns his head and winks at O. Hum.)

BUNGALOW BEN—(Whispering to O. Hum.) Flatter them. Ha! Ha! Tell them you heard they were good cooks and they will try to prove to you that they are. (They walk over to some large stones to sit down.)

O. HUM—Pooey, who ever heard of a bug, like that ant, cooking anything that an opossum could eat?

BUNGALOW BEN—Ha! Ha! Just you wait and see what she cooks. (They get out their knives and forks and sit beside a large rock to await their promised dinner.)

O. HUM—Gosh, I'm starved. If that Queen's food is only half as bad as I think it's going to be, I'll eat it.

At 3, wanted wealth and fame to buy pony for self, gold bed for mother. Started by way of Al White's dancing school, sang at grammar school in dress so "sophisticated" the seams parted, shocked high school faculty (then no great feat) by solo dance, quit in second year, Broadway bound. Through her sister (Edith Blossom) got job in Ned Wayburn chorus. A bit in "Irene," better in "Tangerine," real chance in "Fantastic Fricassee," first lead in "Bubbling Over," a flop, but her last. To Hollywood with Chevalier in "The Love Parade." Now rich and famous, but, so far as known, no pony, no gold bed.

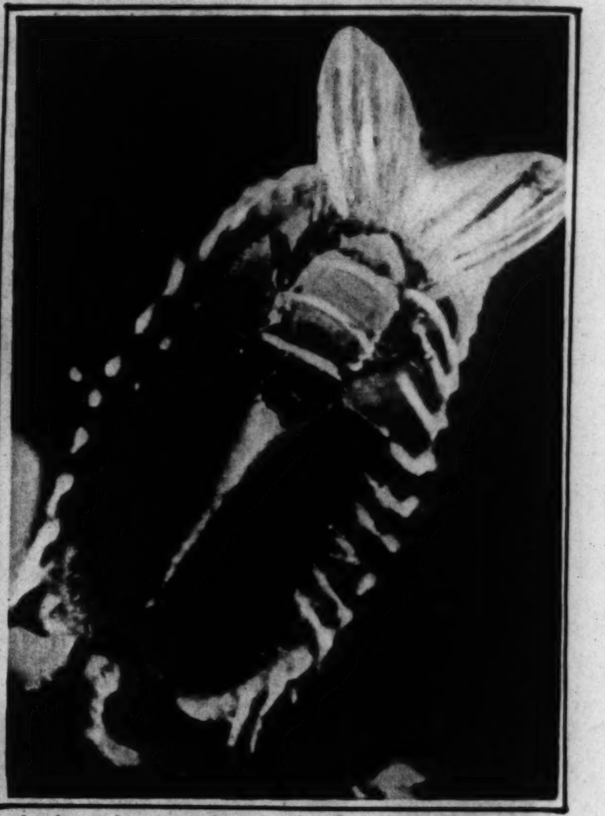
The Venus Flytrap



An insectivorous plant in the Carolinas (Dionaea muscipula) lures flies by an enticing perfume. Here the victim is about to alight.

WHY CORNS COME BACK BIGGER, UGLIER

unless removed Root and All*

Amazing new method removes corn for good

A CORN is deep-rooted. When you cut or pare at home, you merely trim the surface. The root remains imbedded in the toe. Soon the corn comes back bigger, more painful than ever. Feet become ugly, disfigured, with severe danger of infection and blood poisoning.

That's why millions of people are discarding these old-fashioned methods and now use this new easy double-action Blue-Jay method that ends the corn for good.

Pain stops instantly

Blue-Jay, the scientifically medicated pad, first stops the pain instantly, then the entire corn lifts out root and all in 3 short days.

Blue-Jay is a modern scientifically medicated tiny plaster. Not only does it instantly stop the burning torture but it quickly softens, loosens the hard core—in no time removing the entire corn, Root and All. Easy to use, invisible. Held snugly in place by special Wet-Pruf adhesive. Can't stick to stockings. Doesn't make shoes tight. Get Blue-Jay today and completely banish corn torture. 25¢ for package of 6.

SPECIAL PICNIC SANDWICHES MADE WITH HELLMANN'S

Hellmann's Real Mayonnaise is an ideal base for making sandwich fillers—because it blends so perfectly. Here are two examples . . . special for picnics.

PEANUT BUTTER AND ONION

Blend ¼ cup Hellmann's Real Mayonnaise with 1 cup beaten peanut butter. Spread on bread, top with thin onion slices.

DEVILED EGG AND HAM

Blend thoroughly ¼ cup Hellmann's Real Mayonnaise; 2 finely chopped hard-boiled eggs; ½ cup deviled ham and 4 tablespoons diced Fanning's Bread and Butter Pickles. Spread on thinly sliced bread.

SMART LITTLE MARY—SHE KNOWS!

SHE'S heard her mother say so often that no substitute can equal real mayonnaise.

For no ordinary dressing can ever give you the full, rich goodness . . . the tempting, delicious flavor of Hellmann's.

Why? Simply because Hellmann's is all mayonnaise. No starchy fillers! Nothing but finest salad oil, freshly-broken eggs, a specially selected vinegar, and imported spices. That's all. Then it is double-whipped to give it that marvelous, creamy-smooth texture.

If you don't think real mayonnaise makes a world of difference in salads . . . try Hellmann's! It is so good for growing children, too . . . easy to digest, and rich in essential food elements that build strong bodies. Costs but a trifle per serving. Why not get a jar of Hellmann's—tomorrow!

APPLE BASKET SALAD

6 red (striped) apples, medium size; 1 orange, large, diced; ½ cup red or white grapes, seeded and halved; 2 small peaches, peeled and diced; juice of 1 lemon, Fruit Juice Mayonnaise.*

Wash apples and remove top. Scoop out center. Sprinkle with lemon juice to keep from discoloring. Mix together peaches, grapes and orange. Fill cavity of apple with mixture and, if desired, top with cherry or berry. Serve on chilled lettuce cups. Garnish with watercress and small bunch of white grapes. Serve with Fruit Juice Mayonnaise.* Serves 6.

*FRUIT JUICE MAYONNAISE

⅓ cup Hellmann's Real Mayonnaise; ⅓ cup cream, whipped; 2½ tablespoons confectioner's sugar; dash of salt; 1 tablespoon fruit juice.

Fold Hellmann's Real Mayonnaise into whipped cream. Add salt, sugar and fruit juice. Makes 1 cup.

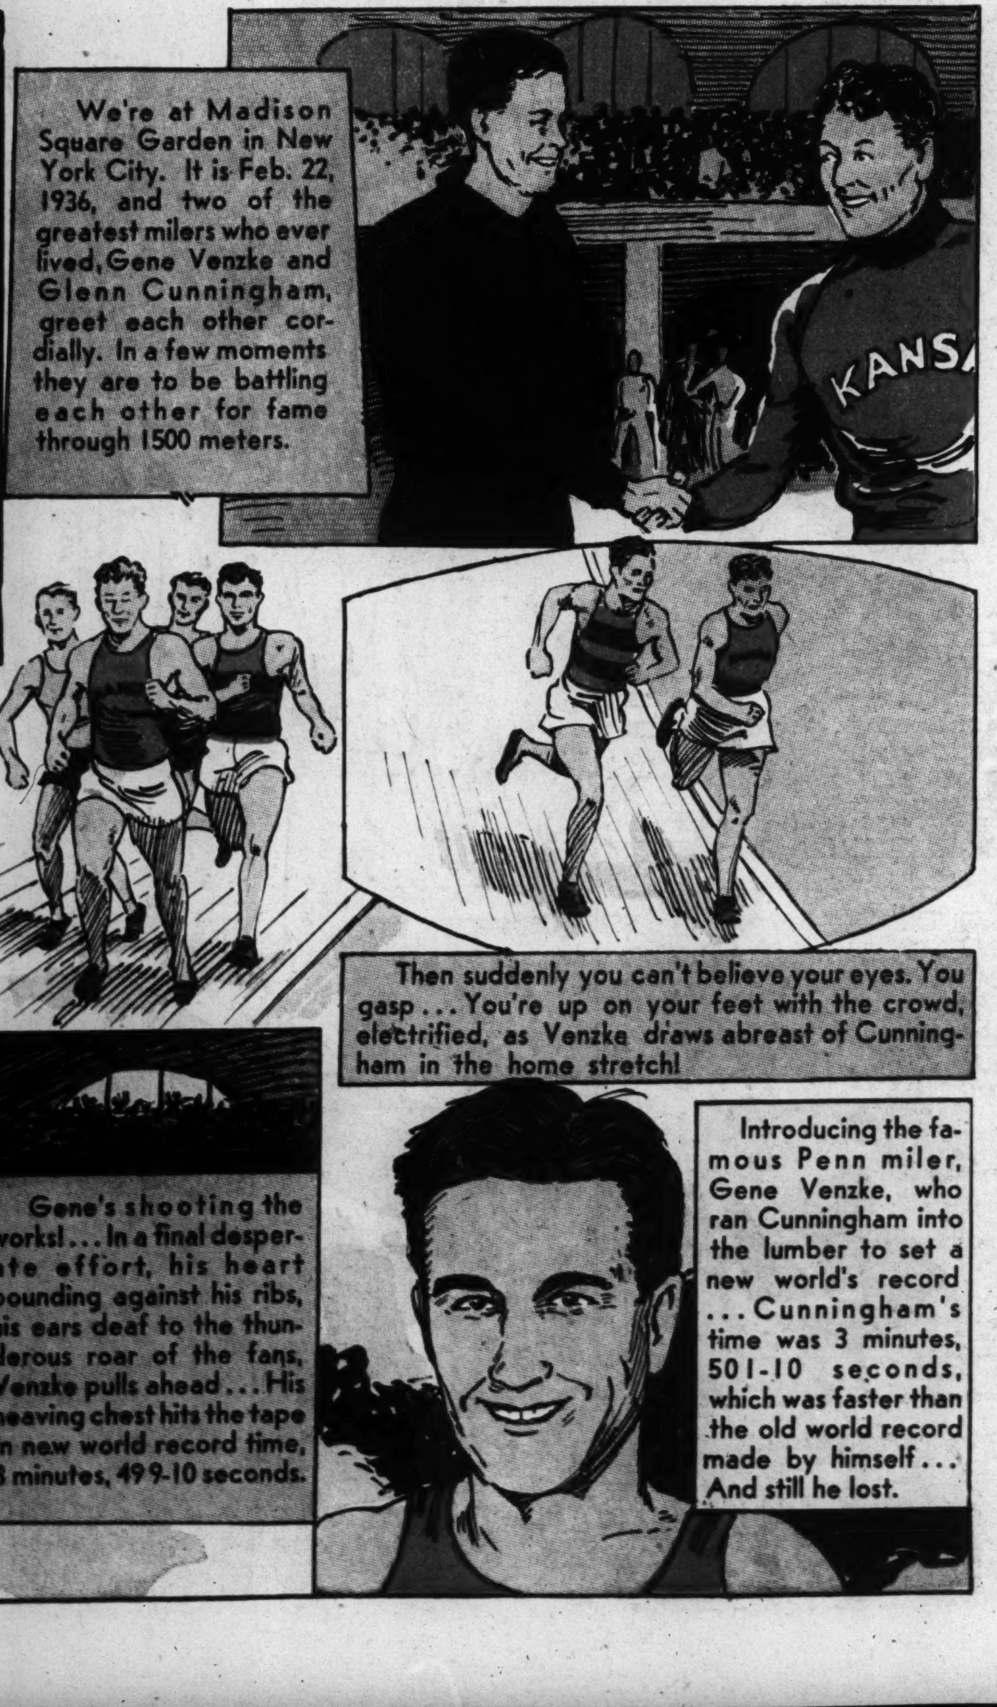
THEY'RE STILL TALKING

About The Man Who Broke A World's Record And Lost!



We're at Madison Square Garden in New York City. It is Feb. 22, 1936, and two of the greatest milers who ever lived, Gene Venzke and Glenn Cunningham, greet each other cordially. In a few moments they are to be battling each other for fame through 1500 meters.

Cunningham has set one world's record. Can he better it? A strong hint of what may happen comes home to you as they pound through the first quarter of the race in 59 seconds!

Then suddenly you can't believe your eyes. You gasp . . . You're up on your feet with the crowd, electrified, as Venzke draws abreast of Cunningham in the home stretch!

Gene's shooting the works! . . . In a final desperate effort, his heart pounding against his ribs, his ears deaf to the thunderous roar of the fans, Venzke pulls ahead . . . His heaving chest hits the tape in new world record time, 3 minutes, 49 9-10 seconds.

Introducing the famous Penn miler, Gene Venzke, who ran Cunningham into the lumber to set a new world's record . . . Cunningham's time was 3 minutes, 50 1-10 seconds, which was faster than the old world record made by himself . . . And still he lost.

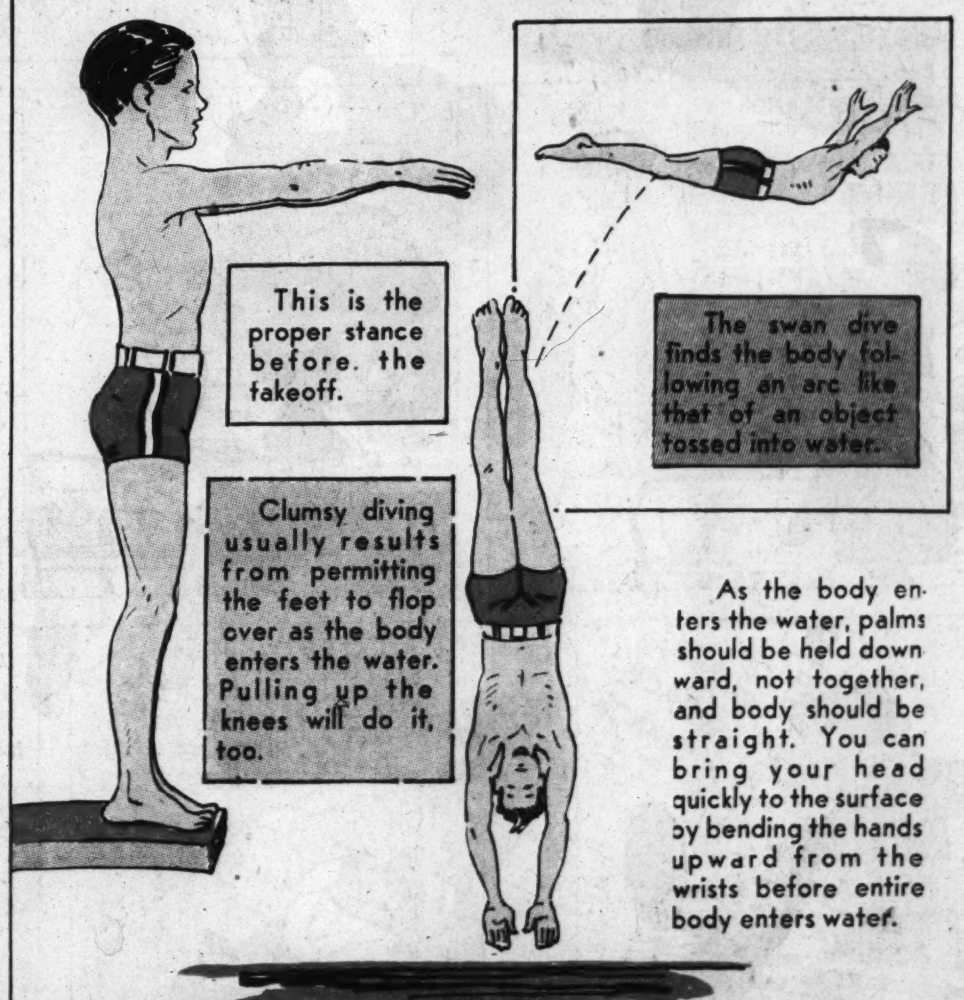
DIVING



This is the proper stance before. the takeoff.

The swan dive finds the body following an arc like that of an object tossed into water.

Clumsy diving usually results from permitting the feet to flop over as the body enters the water. Pulling up the knees will do it, too.

As the body enters the water, palms should be held downward, not together, and body should be straight. You can bring your head quickly to the surface by bending the hands upward from the wrists before entire body enters water.

DON'T LET ADOLESCENT PIMPLES KEEP YOU FROM MAKING FRIENDS

GOOD TIMES can be sadly hampered by a pimply skin. Yet many young people have to fight this trouble after the start of adolescence—from about 13 to 25, or longer.

During this period, important glands develop and final growth takes place. The entire system is disturbed. The skin, in particular, gets extremely sensitive. Waste poisons in the blood irritate this sensitive skin and unsightly pimples break out.

But adolescent pimples can be corrected. Fleischmann's Yeast clears these skin irritants out of the blood. Then, with the cause removed, the pimples go!

Eat 3 cakes of Fleischmann's fresh Yeast daily—one cake about ½ hour before each meal. Eat it plain, or dissolved in a little water until your skin is entirely clear. Start today!
